Your bedded hairs, like life in excruciations,
Start up, and stand an end. O gentle son,
Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper
Sprinkle cool patience. Whereon do you look?

Ham. On him, on him! Look you, how pale he glares!

His form and cause conjoin'd, preaching to stones,

Would make them capable. Do not look upon
me;

Lest with this piteous action you convert
My stern effects: then what I have to do Will want true colour; tears perchance for blood.

Queen. To whom do you speak this?

Ham. Do you see nothing there?

Queen. Nothing at all; yet all that I see.

Ham. Nor did you nothing hear?

Queen. No, nothing but ourselves.

Ham. Why, look you there! look, how it steals away!

My father, in his habit as he lived!

Look, where he goes, even now, out at the portal!

Queen. This is the very coinage of your brain:

This bodiless creation ecstasy
Is very cunning in.

Ham. Ecstasy!

My pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep
time,

And makes as healthful music: it is not madness

That I have utter'd: bring me to the test,
And I the matter will re-word; which madness Would gambol from. Mother, for love of grace,

Lay not that flattering unction to your soul,
That not your trespass, but my madness speaks:
It will but skin and film the ulcerous place,
Whiles rank corruption, mining all within,
Infects unseen. Confess yourself to heaven;
Repent what's past; avoid what is to come;
And do not spread the compost on the weeds,
To make them ranker. Forgive me this my virtue;

For in the fatness of these purpy times
Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg,
Yea, curb and woo for leave to do him good.

Queen. O Hamlet, thou hast cleft my heart in twain.

Ham. O, throw away the worner part of it,
And live the purer with the other half.
Good night: but go not to mine uncle's bed;
Assume a virtue, if you have it not.

That monster, custom, who all senses doth eat,
Of habits devil, is angel yet in this,

That to the use of actions fair and good
He likewise gives a frock or livery,
That pretty is put on. Refrain to-night,
And that shall lend a kind of easiness
To the next abstinence: the next more easy;

For use almost can change the stamp of nature,
And either ... the devil, or throw him out

With wondrous potency. Once more, good night;

And when you are desirous to be bless'd,
I'll blessing beg of you. For this same lord,
[Pointing to Polonius.]

I do repent: but heaven hath pleased it so,
To punish me with this and this with me,
That I must be their scourge and minister.
I will bestow him, and will answer well
The death I gave him. So, again, good night.
I must be cruel, only to be kind:
Thus bad begins and worse remains behind.
One word more, good lady.

Queen. What shall I do? 180

Ham. Not this, by no means, that I bid
you do:

Let the blis't king tempt you again to bed;
Pinch wanton on your cheek; call you his mouse;

And let him, for a pair of reechy kisses,
Or paddling in your neck with his damn'd fingers,

Make you to ravel all this matter out,
That I essentially am not in madness,
But mad in craft. 'Twere good you let him
know;

For who, that's but a queen, fair, sober, wise,
Would from a paddock, from a bat, a gh, 190 such dear concernings hide? who would do so?

So, in despite of sense and secrecy,
Unpeg the basket on the house's top,
Let the birds fly, and, like the famous ape,
To try conclusions, in the basket creep,
And break your own neck down.

Queen. Be thou assured, if words be made of breath,

And breath of life, I have no life to breathe
What thou hast said to me.

Ham. I must to England; you know that?

Queen. Alack, 200

I had forgot: 'tis so concluded on.

Ham. There's letters seal'd: and my two schoolfellows,

Whom I will trust as I will adders fang'd,
They bear the mandate; they must sweep my
way,

And marshal me to knavery. Let it work;
For 'tis the sport to have the engineer

Holst with his own petar: and 't shall go hard
But I will delve one yard below their mines,

And blow them at the moon: O, 'tis most sweet,
When in one line two crafts directly meet. 210

This man shall set me packing:
I'll lug the guts into the neighbour room.

Mother, good night. Indeed this counsellor
Is now most still, most secret and most grave,

Who was in life a foolish prating knave.
Come, sir, to draw toward an end with you.

Good night, mother.

[Exeunt severally; Hamlet dragging in Polonius.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I. A room in the castle.

Enter KING, QUEEN, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. There's matter in these sighs, these profound heaves:

You must translate: 'tis fit we understand
them.

Where is your son?

Queen. Bestow this place on us a little while.

[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.]

Ah, mine own lord, what have I seen to-night!

King. What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet?

Queen. Mad as the sea and wind, when both contend

Which is the mightier: in his lawless fit,
Behind the arras hearing something stir,

Whips out his rapier, cries, 'A rat, a rat!' 20

And, in this brainish apprehension, kills
The unseen good old man.

King. O heavy deed!

't had been so with us, had we been there:

'His liberty is full of threats to all;

To you yourself, to us, to every one.

Alas, how shall this bloody deed be answer'd!

It will be laid to us, whose providence

Should have kept short, restrain'd and out of haunt,

This mad young man: but so much was our love,

We would not understand what was most fit;

But, like the owner of a foul disease, 21

To keep it from divulging, let it feed
Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone?

Queen. To draw apart the body he hath

kill'd:

O'er whom his very madness, like some ore

Among a mineral of metals base,

Shows itself pure; he weeps for what is done.

King. O Gertrude, come away!

The sun no sooner shall the mountains touch

But we will ship him hence: and this vile

deed 30

We must, with all our majesty and skill,

Both countenance and excuse. Ho, Guilden-stern!

Re-enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Friends both, go join you with some farther aid:

Hamlet in madness hath Polonius slain,

And from his mother's closet hath he dragg'd

him:

Go seek him out; speak fair, and bring the body

Into the chapel. I pray you, haste in this.

[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.]

Come, Gertrude, we'll call up our wisest friends;

And let them know, both what we mean to do,

And what's untimely done. 40

Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter,

As level as the cannon to his blank,

Transports his poison'd shot, may miss our

name.

And hit the woundless air. O, come away!

My soul is full of discord and dismay. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Another room in the castle.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Safely stowed.

Ros. [Within] Hamlet! Lord Hamlet!

Guild. [Within] Hamlet! Lord Hamlet!

Ham. But soft, what noise? who calls on Hamlet? O, here they come.

Enter ROSENCRANTS and GUILDENSTERN.

Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body?

Ham. Compounded it with dust, whereto 'tis kin.

Ros. Tell us where 'tis, that we may take it thence
And bear it to the chapel.

Ham. Do not believe it.

Ros. Believe what?

Ham. That I can keep your counsel and not mine own. Besides, to be demanded of a sponge! what replication should be made by the son of a king!

Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord?

Ham. Ay, sir, that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end; he keeps them, like an ape, in the corner of his jaw; first mouthed, to be last swallowed: when he needs what you have gleaned, it is but squeezing you, and, sponge, you shall be dry again.

Ros. I understand you not, my lord.

Ham. I am glad of it: a knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.

Ros. My lord, you must tell us where the body is, and go with us to the king.

Ham. The body is with the king, but the king is not with the body. The king is a thing—

Guil. A thing, my lord!

Ham. Of nothing: bring me to him. Hide fox, and all after. [Exit.

SCENE III. Another room in the castle.

Enter KING, attended.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body.

How dangerous is it that this man goes loose! Yet must not we put the strong law on him: He's loved of the distracted multitude, Who like not in their judgement, but their eyes;

And where 'tis so, the offender's scourge is weigh'd,

But never the offence. To bear all smooth and even,

This sudden sending him away must seem Deliberate pause: diseases desperate grown By desperate appliance are relieved, 10
Or not at all.

Enter ROSENCRANTS.

How now! what hath befall'n?

Ros. Where the dead body is bestow'd, my lord,

We cannot get from him.

King. But where is he?

Ros. Without, my lord; guarded, to know your pleasure.

King. Bring him before us.

Ros. Ho, Guildenstern! bring in my lord.

Enter HAMLET and GUILDENSTERN.

King. Now, Hamlet, where's Polonius?

Ham. At supper.

King. At supper! where?

Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten: a certain convocation of politic worms are e'en at him. Your worm is your only emperor for diet: we fat all creatures else to fat us, and we fat ourselves for maggots: your fat king and your lean beggar is but variable service, two dishes, but to one table: that's the end.

King. Alas, alas!

Ham. A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king, and eat of the 10 fed of that worm.

King. What dost thou mean by this?

Ham. Nothing but to show you how a king may go a progress through the guts of a beggar.

King. Where is Polonius?

Ham. In heaven; send thither to see: if your messenger find him not there, seek him i' the other place yourself. But indeed, if you find him not within this month, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the lobby.

King. Go seek him there. 40

Ham. He will stay till you come. [To some Attendants.

[Exit Attendants.]

King. Hamlet, this deed, for thine especial safety,—

Which we do tender, as we dearly grieve For that which thou hast done,—must send thee hence

With fiery quickness: therefore prepare thyself;

The bark is ready, and the wind at help, The associates tend, and every thing is bent For England.

Ham. For England!

King. Ay, Hamlet.

Ham. Good.

King. So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes. Ham. I see a cherub that sees them. But, come; for England! Farewell, dear mother.

King. Thy loving father, Hamlet.

Ham. My mother: father and mother is man and wife; man and wife is one flesh; and so, my mother. Come, for England! [Exit.

King. Follow him at foot; tempt him with speed aboard;

Delay it not; I'll have him hence to-night: Away! for every thing is seal'd and done That else leans on the affair: pray you, make haste.

[Exit ROSENCRANTS and GUILDENSTERN.]

And, England, if my love thou hold'st at 60
aught—

As my great power thereof may give thee sense,

Since yet thy cicatrice looks raw and red After the Danish sword, and thy free awe Pays homage to us—thou may'st not coldly set

Our sovereign process; which imports at full, By letters concurring to that effect,

The present death of Hamlet. Do it, England: For like the hettle in my blood he rages,

And thou must cure me: till I know 70 his done

Exit.

SCENE IV. A plain in Denmark.

Enter FORTINBRAS, a Captain, and Soldiers, marching.

For. Go, captain, from me greet the Danish king;

Tell him that, by his license, Fortinbras
Craves the conveyance of a promised march
Over his kingdom. You know the rendezvous.
If that his majesty would aught with us,
We shall express our duty in his eye;
And let him know so.

Cap.

I will do 't, my lord.

For. Go softly on.

[Exeunt Fortinbras and Soldiers.]

Enter HAMLET, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDEN-STERN, and others.

Ham. Good sir, whose powers are these?

Cap. They are of Norway, sir. 10

Ham. How purposed, sir, I pray you?

Cap. Against some part of Poland.

Ham. Who commands them, sir?

Cap. The nephew to old Norway, Fortinbras.

Ham. Goes it against the main of Poland,
sir,

Or for some frontier?

Cap. Truly to speak, and with no addition,
We go to gain a little patch of ground
That hath in it no profit but the name.
To pay five ducats, five, I would not farm it; 20
Nor will it yield to Norway or the Pole
A ranker rate, should it be sold in fee.

Ham. Why, then the Polack never will defend it.

Cap. Yes, it is already garrison'd.

Ham. Two thousand souls and twenty thousand ducats

Will not debate the question of this straw:

This is the imposthume of much wealth and peace,

That inward breaks, and shows no cause without

Why the man dies. I humbly thank you, sir.

Cap. God be wi' you, sir. [Exit.]

Ros. Will't please you go, my lord? 30

Ham. I'll be with you straight. Go a little before. [Exeunt all except Hamlet.]

How all occasions do inform against me,
And spur my dull revenge! What is a man,

If his chief good and market of his time

Be but to sleep and feed? a beast, no more.

Sure, he that made us with such large discourse,
Looking before and after, gave us not

That capability and god-like reason

To fast in us unused. Now, whether it be

Bestial oblivion, or some craven scruple 40

Of thinking too precisely on the event,
A thought which, quarter'd, hath but one part wisdom

And ever three parts coward, I do not know

Why yet I live to say 'This thing's to do:'

Sith I have cause and will and strength a means

To do 't. Examples gross as earth exhort me:

Witness this army of such mass and charge

Led by a delicate and tender prince,

Whose spirit with divine ambition puff'd

Makes mouths at the invisible event, 30

Exposing what is mortal and unsure

To all that fortune, death and danger dare,

Even for an egg-shell. Rightly to be great

's not to stir without great argument,

But greatly to find quarrel in a straw

When honour 's at the stake. How stand I then,

That have a father kill'd, a mother stain'd,

Excitements of my reason and my blood,

And let all sleep? while, to my shame, I see

The imminent death of twenty thousand men,

That, for a fantasy and trick of fame, 61

Go to their graves like beds, fight for a plot

Whereon the numbers cannot try the cause,

Which is not tomb enough and continent

To hide the slain! O, from this time forth,

My thoughts be bloody, or be nothing worth!

[Exit.]

SCENE V. Elsinore. A room in the castle.

Enter QUEEN, HORATIO, and a Gentleman.

Queen. I will not speak with her.

Gent. She is importunate, indeed distract:

Her mood will needs be pitied.

Queen. What would she have?

Gent. She speaks much of her father; says she hears

There 's tricks i' the world; and hems, and beats her heart;

Spurns enviously at straws; speaks things in doubt,

That carry but half sense; her speech is nothing,

Yet the unshaped use of it doth move
The hearers to collection; they aim at it,

And botch the words up fit to their own thoughts; 20

Which, as her winks, and nods, and gestures yield them,

Indeed would make one think there might be thought.

Though nothing sure, yet much unhappily.

Hor. 'Twere good she were spoken with:
for she may strew

Dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding minds.

Queen. Let her come in. [Exit Horatio.]

To my sick soul, as sin's true nature is,

Each toy seems prologue to some great amiss:

So full of artless jealousy is guilt,

It spills itself in fearing to be split. 30

Re-enter HORATIO, with OPHELIA.

Oph. Where is the beauteous majesty of Denmark?

Queen. How now, Ophelia!

Oph. [Sings] How should I your true love
know

From another one?

By his cockle hat and staff,

And his sandal shoon.

Queen. Alas, sweet lady, what imports this song?

Oph. Say you? nay, pray you, mark.

[Sings] He is dead and gone, lady,

He is dead and gone;

At his head a grass-green turf,

At his heels a stone.

May, but, Ophelia,—

Oph. Pray you, mark.
[Sings] Within his shroud as the mountain snow,—

Enter King.

Queen. Alas, look here, my lord.

Oph. [Sings] Larded with sweet flowers;
Which beset to the grave did go
With true-love showers.

King. How do you, pretty lady? 40

Oph. Well, God 'ild you! They say the owl was a baker's daughter. Lord, we know what we are, but know not what we may be.
God be at your table!

King. Conceit upon her father.

Oph. Pray you, let's have no words of this;
but when they ask you what it means, say you
this:

[Sings] To-morrow is Saint Valentine's day,
All in the morning betime,
And I a maid at your window, 50
To be your Valentine.
Then up he rose, and down'd his clothes,
And dupp'd the chamber door;
Let in the maid, that out a maid
Never departed more.

King. Pretty Ophelia!

Oph. Indeed, la, without an oath, I'll make an end on't:

[Sings] By Gis and by Saint Charity,
Alack, and fie for shame! 60
Young men will do't, if they come to't;
By cock, they are to blame.
Quoth she, before you tumbled me,
You promised me to wed.

So would I ha' done, by yonder sun,
An thou hadst not come to my bed.

King. How long hath she been thus?

Oph. I hope all will be well. We must be patient: but I cannot choose but weep, to think they should lay him i' the cold ground. My brother shall know of it: and so I thank you for your good-counsel. Come, my coach! Good night, ladies; good night, sweet ladies; good night, good night. [Exit.]

King. Follow her close; give her good watch, I pray you. [Exit Horatio.
O, this is the poison of deep grief; it springs
All from her father's death. O Gertrude,
Gertrude,

When sorrows come, they come not single spies,
But in battalions. First, her father slain:
Next, your son gone; and he most violent author. 80

Of his own just remove: the people muddled, Thick and unwholesome in their thoughts and whispers.

For good Polonius' death; and we have done
but greenly,

In hanger-murders to inter him: poor Ophelia
Divided from herself and her fair judgement,
Without the which we are pictures, or mere beasts:

Look and see such containing as all these,
How much more in secret come from France;
Do you not see his wonder, keeps himself in clouds,
And will not sunshin to infect his ear 90

With pestilent speeches of his father's death;
Wherein necessity, of matter beggar'd,
Will nothing stick our person to arraign
In ear and ear. O my dear Gertrude, this,
Like to a murdering-piece, in many places
Gives me superfluous death. [A noise within.]

Queen.

King. Alack, what noise is this!
Where are my Switzers? Let them guard the door.

Enter another Gentleman.

What is the matter?

Gent.

Save yourself, my lord:
The ocean, overpeering of his list,
Eats not the flats with more impetuous haste
Than young Laertes, in a riotous head, 101
O'erbears your officers. The rabble call him
lord;

And, as the world were now but to begin,
Antiquity forgot, custom not known,
The radders and props of every word,
They cry 'Choose we: Laertes shall be king!'
Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds:

'Laertes shall be king, Laertes king!'

Queen. How cheerfully on the false trail they cry!

O, this is counter, you false Danish dogs! 110
King. The doors are broke. [Noise within.]

Enter LAERTES, armed; Danes following.

Laer. Where is this king? Sirs, stand you all without.

Danes. No, let's come in.

Laer. I pray you, give me leave.

Danes. We will, we will.

[They retire without the door.]
Laer. I thank you: keep the door. O thou vile king,

Give me my father!

Queen.

Calmly, good Laertes.
Laer. That drop of blood that's calm proclaims me bastard,

Cries cuckold to my father, brands the harlot
Even here, between the chaste unmarried brow
Of my true mother.

King. What is the cause, Laertes, 120
That thy rebellion looks so giant-like?
Let him go, Gertrude; do not fear our person:
There's such divinity doth hedge a king,
That treason can but peep to what it would,
Acts little of his will. Tell me, Laertes,
Why thou art thus incensed. Let him go,
Gertrude.

Speak, man.

Laer. Where is my father?

King.

Dead.

Queen.

But not by him.

King. Let him demand his fill.

Laer. How came he dead? I'll not be juggled with:
To hell, allegiance! vows, to the blackest devil!
Conscience and grace, to the profoundest pit!
I dare damnation. To this point I stand,
That both the worlds I give to negligence:
Let come what comes; only I'll be revenged
Most thoroughly for my father.

King.

Who shall stay you?

Laer. My will, not all the world:
And for my means, I'll husband them so well,
They shall go far with little.

King. Good Laertes,
If you desire to know the certainty
Of your dear father's death, is't writ in your revenge,

That, swoopstake, you will draw both friend and foe,
Winner and loser?

Laer. None but his enemies.

King. Will you know them then?

Laer. To his good friends thus wide I'll ope
my arms;
And like the kind life-rendering pelican,
Repast them with my blood.

King. Why, now you speak
Like a good child and a true gentleman.
That I am guiltless of your father's death,
And am most sensibly in grief for it,
It shall as level to your judgement pierce
As day does to your eye.

Danes. [Within] Let her come in.

Laer. How now! what noise is that!

Re-enter OPHELIA.

O heat, dry up my brains! tears seven times
salt,

Burn out the sense and virtue of mine eye!
By heaven, thy madness shall be paid with weight,

Till our scale turn the beam. O rose of May!
Dear maid, kind sister, sweet Ophelia!
O heavens! is't possible, a young maid's wits
Should be as mortal as an old man's life? 150
Nature is fine in love, and where's his fine,
It sends some precious instance of itself
After the thing it loves.

Ophe. [Sings]

They bore him barefaced on the bier;

Hey non ponny, nonny, hey nonny;

And in his grave rain'd many a tear:-

Fare you well, my dove!

Laer. Hast thou thy wits, and didst persuade revenge,

It could not move thus.

Ophe. [Sings] You must sing a-down a-down,

An you call him a-down-a. 171

O, how the wheel becomes it! It is the false steward, that stole his master's daughter.

Laer. This nothing's more than matter.

Ophe. There's rosemary, that's for remembrance; pray, love, remember: and there is pansies, that's for thoughts.

Laer. A document in madness, thoughts and remembrance fitted. 179

Ophe. There's fennel for you, and columbines: there's rue for you; and here's some for me: we may call it herb-grace o' Sundays:
O, you must wear your rue with a difference.
There's a daisy: I would give you some violets, but they withered all when my father died they say, he made a good swart Robin is all my joy, affliction, passion, hell

Hamlet.

She turns to favour and to prettiness.

Ophe. [Sings] And will he not come again? 190

And will he not come again?

No, no, he is dead:

Go to thy death-bed:

He never will come again.

His beard was as white as snow,

All fix'd was his poll:

He is gone, he is gone,

And we cast away moan:

God ha' mercy on his soul!

And of all Christian souls, I pray God. God be wi' ye. [Exit.]

Laer. Do you see this, O God?

King. Laertes, I must commune with your grief.

Or you deny me right. Go but apart,
Make choice of whom your wisest friends you
will,

And they shall hear and judge 'twixt you and
me;

If by direct or by collateral hand
They find us touch'd, we will our kingdom give,
Our crown, our life, and all that we call ours,

To you in satisfaction; but if not,
Be you content to lend your patience to us,

And we shall jointly labour with your soul
To give it due content.

Laer. Let this be so;
His means of death, his obscure funeral—
No trophy, sword, nor hatchment o'er his bones,
No noble rite nor formal ostentation—

Cry to be heard, as 'twere from heaven to earth,
That I must call't in question.

King. So you shall;
And where the offence is let the great axe fall.

I pray you, go with me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. Another room in the castle.

Enter HORATIO and a Servant.

Hor. What are they that would speak with
me?

Serv. Sailors, sir: they say they have letters for you.

Hor. Let them come in. [Exit Servant.]

I do not know from what part of the world
I should be greeted, if not from lord Hamlet.

Enter Sailors.

First Sail. God bless you, sir.

Hor. Let him bless thee too.

First Sail. He shall, sir, an't please him.
There's a letter for you, sir: it comes from the ambassador that was bound for England; if your name be Hamlet, as I am set to know it is.

Hor. [Reads] 'Horatio, when thou shalt have overlooked this, give these fellows some means to the king: they have letters for him.
Ere we were two days old at sea, a pirate of very warlike appointment gave us chase. Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compell'd valour, and in the grapple I boarded them: on the instant they got clear of our ship;
so I alone became their prisoner. They have dealt with me like thieves of mercy: but they knew what they did: I am to do a good turn for them. Let the king have the letters I have sent; and repair thou to me with as much speed as thou wouldst fly death. I have words to speak in thine ear will make thee dumb; yet are they much too light for the bore of the matter. These good fellows will bring thee where I am. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern hold their course for England: of them I have much to tell thee. Farewell.

He that thou knowest thine, HAMLET.
Come, I will make you way for these your letters;

And do'th the speedier, that you may direct me To him from whom you brought them.

[Exit.

SCENE VII. Another room in the castle.

Enter KING and LAERTES.

King. Now must your conscience my acquittance seal,
And you must put me in your heart for friend,
Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear,
That he which hath your noble father slain
Pursued his life.

Laer. It well appears: but tell me
Why you proceeded not against these feats,
So criminal and so capital in nature,
As by your safety, wisdom, all things else,
You mainly were stirr'd up.

King. O, for two special reasons;
Which may to you, perhaps, seem much un-sinew'd,

But yet to me they are strong. The queen his mother

Lives almost by his looks; and for myself—
My virtue or my plague, be it either which—
She's so conjunctive to my life and soul,
That, as the star moves not but in his sphere,
I could not but by her. The other motive,
Why to a public count I might not go,
Is the great love the general gender bear him;
Who, dipping all his faults in their affection,
Would, like the spring that turneth wood to stone,

Convert his gyves to graces; so that my arrows,
Too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind,
Would have reverted to my bow again,
And not where I had aim'd them.

Laer. And so have I a noble father lost;
A sister driven into desperate terms,
Whose worth, if praises may go back again,
Stood challenger on mount of all the age
For her perfections: but my revenge will come.

King. Break not your sleeps for that: you must not think

That we ate made of stuff so flat and dull
That we can let our beard be shook with danger

And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear
more:

I loved your father, and we love ourselves;
And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine—

Enter a Messenger.

How now! what news!

Mess. Letters, my lord, from Hamlet:
That he your majesty; this to the queen.

King. From Hamlet! who brought them?

Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say; I saw them not:

They were given me by Olandio; he received
them

Of him that brought them.

King. Laertes, you shall hear them.
Leave us.

[Exit Messenger.
[Reads] 'High and mighty, You shall know
I am set naked on your kingdom. To-morrow shall I beg leave to see your kingly eyes: when I shall, first asking your pardon thereunto, recount the occasion of my sudden and more strange return.'

'HAMLET.'

What should this mean? Are all the rest come back?

Or is it some abuse, and no such thing?

Laer. Know you the hand?

King. 'Tis Hamlet's character. 'Naked!'
And in a postscript here, he says 'alone.'
Can you advise me?

Laer. I'm lost in it, my lord. But let him
come;

It warms the very sickness in my heart,
That I shall live and tell him to his teeth,
'Thus didst thou.'

King. If it be so, Laertes—
As how should it be so! how otherwise!—
Will you be ruled by me?

Laer. Ay, my lord;

So you will not o'errule me to a peace.

King. To thine own peace. If he be now
return'd,

As checking at his voyage, and that he means
No more to undertake it, I will work him
To an exploit, now ripe in my device,
Under the which he shall not choose but fall:
And for his death no wind of blame shall breathe.

But even his mother shall uncharge the practice
And call it accident.

Laer. My lord, I will be ruled;
The rather, if you could devise it so
That I might be the organ.

King. It falls right.
You have been talk'd of since your travel much,
And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality Wherein, they say, you shine: your sum of parts

Did not together pluck such envy from him
As did that one, and that, in my regard,
Of the unworthiest piece.

Laer. What part is that, my lord?

King. A very riband in the cap of youth,
Yet needful too; for youth no less becomes
The light and careless livery that it wears
Than settled age his sables and his weeds, Importing health and graveness. Two months since,

Here was a gentleman of Normandy:—
I've seen myself, and served against the French.
And they can well on horseback: but this gallant

Had witchcraft in't; he grew unto his seat;
And to such wondrous doing brought his horse,
As had he been incorporated and demi-natured
With the brave beast: so far he topp'd my thought,

That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks,
Come short of what he did.

Laer. A Norman was't!

King. A Norman.

Laer. Upon my life, Lamond.

King. The very same.

Laer. I know him well: he is the brooch indeed
And gem of all the nation.

King. He made confession of you,
And gave you such a masterly report
For art and exercise in your defence
And for your rapier most especial,
That he cried out, 'twould be a sight indeed,
If one could match you: the scrimers of their nation,

He swore, had neither motion, guard, nor eye,
If you opposed them. Sir, this report of his
Did Hamlet so envenom with his envy
That he could nothing do but wish and beg
Your sudden coming o'er, to play with him.
Now, out of this,—

Laer. What out of this, my lord?

King. Laertes, was your father dear to you?
Or are you like the painting of a sorrow,
A face without a heart?

Laer. Why ask you this?

King. Not that I think you did not love your father;

But that I know love is begun by time;
And that I see, in passages of proof,
Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.
There lives within the very flame of love
A kind of wick or snuff that will abate it;
And nothing is at a like goodness still;
For goodness, growing to a pluriy,
Dies in his own too much: that we would do,
We should do when we would; for this 'would'
changes

And hath abatements and delays as many
As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents;
And then this 'should' is like a spendthrift sigh,
That hurts by easing. But, to the quick o' the ulcer:—

Hamlet comes back: what would you undertake,
To show yourself your father's son in deed
More than in words?

Laer. To cut his throat i' the church.

King. No place, indeed, should murder sanctuarize;

Revenge should have no bounds. But, good

Laertes,
Will you do this, keep close within your chamber.

Hamlet return'd shall know you are come home:

We'll put on those shall praise your excellence
And set a double varnish on the fame
The Frenchman gave you, bring you in fine together

And wager on your heads: he, being remiss,
Most generous and free from all contriving,
Will not peruse the foil; so that, with ease,
Or with a little shuffling, you may choose
A sword unbated, and in a pass of practice
Require him for your father.

Laer. I will do't.

And, for that purpose, I'll anoint my sword.

bought an unction of a mountebank,
So mortal that, but dip a knife in it,
Where it draws blood no cataplasm so rare,
Collected from all simples that have virtue Under the moon, can save the thing from death.

That is but scratch'd withal: I'll touch my point
With this contagion, that, if I gall him slightly,
It may be death.

King. Let's further think of this;
Weigh what convenience both of time and means

May fit us to our shape: if this should fail,
And that our drift look through our bad performance,

'Twere better not assay'd: therefore this project
Should have a back or second, that might hold,
If this should blast in proof. Soft! let me see:
We'll make a solemn wager on your cunning:
I ha't:

When in your motion you are hot and dry—
As make your bouts more violent to that end—
And that he calls for drink, I'll have prepared
him
A chalice for the nonce, whereon but sipping,
If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck,
Our purpose may hold there.

Enter QUEEN.

How now, sweet queen!

Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel,

So fast they follow: your sister's drown'd, Laertes.

Laer. Drown'd! O, where?

Queen. There is a willow grows salant a brook,

That shows his hoar leaves in the glassy stream;
There with fantastic garlands did she come
Of crow-flowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples

That liberal shepherds give a grosser name,
But our cold maids do dead men's fingers call
them:

There, on the pendent boughs her coronet weeds
Clambering to hang, an envious siver broke;
When down her weedy trophies and herself Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide;

And, mermaid-like, awhile they bore her up;
Which time she chanted snatches of old tunes;
As one incapable of her own distress,
Or like a creature native and indued
Unto that element: but long it could not be Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,
Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay
To muddy death.

Laer. Alas, then, she is drown'd!

Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.

Laer. Too much of water hast thou, poor
And therefore I forbid my tears: but yet
It is our trick; nature her custom holds.
Let shame say what it will: when these are
gone,

The woman will be out. Adieu, my lord: I have a speech of fire, that faint would blaze, But that this folly dunts it. [Exit.]

Ham. Let's follow, Gertrude: How much I had to do to calm his rage! Now fear I this will give it start again;— Therefore let's follow.

ACT V.

SCENE I. A churchyard.

Enter two Clowns, with spades, &c.

First Clo. Is she to be buried in Christian burial that wiffully seeks her own salvation?

Sec. Clo. I tell thee she is; and therefore make her grave straight: the crowner hath sat on her, and finds it Christian burial.

First Clo. How can that be, unless she drowned herself in her own defence?

Sec. Clo. Why, tis found so.

First Clo. It must be 'se offendendo': it cannot be else. For here lies the point: if I drown myself wittingly, it argues an act: and an act hath three branches; it is, to act, to do, and to perform: argal, she drowned herself wittingly.

Sec. Clo. Nay, but hear you, Goodman deliver—

First Clo. Give me leave. Here lies the water; good: here stands the man; good: if the man go to this water, and drown himself, it is, will he, nill he, he goes,—mark you that; but if the water come to him and drown him, he drowns not himself: argal, he that is not guilty of his own death shortens not his own life.

Sec. Clo. But is this law?

First Clo. Ay, marry, is't; crowner's quest law.

Sec. Clo. Will you ha' the truth on't? If this had not been a gentlewoman, she should have been buried out o' Christian burial.

First Clo. Why, there thou say'st: and the more pity that great folk should have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves, more than their even Christian. Come, my spade. There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditchers, and grave-makers: they hold up Adam's profession.

Sec. Clo. Was he a gentleman?

First Clo. A' was the first that ever bore arms.

Sec. Clo. Why, he had none.

First Clo. What, art a heathen? How dost thou understand the Scripture? The Scripture says 'Adam digged': could he dig without arms? I'll put another question to thee: if thou answer me not to the purpose, confess thyself.

Sec. Clo. Go to.

First Clo. What is he that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?

Sec. Clo. The gallows-maker: for that frame supports him more than any other.

First Clo. A' is the truest of us, in good faith: the others will crack; but now does it well: it does well to those that do ill: now thou dost ill to say the gallows is built stronger than the church: argal, the gallows may do well to thee. To't again, come.

Sec. Clo. 'Who builds stronger than a mason, a shipwright, or a carpenter?'

First Clo. Ay, tell me that, and unyke.

Sec. Clo. Marry, now I can tell.

First Clo. To't.

Sec. Clo. Mass, I cannot tell.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO, at a distance.

First Clo. Oudgel thy brains no more about it, for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating; and, when you are asked this question next, say 'a grave-maker': the houses that he makes last till doomsday. Go, get thee to 'Yangham: fetch me a stoup of liquor.

[Exit Sec. Clo.]

[He digs, and sings.]

In youth, when I did love, did love,

Methought it was very sweet,

To contract, O, the time, for, ah, my behave, O, methought, there was nothing meet.

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business, that he sings at grave-making?

Hor. Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness.

Ham. 'Tis even so: the hand of little employment hath the daintier sense.

First Clo. [Sings]

But age, with this stealing step,

Hath claw'd me in his clutch,

And hath shipped me intil the land,

As if I had never been such.

[Throws up a skull.]

Ham. That skull had a tongue in it, and could sing once: how the knave jowls it to the ground, as if it were Cain's jaw-bone, that did the first murder! It might be the pate of a politician, which this ass now o'er-reaches; one that would circumvent God, might it not?

Hor. It might, my lord.

Ham. Or of a courtier; which could say 'Good morrow, sweet lord! How dost thou, good lord?' This might be my lord such-a-one, that praised my lord such-a-one's horse, when he meant to beg it; might it not?

Hor. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Why, even so: and now my Lady Worm's; chapless, and knocked about the mazard with a sexton's spade: here's fine revolution, as we had the trick to see't. Did these bones cost no more the breeding, but to play at loggerheads with 'em? mine ache to think on't. 202

First Clo. [Sings]

A pick-axe, and a spade, a spade,

For and a shrouding sheet:

O, a pit of clay for to be made

For such a guest is meet.

Ham. There's another: why may not that be the skull of a lawyer? Where be his quidities now, his quilts, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks? why does he utter this idle knave now to mock him about the bones with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery? Ham! This fellow might be in a time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his recognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries: is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt? will his vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases, and double ones too, than the length and breadth of a pair of indentures? The very conveyances of his lands will hardly lie in this box; and must the inheritor himself have no more, ha?

Hor. Not a jot more, my lord.

Ham. Is not parchment made of sheep-skins?

Hor. Ay, my lord, and of calf-skins too.

Ham. They are sheep and calves which seek out assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow. Whose grave's this, sirrah?

First Clo. Mine, sir.

[Sings] O, a pit of clay for to be made

For such a guest is meet.

Ham. I think it be thine, indeed; for thou liest in't.

First Clo. You lie out on't, sir, and therefore it is not yours: for my part, I do not lie in't, and yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou dost lie in't, to be in't and say it is thine: 'tis for the dead, not for the quick; therefore thou liest.

First Clo. 'Tis a quick lie, sir; 'twill away again, from me to you.

Ham. What man dost thou dig it for?

First Clo. For no man, sir.

Ham. What woman, then?

First Clo. For none, neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in't?

First Clo. One that was a woman, sir; but, rest her soul, she's dead.

Ham. How absolute the knave is! we must speak by the card, or equivocation will undo us. By the Lord, Horatio, these three years I have taken note of it; the age is grown so picked that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his kibe. How long hast thou been a grave-maker?

First Clo. Of all the days i' the year, I came to't that day that our last king Hamlet overcame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long is that since?

First Clo. Cannot you tell that? every fool can tell that: it was the very day that young Hamlet was born; he that is mad, and sent into England.

Ham. Ay, marry, why was he sent into England?

First Clo. Why, because he was mad: he shall recover his wits there; or, if he do not, it's no great matter there.

Ham. Why?

First Clo. 'Twill not be seen in him there: there the men are as mad as he.

Ham. How came he mad?

First Clo. Very strangely, they say.

Ham. How strangely?

First Clo. Faith, e'en with losing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground?

First Clo. Why, here in Denmark: I have seen sexton here, man and boy, thirty years.

Ham. How long will a man lie i' the earth ere he rot?

First Clo. I faith, if he be not rotten before he die—as we have many pocky corses now-a-days, that will scarce hold the laying-in—he will last you some eight year or nine year: a tanner will last you nine year.

Ham. Why he more than another?

First Clo. Why, sir, his hide is so tanned with his trade, that will keep out water a great while; and your water is a sure decayer of your whoreson dead body. Here's a skull now; this skull has lain in the earth three and twenty years.

Ham. Whose was it?

First Clo. A whoreson mad fellow's it was: whose do you think it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

First Clo. A pestilence on him for a mad rogue! a' poured a flagon of Rhenish on my head once. This same skull, sir, was Yorick's skull, the king's jester.

Ham. This!

First Clo. Een that.

Ham. Let me see. [Takes the skull.] Alas, poor Yorick! I knew him, Horatio: a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy: he hath borne me on his back a thousand times; and now, how abhorred in my imagination it is! my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips that I have kissed I know not how oft. Where be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs? your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now, to mock your own grinning? quite chap-fallen? Now get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to that favour she must come; make her laugh at that. Fie upon her, Horatio, tell me one thing.

Hor. What's that, my lord?

Ham. Dost thou think Alexander looked o' this fashion i' the earth?

Hor. Een so.

Ham. And smelt so i' pah!

[Puts down the skull.]

Hor. Een so, my lord.

Ham. To what base uses we may return, Horatio! Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bung-hole?

Hor. 'Twere to consider too curiously, to consider so.

Ham. No, faith, not a jot; but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelihood to lead it; as thus: Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returned into dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make loam; and why of that loam, whence he was converted, might they not stop a beer-bottle?

Impetuous Caesar, dead and turn'd to clay,

Might stop a hole to keep the wind away:

O, that that earth, which kept the world in awe,

Should patch a wall to expel the winter's rage!

But soft! but soft! aside: here comes the king.

Enter Priests, &c. in procession; the Clergy of OPHELIA, LAERTES and Mourners following;

KING, QUEEN, their train, &c.

The queen, the courtiers: who is this they follow?

Ham. The queen, the courtiers: who is this they follow?

And with such maimed rites! This doth be-token
 The curse they follow did with desperate hand
 Fordo it own life: 'twas of some estate.
 Cough we awhile, and mark.

[Retiring with Horatio.
Laer. What ceremony else?

Ham. That is Laertes,
 A very noble youth: mark.

Laer. What ceremony else?

First Priest. Her obsequies have been as far enlarged

As we have warranty: her death was doubtful;
 And, but that great command o'ersways the order

She should in ground unsanctified have lodged
 Till the last trumpet; for charitable prayers, Shards, flints and pebbles should be thrown on
 her:

Yet here she is allow'd her virgin crants,
 Her maiden strewments and the bringing home
 Of bell and burial.

Laer. Must there no more be done?

First Priest. No more be done:
 We should profane the service of the dead
 To sing a requiem and such rest to her
 As to peace-parted souls.

Laer. Lay her i' the earth:
 And from her fair and unpolluted flesh
 May violets spring! I tell thee, churlish priest,
 A ministering angel shall my sister be,
 When thou liest howling.

Ham. What, the fair Ophelia!

Queen. Sweets to the sweet: farewell!
 [Scattering flowers.

I hoped thou shouldst have been my Hamlet's wife;

I thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet
 maid,

And not have strew'd thy grave.

Laer. O, treble woe
 Fall ten times treble on that cursed head,
 Whose wicked deed thy most ingenious sense
 Deprived thee of! Hold off the earth awhile,
 Till I have caught her once more in mine arms:

[Leaps into the grave.
 Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead,
 Till of this flat a mountain you have made,
 To o'ertop old Pelion, or the skyish head
 Of blue Olympus.

Ham. [Advancing] What is he whose grief
 Bears such an emphasis? whose phrase of sorrow

Conjures the wandering stars, and makes them
 stand

Like wonder-wounded hearers? This is I, also Hamlet the Dane.

Laer. The devil take thy soul!

[Grappling with him.
Ham. Thou pray'st not well.

I wish, take thy fingers from my throat;
 Yet, though I am not splenitive and rash,

Yet have I something in me dangerous,
 Which let thy wisdom fear: hold off thy hand.

King. Pluck them asunder.

Queen. Hamlet, Hamlet!

All. Gentlemen,—

Hor.

Good my lord, be quiet.
 [The Attendants part them, and they come out of the grave.

Ham. Why, I will fight with him upon this theme

Until my eyelids will no longer wag.

Queen. O my son, what theme?

Ham. I loved Ophelia: forty thousand brothers

Could not, with all their quantity of love,
 Make up my sum. What wilt thou do for her?

King. O, he is mad, Laertes.

Queen. For love of God, forbear him.

Ham. 'Swounds, show me what thou'lt do:
 Woo't weep? woo't fight? woo't kiss? woo't tear thyself?

Woo't drink up eisel? eat a crocodile?
 I'll do't. Dost thou come here to whine?

To outface me with leaping in her grave?
 Be buried quick with her, and so will I:

And, if thou prate of mountains, let them throw

Millions of acres on us, till our ground,
 Singeing his pate against the burning zone,
 Make Ossa like a wart! Nay, an thou'lt

mouth,

I'll rant as well as thou.

Queen. This is mere madness:
 And thus awhile the fit will work on him;

Anon, as patient as the female dove,
 When that her golden couplets are disclosed,
 His silence will sit drooping.

Ham. Hear you, sir: 311
 What is the reason that you use me thus?

I loved you ever: but it is no matter;
 Let Hercules himself do what he may,
 The cat will mew and dog will have his day.

[Exit.
King. I pray you, good Horatio, wait upon
 him.

[Exit Horatio.
 [To Laertes] Strengthen your patience in our last night's speech;

We'll put the matter to the present push.
 Good Gertrude, set some watch over your son.

This grave shall have a living monument: 320
 An hour of quiet shortly shall we see;

Till then, in patience our proceeding be.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. A hall in the castle.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO.

Ham. So much for this, sir: now shall you see the other;

You do remember all the circumstance?

Hor. Remember it, my lord!

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fighting,

That would not let me sleep: methought I lay
 Worse than the mutines in the bilboes. Rashly,

And praised be rashness for it, let us know,
 Our indiscretion sometimes serves us well,

When our deep plots do pall: and that should teach us

There's a divinity that shapes our ends,
 Rough-hew them how we will,—

Hor. That is most certain.

Ham. Up from my cabin,

My sea-gown scarf'd about me, in the dark
 Groped I to find out them; had my desire,
 Finger'd their packet, and in fine withdrew
 To mine own room again; making so bold,
 My fears forgetting manners, to unseal
 Their grand commission; where I found,
 Horatio,—

O royal knavery!—an exact command,
 Larded with many several sorts of reasons
 Importing Denmark's health and England's too,

With, ho! such bugs and goblins in my life,
 That, on the supervise, no leisure bated,
 No, not to stay the grinding of the axe,
 My head should be struck off.

Hor. Is't possible?

Ham. Here's the commission: read it at more leisure.

But wilt thou hear me how I did proceed?

Hor. I beseech you.

Ham. Being thus be-netted round with villanies,—

Ever I could make a prologue to my brains, 30
 They had begun the play—I sat me down,
 Devis'd a new commission, wrote it fair:
 I once did hold it, as our statists do,
 A baseness to write fair and labour'd much
 How to forget that learning, but, sir, now
 It did me yeoman's service: wilt thou know
 The effect of what I wrote?

Hor. Ay, good my lord.

Ham. An earnest conjuration from the king,
 As England was his faithful tributary,
 As love between them like the palm might flourish, 40

As peace should still her wheaten garland wear
 And stand a comma 'tween their amities,
 And many such-like 'As'es of great charge,
 That, on the view and knowing of these contents,

Without debatement further, more or less,
 He should the bearers put to sudden death,
 Not shirving-time allow'd.

Hor. How was this seal'd?

Ham. Why, even in that was heaven or-dinant.

I had my father's signet in my purse,
 Which was the model of that Danish seal; 50
 I fold'd the writ up in form of the other,
 Subscribed it, gave't the impression, plac'd it safely,
 The changeling never known. Now, the next day

Was our sea-fight; and what to this was sequent

Thou know'st already.

Hor. So Guildenstern and Rosencrantz go to't.

Ham. Why, man, they did make love to this employment;

They are not near my conscience; their defeat
 Does by their own inaction grow:

'Tis dangerous when the baser nature comes so
 Between the pass and fall inclosed points
 Of mighty opposites.

Hor. Why, what a king is this!

Ham. Does it not, think'st thou, stand me now upon—

He that hath kill'd my king and whored my mother,

Popp'd in between the election and my hopes,
 Thrown out his angle for my proper life,

And with such cozenage—is't not perfect conscience,

To quit him with this arm? and is't not to be damn'd,

To let this canker of our nature come

In further evil?

Hor. It must be shortly known to him from England 70

What is the issue of the business there.

Ham. It will be short: the interim is mine;
 And a man's life's no more than a say 'Ome.'

But I am very sorry, good Horatio,

That to Laertes I forgot myself;

For, by the image of my cause, I see

The portraiture of his: I'll court his favours:

But, sure, the bravery of his grief did put me
 Into a towering passion.

Hor. Peace! who comes here? 80

Enter OSRIG.

Osr. Your lordship is right welcome back to Denmark.

Ham. I humbly thank you, sir. Dost know this water-fly?

Hor. No, my good lord.

Ham. Thy state is the more gracious; for
 'tis a vice to know him. He hath much land, and fertile: let a beast be lord of beasts, and his crib shall stand at the king's mess: 'tis a chough; but, as I say, spacious in the possession of dirt. 90

Osr. Sweet lord, if your lordship were at leisure, I should impart a thing to you from his majesty.

Ham. I will receive it, sir, with all diligence of spirit. Put your bonnet to his right use; 'tis for the head.

Osr. I thank your lordship, it is very hot.

Ham. No, believe me, 'tis very cold; the wind is northerly. 99

Osr. It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed.

Ham. But yet methinks it is very sultry and hot for my complexion.

Osr. Exceedingly, my lord; it is very sultry,— as 'twere,—I cannot tell how. But, my lord, his majesty bade me signify to you that he has laid a great wager on your head: sir, this is the matter,—

Ham. I beseech you, remember—

[Hamlet moves him to put on his hat.

Osr. Nay, good my lord; for mine ease, in good faith. Sir, here is newly come to court Laertes; believe me, an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent differences, of very soft society and great showing; indeed, to speak feelingly of him, he is the card or calendar of gentry, for you shall find in him the continence of what part a gentleman would see.

Ham. Sir, his disfigurement suffers no mention in you; though, I know, to divide him inventorially would dish the arithmetic of memory, and yet but yaw neither in respect of his quick sail. But, in the vanity of accom-plement, I take him to be a seal of great artifice;

and his infusion of such death and remorse; as, to make true action of him, his semblable in his subject; and who else would trace him, his unknown, nothing more.

Ger. Your lordship speaks most infallibly of him.

Ham. The concernancy, sir! why do we wrap the gentleman in our more raver breath?

Ger. Sir!

Hor. Is 't not possible to understand in another tongue? You will do't, sir, really.

Ham. What imports the nomination of this gentleman?

Ger. Of Laertes?

Hor. His purse is empty already; all's golden words are spent.

Ham. Of him, sir.

Ger. I know you are not ignorant—

Ham. I would you did, sir; yet, in faith, if you did, it would not much approve me. Well, sir!

Ger. You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is—

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but, to know a man well, were to know himself.

Ger. I mean, sir, for his weapon; but in the imputation laid on him by them, in his mood he's unfellowed.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Ger. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons; but, well.

Ger. The king, sir, hath wagered with him six Barbary horses: against the which he has imposed, as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards, with their assigns, as girdle, hangers, and so: three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hilts, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Hor. I knew you must be edified by the margin as you had done.

Ger. The carriages, sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would be more german to the matter, if we could carry cannon by our sides: I would it might be hangers till then. But, on: six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal-conceited carriages; that's the French bet against the Danish. Why is this 'imposed,' as you call it?

Ger. The king, sir, hath laid, that in a dozen passes between yourself and him, he shall not exceed you three hits: he hath laid on twelve for nine; and it would come to immediate trial, if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How if I answer 'no'?

Ger. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall: if it please his majesty, 'tis the breathing time of day with me; let the foils be brought, the gentleman willing, and the king hold his promise, I will win for him an I can; if not, I will quit nothing but my shame and the odd hits.

Ger. Shall I deliver you 'em so?

Ham. Tush, tush, sir; after what flourish your nature will.

Ger. I commend my duty to your lordship.

Ham. Yours, yours. [Exit Ger.] He does well to commend it himself; there are no tongues else for's turn.

Hor. This lapwing runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. He did comply with his dug, before he sucked it. Thus has he—and many more of the same breed that I know the drossy age dotes on—only got the tune of the time and outward habit of encounter; a kind of yeasty collection, which carries them through and through the most fond and winnowed opinions; and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My lord, his majesty commended him to you by young Osric, who brings back to him, that you attend him in the hall: he sends to know if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

Ham. I am constant to my purposes; they follow the king's pleasure: if his fitness speaks, mine is ready; now or whenever, provided I be so able as now.

Lord. The king and queen and all are coming down.

Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The queen desires you to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes before you fall to play.

Ham. She well instructs me. [Exit Lord.]

Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham. I do not think so; since he went into France, I have been in continual practice; I shall win at the odds. But thou wouldst not think how ill all's here about my heart: but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my lord,—

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a kind of gain-giving, as would perhaps trouble a woman.

Hor. If your mind dislike anything, obey it: I will forestall their repair hither, and say you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defy augury: there's a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now; if it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all: since no man has aught of what he leaves, what is't to leave betimes? Let be.

Enter KING, QUEEN, LAERTES, LORDS, OSRIC, and Attendants with foils, &c.

King. Come, Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me.

[The King puts Laertes' hand into Hamlet's.]

Ham. Give me your pardon, sir: I've done you wrong;

But pardon't, as you are a gentleman.

This presence knows,

And you must needs have heard, how I am punished

With sore distraction. What I have done,

That might your nature, honesty and emotion

Roughly awake, I here proclaim was murder.

Was't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes? Never I.

If Hamlet from himself be taken away,

And when he's not himself does wrong Laertes,
Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it.
Who does it, then? His madness: if't be so,
Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong'd;
His madness is poor Hamlet's enemy. 250
Sir, in this audience,

Let my disclaiming from a purposed evil
Free me so far in your most generous thoughts,
That I have shot mine arrow o'er the house,
And hurt my brother.

Laer. I am satisfied in nature,
Whose motive, in this case, should stir me most

To my revenge: but in my terms of honour
I stand aloof; and will no reconciliation,
Till by some elder masters, of known honour,
I have a voice and precedent of peace, 260
To keep my name unpured. But till that time,
I do receive your offer'd love like love,
And will not wrong it.

Ham. I embrace it freely;
And will this brother's wager frankly play.
Give us the foils. Come on.

Laer. Come, one for me.

Ham. I'll be your foil, Laertes: in mine ignorance
Your skill shall, like a star i' the darkest night,
Stick fiery off indeed.

Laer. You mock me, sir.

Ham. No, by this hand.

King. Give them the foils, young Osr.

Cousin Hamlet, 270

You know the wager!

Ham. Very well, my lord;
Your grace hath laid the odds o' the weaker side.

King. I do not fear it; I have seen you both:
But since he is better'd, we have therefore odds.

Laer. This is too heavy, let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well. These foils have all a length! [They prepare to play.]

Osr. Ay, my good lord.

King. Set me the stoups of wine upon that table.

If Hamlet give the first or second hit,
Or quit in answer of the third exchange, 280
Let all the battlements their ordnance fire;
The king shall drink to Hamlet's better breath;
And in the cup an union shall he throw,
Richer than that which four successive kings
In Denmark's crown have worn. Give me the cups;

And let the kettle to the trumpet speak,
The trumpet to the cannoneer without,
The cannons to the heavens, the heavens to earth.

'Now the king drinks to Hamlet.' Come,
begin:

And you, the judges, bear a wary eye. 290

Ham. Come on, sir.

Laer. Come, my lord. [They play.]

Ham. One.

Laer. No.

Ham. Judgement.

Osr. A hit, a very palpable hit.

Well; again.

King. Stay; give me drink. Hamlet, this pearl is thine;
Here's to thy health.

[Trumpets sound, and cannon shot off within.]

Give him the cup.

Ham. I'll play this bout first; set it by awhile.

Com. [They play.] Another hit; what say
you!

Laer. A touch, a touch, I do confess.

King. Our son shall win.

Queen. He's fat, and scant of breath.

Here, Hamlet, take my napkin, rub thy brows:

The queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet.

Ham. Good madam!

King. Gertrude, do not drink.

Queen. I will, my lord; I pray you, pardon
me.

King. [Aside] It is the poison'd cup: it is too late.

Ham. I dare not drink yet, madam; by and by.

Queen. Come, let me wipe thy face.

Laer. My lord, I'll hit him now.

King. I do not think't.

Laer. [Aside] And yet 'tis almost 'gainst
my conscience.

Ham. Come, for the third, Laertes: you but dally;

I pray you, pass with your best violence;

I am afraid you make a wanton of me. 310

Laer. Say you so! come on. [They play.]

Osr. Nothing, neither way.

Laer. Have at you now!

[Laertes wounds Hamlet; then, in scuffing, they change rapiers, and Hamlet wounds Laertes.]

King. Part them; they are incensed.

Ham. Nay, come, again. [The Queen falls.]

Osr. Look to the queen there, ho!

Hor. They bleed on both sides. How is it,
my lord?

Osr. How is't, Laertes?

Laer. Why, as a woodcock to mine own springe, Osr;

I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.

Ham. How does the queen?

King. She swoonds to see them bleed.

Queen. No, no, the drink, the drink!—O my dear Hamlet,— 320

The drink, the drink! I am poison'd. [Dies.]

Ham. O villainy! Ho! let the door be lock'd:

Treachery! Seek it out.

Laer. It is here, Hamlet: Hamlet, thou art slain;

No medicine in the world can do thee good;

In thee there is not half an hour of life:

The treacherous instrument is in thy hand,

Unbated and envenom'd: the foul practice

Hath turn'd itself on me; lo, here I lie, 330

Never to rise again: thy mother's poison'd:

I can no more: the king, the king's to blame.

Ham. The point envenom'd too!

Then, venom, to thy work. [Stabs the King.]

Alc. Treason! treason!

King. O, yet defend me, friends; I am but hurt.

Ham. Here, thou incestuous, murderous, damned Dane,
Drink off this potion. Is thy union here?
Follow my mother. [King dies.]

Laer. He is justly served;
It is a poison temper'd by himself.
Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet:
Mine and my father's death come not upon thee,
Nor thine on me! [Dies.]

Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow thee.

I am dead, Horatio. Wretched queen, adieu!
You that look pale and tremble at this chance,
That are but mutes or audience to this act,
Had I but time—as this fell sergeant, death,
Is strict in his arrest—O, I could tell you—
But let it be. Horatio, I am dead;
Thou livest; report me and my cause aright
To the unsatisfied.

Hor. Never believe it: 351
I am more an antique Roman than a Dane:

Ham. As thou'rt a man,
Give me the cup: let go; by heaven, I'll have't.
(O good Horatio, what a wounded name, Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me!)

If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart,
Absent thee from felicity awhile,
And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,
To tell my story.

[March afar off, and shot within.]
What warlike noise is this?

Cor. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland, 361
To the ambassadors of England gives
This warlike volley.

Ham. O, I die, Horatio;
The potent poison quite o'er-crows my spirit:
I cannot live to hear the news from England;
But I do prophesy the election lights
On Fortinbras: he has my dying voice;
So tell him, with the occurrents, more and less,
Which have solicited. The rest is silence. [Dies.]

Hor. Now cracks a noble heart. Good night, sweet prince; 370
And lights of angels sing thee to thy rest!
Why does the drum come hither?

[March within.]

Enter FORTINBRAS, the English Ambassadors, and others.

Fort. Where is this sight?

Hor. What is it ye would see?

If aught of woe or wonder, cease your search.
Fort. This quarry cries on havoc. O proud
death,

What feast is toward in thine eternal cell,
That thou so many princes at a shot
So bloodily hast struck!

First Amb. The night is
And our affairs from England come;
The ears are senseless that shou
hearing,

To tell him his commandment is full
That Rosencrantz and Guildenstern:
Where should we have our thanks?

Hor. Not from his mouth,
Had it the ability of life to thank you:
He never gave commandment for their death.
But since, so jump upon this bloody question,
You from the Polack wars, and you from England,

Are here arrived, give order that these bodies
High on a stage be placed to the view; 389
And let me speak to the yet unknowing world
How these things came about: so shall you hear
Of carnal, bloody, and unnatural acts,
Of accidental judgements, casual slaughters,
Of deaths put on by cunning and forced cause,
And, in this upshot, purposes mistook
Fall'n on the inventors' heads: all this can I Truly deliver.

Fort. Let us haste to hear it,
And call the noblest to the audience.
For me, with sorrow I embrace my fortune:
I have some rights of memory in this kingdom,
Which now to claim my vantage doth invite
me. 401

Hor. Of that I shall have also cause to speak,

And from his mouth whose voice will draw on
more:

But let this same be presently perform'd,
Even while men's minds are wild; lest more mischance,

On plots and errors, happen.

Fort. Let four captains
Bear Hamlet, like a soldier, to the stage;
For he was likely, had he been put on,
To have proved most royally: and, for his pa-sage,

The soldiers' music and the rites of war 410
Speak loudly for him.

Take up the bodies: such a sight as this Becomes the field, but here shows much amiss.
Go, bid the soldiers shoot.

[A dead march. Ezerunt, bearing off the dead bodies; after which a peal of ordnance is shot off.]

KING LEAR

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ

LEAR, king of Britain.
 KING OF FRANCE.
 DUKE OF BURGUNDY.
 DUKE OF CORNWALL.
 DUKE OF ALBANY.
 EARL OF KENT.
 EARL OF GLOUCESTER.
 EDGAR, son to Gloucester.
 EDMUND, bastard son to Gloucester.
 CURAN, a courtier.
 Old Man, tenant to Gloucester.
 Doctor.
 Fool.

OSWALD, steward to Goneril.
 A Captain employed by Edmund.
 Gentleman attendant on Cordelia.
 A Herald.
 Servants to Cornwall.

GONERIL,
 REGAN,
 CORDELIA, } daughters to Lear.

Knights of Lear's train, Captains, Messengers, Soldiers, and Attendants.

SCENE: Britain.

ACT I.

SCENE I. King Lear's palace.

Enter KENT, GLOUCESTER, and EDMUND.

Kent. I thought the king had more affected the Duke of Albany than Cornwall.

Glou. It did always seem so to us: but now, in the division of the kingdom, it appears not which of the dukes he values most; for equalities are so weighed, that curiosity in neither can make choice of either's moiety.

Kent. Is not this your son, my lord?

Glou. His breeding, sir, hath been at my charge: I have so often blushed to acknowledge him, that now I am brazed to it.

Kent. I cannot conceive you.

Glou. Sir, this young fellow's mother could: whereupon she grew round-wombed, and had, indeed, sir, a son for her cradle ere she had a husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault?

Kent. I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper.

Glou. But I have, sir, a son by order of law, some year older than this, who yet is no dearer in my account: though this knave came something saucily into the world before he was sent for, yet was his mother fair; there was good sport at his making, and the whoreson must be acknowledged. Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund?

Edm. No, my lord.

Glou. My lord of Kent: remember him hereafter as my honourable friend.

Edm. My services to your lordship.

Kent. I must love you, and sue to know you better.

Edm. Sir, I shall stand deserving.

Glou. He hath been out nine years, and away he shall again. The king is coming.

Sennet. Enter KING LEAR, CORNWALL, ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN, CORDELIA, and Attendants.

Lear. Attend the lords of France and Burgundy, Gloucester.

Glou. I shall, my liege.

[Exeunt Gloucester and Edmund.]

Lear. Meantime we shall express our darker purpose.

Give me the map there. Know that we have divided

In three our kingdom: and 'tis our fast intent To shake all cares and business from our age; Conferring them on younger strengths, while we ⁴¹ Unburthen'd crawl toward death. Our son of Cornwall,

And you, our no less loving son of Albany, We have this hour a constant will to publish Our daughters' several dowers, that future strife May be prevented now. The princes, France and Burgundy, Great rivals in our youngest daughter's love, Long in our court have made their amorous sojourn.

And here are to be answer'd. Tell me, my daughters,—

Since now we will divest us, both of rule, ⁵⁰ Interest of territory, cares of state,—

Which of you shall we say doth love us most? That we our largest bounty may extend:

Where nature doth with merit challenge. Goneril,

Our eldest-born, speak first.

Gon. Sir, I love you more than words can wield the matter;

Dearer than eye-sight, space, and liberty: Beyond what can be valued, rich or rare;

No less than life, with grace, health, beauty,
honour;
As much as child's'er loved, or father found;
A love that makes breath poor, and speech unable;

Beyond all manner of so much I love you.
Cor. [Aside] What shall Cordelia do? Love, and be silent.

Lear. Of all these bounds, even from this line to this,
With shadowy forests and with champains
rich'd,

With plenteous rivers and wide-skirted meads,
Wemake thee lady: to thine and Albany's issue
Be this perpetual. What says our second daughter?

Our dearest Began, wife to Cornwall? Speak.

Reg. Sir, I am made 70
Of the self-same metal that my sister is,
And prize me at her worth. In my true heart
I find she names my very deed of love;
Only she comes too short; that I profess
Myself an enemy to all other joys,
Which the most precious square of sense possesses;

And find I am alone felicitate
In your dear highness' love.

Cor. [Aside] Then poor Cordelia!
And yet not so; since, I am sure, my love's
More richer than my tongue. 80

Lear. To thee and thine hereditary ever Remain this ample third of our fair kingdom;
No less in space, validity, and pleasure,
Than that conferr'd on Goneril. Now, our joy,
Although the last, not least; to whose young
love

The vines of France and milk of Burgundy Strive to be interest'd; what can you say to draw

A third more opulent than your sisters? Speak.

Cor. Nothing, my lord.

Lear. Nothing! 90

Cor. Nothing.

Lear. Nothing will come of nothing: speak
again.

Cor. Unhappy that I am, I cannot heave
My heart into my mouth: I love your majesty
According to my bond; nor more nor less.

Lear. How, how, Cordelia! mend your speech a little.

Let it may mar your fortunes.

Cor. Good my lord,
You have begot me, bred me, loved me: I
Return these duties back as are right fit.

Obey you, love you, and most honour you. 100
Why have my sisters husbands, if they say
They love you all? Haply, when I shall wed,
That hand whose hand must take my plight shall carry

Half my love with him, half my care and duty:
Sure, I shall never marry like my sisters,
To love my father all.

Lear. But goes thy heart with this?

Cor. Ay, good my lord.

Lear. So young, and so untender?

Cor. So young, my lord, and true.

Lear. Let us be so; the truth, then, be thy dower. 110

For, by the sacred radiance of the sun,
The mysteries of Hecate, and the night;
By all the operation of the orbs
From whom we do exist, and cease to be;
Here I disclaim all my paternal care,
Propinquity and property of blood,
And as a stranger to my heart and h—
Hold thee, from this, for ever. The barbarous Scythian,

Or he that makes his generation messes
To gorge his appetite, shall to my bosom
Be as well neighbour'd, pitied, and relieved,
As thou my sometime daughter.

Kent. Good my liege,—

Lear. Peace, Kent!

Come not between the dragon and his wrath.
I loved her most, and thought to set my rest
On her kind nursery. Hence, and avoid my sight!

So be my grave my peace, as here I give Her father's heart from her! Call France; who stirs!

Call Burgundy. Cornwall and Albany,
With my two daughters' dowers digest this third: 120

Let pride, which she calls plainness, marry her.
I do invest you jointly with my power,
Pre-eminence, and all the large effects
That troop with majesty. Ourself, by monthly course,

With reservation of an hundred knights,
By you to be sustain'd, shall our abode Make with you by due turns. Only we still retain

The name, and all the additions to a king;
The sway, revenue, execution of the rest,
Beloved sons, be yours: which to confirm, 130
This coronet part betwixt you.

[Giving the crown.]

Kent. Royal Lear,

Whom I have ever honour'd as my king,
Loved as my father, as my master follow'd,
As my great patron thought on in my prayers,—

Lear. The bow is bent and drawn, make from the shaft.

Kent. Let it fall rather, though the fork invade

The region of my heart: be Kent unmannerly,
When Lear is mad. What wilt thou do, old man?

Think'st thou that duty shall have dread to
speak,

When power to flattery bows? To plainness honour's bound, 140

When majesty stoops to folly. Reverse thy doom!

And, in thy best consideration, check
This hideous rashness: answer my life my judgement,

Thy youngest daughter does not love thee
least;

Nor are those empty-hearted whose low sound
Reverbs her hollowness.

Lear. Kent, on thy life, no more.

Kent. My life I never held but as a pawn,
To wage against thy enemies; nor fear to lose it,
Thy safety being the motive.

Lear. Out of my sight!

Kent. See better, Lear; and let me still remain 350
The true blank of thine eye.

Lear. Now, by Apollo,
Kent. Now, by Apollo, king,
Thou swear'st thy gods in vain.

Lear. O, vassal! miscreant!
[Laying his hand on his sword.

Alb. } Dear sir, forbear.
Corn. }

Kent. }
Kill thy physician, and the fee bestow
Upon thy foul disease. Revoke thy doom;
Or, whilst I can vent clamour from my throat,
I'll tell thee thou dost evil.

Lear. Hear me, recreant!
On thine allegiance, hear me! 370

Since thou hast sought to make us break our vow,

Which we durst never yet, and with strain'd pride

To come between our sentence and our power,
Which nor our nature nor our place can bear,

Our potency made good, take thy reward.
Five days we do allot thee, for provision

To shield thee from diseases of the world;
And on the sixth to turn thy hated back Upon our kingdom: if, on the tenth day

following, 375
Thy banish'd trunk be found in our dominions,
The moment is thy death. Away! by Jupiter,
This shall not be revok'd.

Kent. Fare thee well, king: with thus thou wilt appear,

Freedom lives hence, and banishment is here.
[To Cordelia] The gods to their dear shelter take thee, maid,

That justly think'st, and hast most rightly

said!
[To Regan and Goneril] And your large speeches may your deeds approve,

That good effects may spring from words of

love.
Thus Kent, O princes, bids you all adieu;

He'll shape his old course in a country new.
[Exit.

Flourish. Re-enter GLOUCESTER, with FRANCE, BURGUNDY, and Attendants.

Glou. Here's France and Burgundy, my noble lord. 390

Lear. My lord of Burgundy,
We first address towards you, who with this

king
Hath rival'd for our daughter: what, in the least,

Will you require in present dower with her,

Or cease your quest of love?

Bur. Most royal majesty,
I crave no more than what your highness offers, and

Nor will you tender less.

Lear. Right noble Burgundy,
When she was dear to us, we did hold her so;

But now her price is fall'n. Sir, these she stands 400

If aught within that little seeming substance,
Or all of it, with one dissembling peace,

And nothing more, may buy like your grace,

She's there, and she is young.

Bur. I know no answer.
Lear. Will you, with these infidelities she owes,

Unfriended, new-adapted to our hate,
Dower'd with our curse, and stranger'd with our oath,

Take her, or leave her!

Bur. Pardon me, royal sir;
Election makes not up on such conditions.

Lear. Then leave her, sir; for, by the power that made me, 410

tell you all her wealth. [To France] For you, great king,

would not from your love make such a stray,
To match you where I hate; therefore beseech

you
To avert your liking a more worthy way
Than on a wretch whom nature is ashamed

Almost to acknowledge here.

France. This is most strange,
That she, that even but now was your best object,

The argument of your praise, balm of your age,
Most best, most dearest, should in this price of

time 420
Commit a thing so monstrous, to dismantle
So many folds of favour. Sure, her offence

Must be of such unnatural degree,
That monsters it, or your fore-vouch'd affection

Fall'n into taint; which to believe of her,
Must be a faith that reason without miracle

Could never plant in me.

Cor. I yet beseech your majesty,—
If for I want that glib and oily art,

To speak and purpose not; since what I will intend,

I'll do't before I speak,—that you make known
It is no vicious blot, mauler, or foulness, 430

No unchaste action, or dishonour'd step,
That hath deprived me of your grace and favour;

But even for want of that for which I am richer,

A still-soliciting eye, and such a tongue

As I am glad I have not, though not to have it Hath lost me in your liking.

Lear. Better thou
Hast not been born than not to have pleas'd me better.

France. Is it but this,—a tardiness in nature
Which often leaves the history unspoke 440

That it intends to do? My lord of I

What say you to the lady? Love's not love,
When it is mingled with regards that stand

Aloof from the entire point. Will you have her?

She is herself a dowry.

Bur. Royal Lear,
Give but that portion which you call'd promised,

And here I take Cordelia for the honest Duchess of Burgundy.

Lear. Nothing: I have sworn: I am firm.

Bur. I am sorry, then, you have so lost a daughter.

That you must lose a husband.

Cor. Peace be with Burgundy!
Since that suggests of love are all so false,

I shall not be his wife.

France. Fairest Cordelia, that art most rich, being poor;
Most choice, forsaken; and most loved, despised!

These and thy virtues here I seize upon:
Be it lawful I take up what's cast away.
Gods, gods! 'tis strange that from their cold'st neglect

My love should kindle to inflamed respect.
Thy dowerless daughter, king, thrown to my chance,

Is queen of us, of ours, and our fair France:
Not all the dukes of waterish Burgundy
Can buy this unprized precious maid of me.
Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind
Thou lovest here, a better where to find.

Lear. Thou hast her, France: let her be thine; for we Have no such daughter, nor shall ever see

That face of hers again. Therefore be gone
Without our grace, our love, our benison.
Come, noble Burgundy.

[Flourish. Exeunt all but France, Goneril, Regan, and Cordelia.]

France. Bid farewell to your sisters.

Cor. The jewels of our father, with wash'd eyes

Cordelia leaves you: I know you what you are;
And like a sister am most loath to call
Your faults as they are named. Use well our father:

To your professed bosoms I commit him:
But yet, alas, stood I within his grace,
I would prefer him to a better place.
So, farewell to you both.

Reg. Prescribe not us our duties.

Gon. Let your study
Be to content your lord, who hath received you
At fortune's alms. You have obedience scanted,
And well are worth the want that you have wanted.

Cor. Time shall unfold what plaited cunning hides:

Who cover faults, at last shame them derides.
Well may you prosper!

France. Come, my fair Cordelia.

[Exeunt France and Cordelia.]

Gon. Sister, it is not a little I have to say
Of what most nearly appertains to us both.
I think our father will hence to-night.

Reg. That's most certain, and with you;
next month with us.

Gon. You see how full of changes his age is;
the observation we have made of it hath not been little: he always loved our sister most; and with what poor judgement he hath now cast her off appears too grossly.

Reg. 'Tis the infirmity of his age: yet he hath ever but slenderly known himself.

Gon. The best and soundest of his time hath been but rash; then must we look to receive from his age, not alone the imperfections of long-engraded condition, but therewithal the unnecessary waywardness that infirm and choleric years bring with them.

Reg. Such uncertain starts are we like to have from him as this of Kent's banishment.

Gon. There is further compliment of leave-taking between France and him. Pray you, let's hit together: if our father carry authority with such dispositions as he bears, this last surrender of his will but offend us.

Reg. We shall further think on't.

Gon. We must do something, and 't is the heat.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. The Earl of Gloucester's castle.

Enter EDMUND, with a letter.

Edm. Thou, nature, art my goddess; to thy law

My services are bound. Wherefore should I Stand in the plague of custom, and permit
The curiosity of nations to deprive me,
For that I am some twelve or fourteen moon-shines

Lag of a brother? Why bastard! wherefore base!

When my dimensions are as well compact,
My mind as generous, and my shape as true,
As honest madam's issue? Why brand they us
With base! with baseness? bastardy! base, base!

Who, in the lusty stealth of nature, take
More composition and fierce quality
Than doth, within a dull, stale, tired bed,
Go to the creating a whole tribe of fops, (got 'tween asleep and wake! Well, then,
Legitimate Edgar, I must have your land:
Our father's love is to the bastard Edmund
As to the legitimate: fine word,—legitimate!
Well, my legitimate; if this letter speed,
And my invention thrive, Edmund the base shall top the legitimate. I grow; I prosper:
Now, gods, stand up for bastards!

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glou. Kent banish'd thus! and France in choler parted!

And the king gone to-night! subscribed his power!

Confined to exhibition! All this done
Upon the gad! Edmund, how now! what news?

Edm. So please your lordship, none.

[Putting up the letter.]

Glou. Why so earnestly seek you to put up that letter?

Edm. I know no news, my lord.

Glou. What paper were you reading?

Edm. Nothing, my lord.

Glou. No! What needed, then, that terrible dispatch of it into your pocket! the quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself. Let's see: come, if it be nothing, I shall not need spectacles.

Edm. I beseech you, sir, pardon me: it is a letter from my brother, that I have not all o'er-read; and for so much as I have perused, I find it not fit for your o'er-looking.

Glou. Give me the letter, sir.

Edm. I shall offend, either to detain or give
it. The contents, as in part I understand them, are to blame.

Glou. Let's see, let's see.

Edm. I hope, for my brother's justification,

he wrote this but as an essay or taste of my virtue.

Glos. [Reads] 'This policy and reverence of age makes the world bitter to the best of our times; keeps our fortunes from us till our oldness cannot relish them. I begin to find an idle and fond bondage in the oppression of aged tyranny; who sways, not as it hath power, but as it is suffered. Come to me, that of this I may speak more. If our father would sleep till I waked him, you should enjoy half his revenue for ever, and live the beloved of your brother,'

EDGAR.

Hum—conspiracy!—'Sleep till I waked him,—you should enjoy half his revenue.'—My son Edgar! Had he a hand to write this! a heart and brain to breed it in!—When came this to you! who brought it!

Edm. It was not brought me, my lord; there's the cunning of it; I found it thrown in at the casement of my closet.

Glos. You know the character to be your brother's?

Edm. If the matter were good, my lord, I durst swear it were his; but, in respect of that, I would fain think it were not. 70

Glos. It is his.

Edm. It is his hand, my lord; but I hope his heart is not in the contents.

Glos. Hath he never heretofore sounded you in this business?

Edm. Never, my lord; but I have heard him oft maintain it to be fit, that, sons at perfect age, and fathers declining, the father should be as ward to the son, and the son manage his revenue. 79

Glos. O villain, villain! His very opinion in the letter! Abhorred villain! Unnatural, detested, brutish villain! worse than brutish! Ho, sirrah, seek him; I'll apprehend him; abominable villain! Where is he?

Edm. I do not well know, my lord. If it shall please you to suspend your indignation against my brother till you can derive from him better testimony of his intent, you shall run a certain course; where, if you violently proceed against him, mistaking his purpose, it would make a great gap in your own honour, and shake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn down my life for him, that he hath wrote this to feel my affection to your honour, and to no further pretence of danger.

Glos. Think you so?

Edm. If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer of this, and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction; and that without any further delay than this very evening. 101

Glos. He cannot be such a monster—

Edm. Nor is not, sure.

Glos. To his father, that so tenderly and entirely loves him. Heaven and earth! Edmund, seek him out; wind me into him, I pray you: frame the business after your own wisdom. I would unstate myself, to be in a due resolution.

Edm. I will seek him, sir, presently; convey the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withal. 111

Glos. These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us; though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequent effects: love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide; in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason; and the bond cracked 'twixt son and father. This villain of mine comes under the prediction; there's son against father: the king falls from the bias of nature; there's father against child. We have seen the best of our time: machinations, hollownness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders, follow us disquietly to our graves. Find out this villain, Edmund; it shall lose thee nothing; do it carefully. And the noble and true-hearted Kent banished! his offence, honesty! 'Tis strange. [Exit.]

Edm. This is the excellent foppery of the world, that, when we are sick in fortune,—often the surfeit of our own behaviour,—we make guilty of our disasters the sun, the moon, and the stars; as if we were villains by necessity; fools by heavenly compulsion; knaves, thieves, and treachers, by spherical predominance; drunkards, liars, and adulterers, by an enforced obedience of planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on: an admirable evasion of whoremaster man, to lay his goatish disposition to the charge of a star! My father compounded with my mother under the dragon's tail; and my nativity was under Ursa major; so that it follows, I am rough and lecherous. Tut, I should have been that I am, had the maidenliest star in the firmament twinkled on my bastardizing. Edgar—and pat he comes like the catastrophe of the old comedy; my cue is villainous melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o' Bedlam. O, these eclipses do portend these divisions! fa, sol, la, mi.

Edg. How now, brother Edmund! what serious contemplation are you in? 121

Edm. I am thinking, brother, of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these eclipses.

Edg. Do you busy yourself about that?

Edm. I promise you, the effects he writes of succeed unhappily; as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent; death, dearth, dissolutions of ancient amities; divisions in state, menaces and maledictions against king and nobles; needless diffidences, banishment of friends, dissipation of cohorts, nuptial breaches, and I know not what.

Edg. How long have you been a sectary astronomical?

Edm. Come, come; when saw you my father last?

Edg. Why, the night gone by.

Edm. Spake you with him?

Edg. Ay, two hours together. 130

Edm. Parted you in good terms? Found you no displeasure in him by word or countenance?

None at all.

Bestink yourself wherein you may.

have offended him: and as my entreaty forbear his presence till some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure; which at this instant so rageth in him, that with the mischief of your person it would scarcely allay.

Edg. Some villain hath done me wrong.

Edm. That's my fear. I pray you, have a constant forbearance till the speed of his rage goes slower; and, as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my lord speak: pray ye, go; there's my key: if you do stir abroad, go armed.

Edg. Armed, brother!

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best; go armed: I am no honest man if there be any good meaning towards you: I have told you what I have seen and heard; but faintly, nothing like the image and horror of it: pray you, away.

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon?

Edm. I do serve you in this business.

[Exit Edgar.]

A credulous father! and a brother noble, Whose nature is so far from doing harms, That he suspects none; on whose foolish honesty

My practices ride easy! I see the business. Let me, if not by birth, have lands by wit: 299 All with me's meet that I can fashion fit. [Exit.]

SCENE III. The Duke of Albany's palace.

Enter GONERIL, and OSWALD, her steward.

Gon. Did my father strike my gentleman for chiding of his fool?

Osw. Yes, madam.

Gon. By day and night he wrongs me; every hour

He flashes into one gross crime or other, That sets us all at odds: I'll not endure it: His knights grow riotous, and himself upbraids us

On every trifle. When he returns from hunting, I will not speak with him; say I am sick: If you come slack of former services,

You shall do well; the fault of it I'll answer. 300

Osw. He's coming, madam; I hear him.

Gon. Put on what weary negligence you please,

You and your fellows; I'd have it come to question:

If he chide us, let him to our sister, Whose mind and mine, I know, in that are one, Not to be over-ruled. Idle old man, That still would manage those authorities That he hath given away! Now, by my life, Old fools are babes again; and must be used With checks as flatteries,—when they are seen abused. 301

Remember what I tell you.

Osw. Well, madam.

Gon. And let his knights have colder looks among you;

What grows of it, no matter; advise your fellows so:

I would breed from hence occasions, and I shall

That I may speak: I'll write straight to my sister, To hold my very course. Prepare for dinner. [Exit.]

SCENE IV. A hall in the same.

Enter KENT, disguised.

Kent. If but as well I other accents borrow, In issue, banish'd

Kent, If thou canst serve where thou dost stand condemn'd, So may it come, thy master, whom thou lovest, Shall find thee full of labours.

Horns within. Enter LEAR, Knights, and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a jot for dinner; go get it ready. [Exit an Attendant.] How now! what art thou? 302

Kent. A man, sir.

Lear. What dost thou profess? what wouldst thou with us?

Kent. I do profess to be no less than I seem; to serve him truly that will put me in trust; to love him that is honest: to converse with him that is wise, and says little; to fear judgement; to fight when I cannot choose; and to eat no fish.

Lear. What art thou?

Kent. A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor as the king. 303

Lear. If thou be as poor for a subject as he is for a king, thou art poor enough. What wouldst thou?

Kent. Service.

Lear. Who wouldst thou serve?

Kent. You.

Lear. Dost thou know me, fellow?

Kent. No, sir; but you have that in your countenance which I would fain call master. 304

Lear. What's that?

Kent. Authority.

Lear. What services canst thou do?

Kent. I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, mear a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly: that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in; and the best of me is diligence.

Lear. How old art thou?

Kent. Not so young, sir, to love a woman for singing, nor so old to dote on her for any thing: I have years on my back forty eight.

Lear. Follow me; thou shalt serve me: if I like thee no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet. Dinner, ho, dinner! Where's my knave? my fool? Go you, and call my fool hither. [Exit an Attendant.]

Enter OSWALD.

You, you, sirrah, where's my daughter? Osw. So please you,—

Lear. What says the fellow there? Call the clotpole back. [Exit a Knight.] Where's my fool, ho? I think the world's asleep.

Re-enter Knight.

How now! where's that mongrel!

Knight. He says, my lord, your daughter is not well.

Lear. Why came not the slave back to me when I called him.

Knight. Sir, he answered me in the roundest manner, he would not!

Lear. He would not!

Knight. My lord, I know not what the matter is; but, to my judgement, your highness is not entertained with that ceremonious affection as you were wont; there's a great abatement of kindness appears as well in the general dependants as in the duke himself also and your daughter.

Lear. Ha! sayest thou so?

Knight. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, if I be mistaken; for my duty cannot be silent when I think your highness wronged.

Lear. Thou but rememberest me of mine own conception: I have perceived a most faint neglect of late; which I have rather blamed as mine own jealous curiosity than as a very pretence and purpose of unkindness: I will look further into't. But where's my fool? I have not seen him this two days.

Knight. Since my young lady's going into France, sir, the fool hath much pined away.

Lear. No more of that; I have noted it well. Go you, and tell my daughter I would speak with her. [Exit an Attendant.] Go you, call hither my fool.

Re-enter OSWALD.

O, you sir, you, come you hither, sir: who am I, sir?

Osw. My lady's father.

Lear. 'My lady's father'! my lord's knave you whoreson dog! you slave! you cur!

Osw. I am none of these, my lord; I beseech your pardon.

Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you rascal!

Osw. I'll not be struck, my lord.

Kent. Nor tripped neither, you base foot ball player.

Lear. I thank thee, fellow; thou servest me, and I'll love thee.

Kent. Come, sir, arise, away! I'll teach you differences: away, away! If you will measure your lubber's length again, tarry: but away go to; have you wisdom! so.

Lear. Now, my friendly knave, I thank thee: there's earnest of thy service.

Enter Fool.

Fool. Let me hire him too: here's my cock.

Kent. How now, my pretty knave! how dost thou?

Fool. Sirrah, you were best take my cock.

Kent. Why, fool?

Fool. Why, for taking one's part that's out of favour: nay, an thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou'lt catch cold shortly: there take my cockcomb: why, this fellow has banished two on's daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will; if thou follow him, thou must needs wear my cockcomb. How now, nuncle!

Lear. Why, my boy!

Fool. If I gave them all my living, I'd keep my cockcombs myself. There's mine; beg another of thy daughters.

Lear. Take heed, sirrah; the whip.

Fool. Truth's a dog must to kennel; he must be whipped out, when Lady shall brach may stand by the fire and stink.

Lear. A pestilent gall to me!

Fool. Sirrah, I'll teach thee a speech.

Lear. Do.

Fool. Mark it, nuncle:

Have more than thou showest,

Speak less than thou knowest,

Lend less than thou owest,

Ride more than thou goest,

Learn more than thou trowest,

Set less than thou throwest;

Leave thy drink and thy whore,

And keep in a-door,

And thou shalt have more

Than thou tens to a score.

Kent. This is nothing, fool.

Fool. Then 'tis like the breath of an unfeeling lawyer; you gave me nothing for't. Can you make no use of nothing, nuncle?

Lear. Why, no, boy; nothing can be made out of nothing.

Fool. [To Kent] Prithce, tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to: he will not believe a fool.

Lear. A bitter fool!

Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my boy, between a bitter fool and a sweet fool?

Lear. No, lad; teach me.

Fool. That lord that counsell'd thee

To give away thy land,

Come place him here by me,

Do thou for him stand:

The sweet and bitter fool

Will presently appear;

The one in motley here,

The other found out there.

Lear. Dost thou call me fool, boy?

Fool. All thy other titles thou hast given away; that thou wast born with.

Kent. This is not altogether fool, my lord.

Fool. No, faith, lords and great men will not let me; if I had a monopoly out, they would have part on't; and ladies too, they will not let me have all fool to myself; they'll be snatching. Give me an egg, nuncle, and I'll give thee two crowns.

Lear. What two crowns shall they be?

Fool. Why, after I have cut the egg i' the middle, and eat up the meat, the two crowns of the egg. When thou dost see the two crowns of the middle, and gawest away both parts, thou hast thy ass on thy back over the dirt; thou hast little wit in thy bald crown, when thou gawest thy golden one away. If I speak like myself in this, let him be whipped that first finds it so. 180

[Singing] Fools had ne'er less wit in a year;

For wise men are grown foppish,
They know not how their wits to wear,
Their manners are so apish.

Lear. When were you wont to be so full of songs, sirrah?

Fool. I have used it, nuncle, ever since thou madest thy daughters thy mother: for when thou gavest them the rod, and put'st down thine own breeches, 190

[Singing] Then they for sudden joy did weep,

And I for sorrow sung,

That such a king should play bo-peep,

And go the fools among.

Prithee, nuncle, keep a schoolmaster that can teach thy fool to lie: I would fain learn to lie.

Lear. An you lie, sirrah, we'll have you whipped.

Fool. I marvel what kin thou and thy daughters are: they'll have me whipped for speaking true, thou'll have me whipped for lying; and sometimes I am whipped for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind o' thing than a fool: and yet I would not be thee, nuncle; thou hast pared thy wit o' both sides, and left nothing i' the middle: here comes one o' the parings.

Enter GONERIL.

Lear. How now, daughter! what makes that frontlet on? Methinks you are too much of late i' the frown. 209

Fool. Thou wast a pretty fellow when thou hadst no need to care for her frowning; now thou art an O without a figure: I am better than thou art now: I am a fool, thou art nothing. [To Gon.] Yes, forsooth, I will hold my tongue; so your face bids me, though you say nothing. Mum, mum,

He that keeps nor crust nor crum,

Weary of all, shall want some.

[Pointing to Lear] That's a shealed peascod.

Gon. Not only, sir, this your all-licensed fool, but other of your insolent retinue 221

Do hourly carp and quarrel; breaking forth in rank and not-to-be-endured riots. Sir,

I had thought, by making this well known unto you,
To have found a safe redress; but now grow fearful,

By what yourself too late have spoke and done,
That you protect this course, and put it on
By your allowance; which if you should, the fault

Would not scape censure, nor the redresses sleep,

Which, in the tender of a wholesome weal, 230
Might in their working do you that offence.
Which, since were shame, that then necessity
Will almost disquiet proceeding.

Fool. For, you know, nuncle,
The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so long,
That it had it head bit off by it young.

So, out went the candle, and we were left Darkling.

Lear. Are you our daughter?

Gon. Come, sir,
I would you would make use of that good wisdom, 240

Whereof I know you are fraught; and put away

These dispositions, that of late transform you
From what you rightly are.

Fool. May not an ass know when the cart draws the horse? Whoop, Jug! I love thee.

Lear. Doth any here know me? This is not

Lear:
Doth Lear walk thus? speak thus? Where are his eyes?

Either his notion weakens, his discernings

Are lethargied—Ha! waking? 'tis not so.

Who is it that can tell me who I am? 250

Fool. Lear's shadow.

Lear. I would learn that; for, by the marks of sovereignty, knowledge, and reason, I should be false persuaded I had daughters.

Fool. Which they will make an obedient father.

Lear. Your name, fair gentlewoman?

Gon. This admiration, sir, is much o' the savour

Of other your new pranks. I do beseech you
To understand my purposes aright: 260
As you are old and reverend, you should be wise.

Here do you keep a hundred knights and squires;

Men so disorder'd, so debosh'd and bold,

That this our court, infected with their manners,

Shows like a riotous inn: epicurism and lust

Make it more like a tavern or a brothel

Than a graced palace. The shame itself doth
speak

For instant remedy: be then desired

By her, that else will take the thing she begs,

A little to disquantity your train: 270

And the remainder, that shall still depend,

To be such men as may besort your age,

And know themselves and you.

Lear. Darkness and devils!

Saddle my horses; call my train together.

Degenerate bastard! I'll not trouble thee:

Yet have I left a daughter.

Gon. You strike my people; and your disorder'd rabble

Make servants of their betters.

Enter ALBANY.

Lear. Woe, that too late repents,—[To Alb.]

O, sir, are you come?

Is it your will? Speak, sir. Prepare my horses.

Ingratitude, thou marble-hearted fiend, 281

More hideous when thou show'st thee in a child

Than the sea-monster!

Alb. Pray, sir, be patient.

Lear. [To Gon.] Detested kite! thou hast:

My train are men of choice and rarest parts,

That all particulars of duty know,

And in the most exact regard support

The worship of their name. O most small fault,

How ugly didst thou in Cordelia show!

That, like an engine, wrench'd my frame of nature 290

From the fix'd place; drew from my heart all love.

And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear!
Beat at this gate, that let thy folly in.

[Striking his head.
And thy dear judgement out! Go, go, my people.

Alb. My lord, I am guiltless, as I am ignorant
Of what hath moved you.

Lear. It may be so, my lord.
Hear, nature, hear; dear goddess, hear!
Suspend thy purpose, if thou didst intend
To make this creature fruitful!

Into her womb convey sterility! 300
Dry up in her the organs of increase;
And from her derogate body never spring
A babe to honour her! If she must teem,
Create her child of spleen; that it may live,
And be a thwart disnatur'd torment to her!
Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth;
With cadent tears fret channels in her cheeks;
Turn all her mother's pains and benefits
To laughter and contempt; that she may feel
How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is 310
To have a thankless child! Away, away!

[Exit.
Alb. Now, gods that we adore, whereof comes this!

Gon. Never afflict yourself to know the cause;
But let his disposition have that scope
That dotage gives it.

Re-enter LEAR.

Lear. What, fifty of my followers at a clap!
Within a fortnight!

Alb. What's the matter, sir?
Lear. I'll tell thee: [To Gon.] Life and death! I am ashamed

That thou hast power to shake my manhood
thus;

That these hot tears, which break from me
perforce, 320
Should make thee worth them. Blasts and fogs upon thee!

The untented woundings of a father's curse
Pierce every sense about thee! Old fond eyes,
Bweep this cause again, I'll pluck ye out,
And cast you, with the waters that you lose,
To temper clay. Yea, is it come to this!
Let it be so: yet have I left a daughter,
Who, I am sure, is kind and comfortable:
When she shall hear this of thee, with her nails
She'll flay thy wolfish visage. Thou shalt find That I'll resume the shape which thou dost think 331

I have cast off for ever: thou shalt, I warrant
thee.

[Exit Lear, Kent, and Attendants.
Gon. Do you mark that, my lord?

Alb. I cannot be so partial, Goneril,
To the great love I bear you,—

Gon. Pray you, content. What, Oswald, ho!
[To the Fool] You, sir, more knave than fool,
after your master.

Fool. Nuncie Lear, nuncie Lear, tarry and take the fool with thee.

A fox, when one has caught her, 340
And such a daughter,
Should sure to the slaughter,
If my cap would buy a halter:
So the fool follows after. [Exit.

Gon. This man hath had good counsel:—a hundred knights!

'Tis politic and safe to let him keep
At point a hundred knights: yea, that, on every dream,

Each buzz, each fancy, each complaint, dislike,
He may enguard his dotage with their powers,
And hold our lives in mercy. Oswald, I say!

Alb. Well, you may fear too far.

Gon. Safer than trust too far:
Let me still take away the harms I fear,
Not fear still to be taken: I know his heart.
What he hath utter'd I have writ my sister:
If she sustain him and his hundred knights,
When I have show'd the unfitness,—

Re-enter OSWALD

How now, Oswald!
What, have you writ that letter to my sister?

Osw. Yea, madam.

Gon. Take you some company, and away to horse:

Inform her full of my particular fear; 360
And thereto add such reasons of your own
As may compact it more. Get you gone;
And hasten your return. [Exit Oswald.] No,
no, my lord,

This milky gentleness and course of yours
Though I condemn not, yet, under pardon,
You are much more attack'd for want of wisdom
Than praised for harmful mildness.

Alb. How far your eyes may pierce I cannot tell:

Striving to better, oft we mar what's well.

Gon. Nay, then—

Alb. Well, well; the event. [Exit.

SCENE V. Court before the same.

Enter LEAR, KENT, and Fool.

Lear. Go you before to Gloucester with these letters. Acquaint my daughter no further with any thing you know than comes from her demand out of the letter. If your diligence be not speedy, I shall be there afore you.

Kent. I will not sleep, my lord, till I have delivered your letter. [Exit.

Fool. If a man's brains were in's heels, were't not in danger of kibes?

Lear. Ay, boy.

Fool. Then, I prithes, be merry; thy wit shall ne'er go slipshod. 380

Lear. Ha, ha, ha!

Fool. Shall see thy other daughter will use thee kindly; for though she's as like this as crab's like an apple, yet I can tell what's can tell.

Lear. Why, what cannot thou tell, my boy?

Fool. She will taste as like this as a crab does to a crab. Thou cannot tell why one's nose stands i' the middle on's face?

Lear. No.

Fool. Why, to keep one's eyes of other side's nose; that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.

Lear. I did her wrong—

Fool. Ought tell how an oyster makes his shell.

Lear. No.

Fool. Nor I neither; but I can tell why a snail has a house.

Lear. Why?

Fool. Why, to put his head in; not to give it away to his daughters, and leave his horns without a case.

Lear. I will forget my nature. So kind a father! Be my horses ready?

Fool. Thy asses are gone about 'em. The reason why the seven stars are no more than seven is a pretty reason.

Lear. Because they are not eight?

Fool. Yes, indeed: thou wouldst make a good fool.

Lear. To take 't again perforce! Monster ingratitude!

Fool. If thou wert my fool, nuncle, I 'ld have thee beaten for being old before thy time.

Lear. How's that?

Fool. Thou shouldst not have been old till thou hadst been wise.

Lear. O, let me not be mad, not mad, sweet heaven!

Keep me in temper: I would not be mad!

Enter Gentleman.

How now! are the horses ready?

Gent. Ready, my lord.

Lear. Come, boy.

Fool. She that's a maid now, and laughs at my departure,

Shall not be a maid long, unless things be cut shorter.

ACT II.

SCENE I. The Earl of Gloucester's castle.

Enter EDMUND, and CURAN meets him.

Edm. Save thee, Curan.

Cur. And you, sir. I have been with your father; and given him notice that the Duke of Cornwall and Regan his duchess will be here with him this night.

Edm. How comes that?

Cur. Nay, I know not. You have heard of the news abroad; I mean the whispered ones, for they are yet but ear-kissing arguments!

Edm. Not I: pray you, what are they?

Cur. Have you heard of no likely wars to ward, 'twixt the Dukes of Cornwall and Albany?

Edm. Not a word.

Cur. You may do, then, in time. Fare you well.

Edm. The dukes be here to-night! The better! best!

Edm. This conventional perforce into my business. My father hath set guard to take my brother; and I have one thing of a quary question, which I must ask: briefness and fortune, what?

Edm. Nothing at worst; demands brother, I say!

Enter EDGAR.

My father watches: O sir, fly this place; Intelligence is given where you are hid; You have now the good advantage of the night: Have you not spoken 'gainst the Duke of Cornwall?

He's coming hither; now, 't the night, 't the haste,

And Regan with him: have you nothing said Upon his party 'gainst the Duke of Albany? Advise yourself.

Edg. I am sure on 't, not a word.

Edm. I hear my father coming: pardon me; In cunning I must draw my sword upon you: Draw; seem to defend yourself; now quit you well.

Yield: come before my father. Light, ho, here!

Fly, brother. Torches, torches! So, farewell.

Some blood drawn, on me would beget opinion

Of my more fierce endeavour: I have some drunkards

Do more than this in sport. Father, father! Stop, stop! No help!

Enter GLOUCESTER, and Servants with torches.

Glou. Now, Edmund, where's the villain?

Edm. Here stood he in the dark, his sharp sword out,

Mumbling of wicked charms, conjuring the moon

To stand suspicious mistress,—

Glou. But where is he?

Edm. Look, sir, I bleed.

Glou. Where is the villain, Edmund?

Edm. Fled this way, sir. When by no means he could—Glou. Pursue him, ho! Go after. [Exit some Servants.] By no means what?

Edm. Persuade me to the murder of your lordship;

But that I told him, the revenging gods 'Gainst parricides did all their thunders bend;

Spoke, with how manifold and strong a bond The child was bound to the father; sir, in fine,

Seeing how loathly opposite I stood To his unnatural purpose, in fell motion,

With his prepared sword, he charges home My unprovided body, lanced mine arm;

But when he saw my best alarm'd spirits, Bold in the quarrel's right, roused to the encounter,

Or whether gasted by the noise I made, Fell suddenly he fled.

Glou. Let him fly far:

Not in this land shall he remain uncought; And found—dispatch. The noble duke my master,

My worthy arch and patron, comes to-night: By his authority I will proclaim it.

That he which finds him shall deserve our thanks; Bringing the murderer even to the stake: He that conceals him, death.

Edm. When I dissuaded him from his intent,
And found him pight to do it, with curst speech
I threaten'd to discover him: he replied,
'Thou unpossessing bastard! dost thou think,
If I would stand against thee, would the reposal
Of any trust, virtue, or worth in thee
'ake thy words faith'd! No: what I should as this I would: ay, though thou didst produce

A very character,—I'd turn it all
To thy suggestion, plot, and damned practice:
And thou must make a dullard of the world,
'they not thought the profits of my death
Were very pregnant and potential spurs
To make thee seek it.'

Glou. Strong and fasten'd villain!
Would he deny his letter? I never got him. So [Trucket within.]

Lark, the duke's trumpets! I know not why he comes
All ports I'll bar; the villain shall not 'scape;
'the duke must grant me that: besides, his picture
will send far and near, that all the kingdom
May have due note of him; and of my land,
Loyal and natural boy, I'll work the means
To make thee capable.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, and Attendants.

Corn. How now, my noble friend! since I came hither,
Which I can call but now, I have heard strange news.

Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too short
Which can pursue the offender. How dost, my lord?

Glou. O, madam, my old heart is crack'd, is crack'd!

Reg. What, did my father's godson seek your life?

He whom my father named! your Edgar?

Glou. O, lady, lady, shame would have it hid!

Reg. Was he not companion with the riotous knights
That tend upon my father?

Glou. I know not, madam: 'tis too bad, too bad.

Edm. Yes, madam, he was of that consort.

Reg. No marvel, then, though he were ill affected:

'Tis they have put him on the old man's death,
To have the expense and waste of his revenues.
I have this present evening from my sister
Been well inform'd of them; and with such cantions,

That if they come to sojourn at my house,
I'll not be there.

Corn. Nor I, assure thee, Regan.

Edmund. I hear that you have shown your father

A child-like office.

Edm. 'Twas my duty, sir.

Glou. He did bewray his practice; and received

This hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.

Corn. Is he pursued?

Glou. Ay, my lord.

Corn. If he be taken, he — never more
Be fear'd of doing harm: make your own purpose,

How in my strength you please. For you,
Edmund,

Whose virtue and obedience doth this instant
So much commend itself, you shall be ours:

Natures of such deep trust we shall much need;
You we first seize on.

Edm. I shall serve you, sir,
Truly, however else.

Glou. For him I thank your grace.

Corn. You know not why we came to visit
you,

Reg. Thus out of season, threading darkey'd night:

Occasions, noble Gloucester, of some poise,
Wherein we must have use of your advice:

Our father he hath writ, so hath our sister,
Of differences, which I least thought it fit

To answer from our home; the several messengers

From hence attend dispatch. Our good old friend,

Lay comforts to your bosom; and bestow
Your needful counsel to our business,

Which craves the instant use.

Glou. I serve you, madam: 230
Your graces are right welcome. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Before Gloucester's castle.

Enter KENT and OSWALD, severally.

Osw. Good dawning to thee, friend: art of this house?

Kent. Ay.

Osw. Where may we set our horses?

Kent. I the mire.

Osw. Prithce, if thou lovest me, tell me.

Kent. I love thee not.

Osw. Why, then, I care not for thee.

Kent. If I had thee in Lipsbury pinfold, I would make thee care for me.

Osw. Why dost thou use me thus? I know thee not.

Kent. Fellow, I know thee.

Osw. What dost thou know me for?

Kent. A knave; a rascal; an eater of broken meats; a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, street-suited, hundred-pound, filthy, worsted-stocking knave; a lily-livered, action-taking knave

whoreson, glass-gazing, superstitious, filthy rogue; one-trunk-inheriting slave; one wouldst be a bard, in way of good service, and art nothing but the composition of a knave, beggar, coward, pander, and the son and heir of a mongrel bitch: one whom I will beat into clamorous whining. If thou dost, the first syllable of thy addition.

Osw. Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou, thus to rail on one that is neither knave nor knows thee!

Kent. What a beast-like varlet art thou, to deny thou knowest me! In this very place since I tipped up thy heels, and beat thee before the king? Draw, you rogues! for, though

It be night, yet the moon shines; I'll make a sop of the moonshine of you: draw, you whore-son cullionly barber-monger, draw.

[Drawing his sword.]

Osw. Away! I have nothing to do with thee.
Kent. Draw, you rascal: you come with letters against the king; and take vanity the puppet's part against the royalty of her father: draw, you rogue, or I'll so carbonado your shanks: draw, you rascal; come your waya.

Osw. Help, ho! murder! help!
Kent. Strike, you slave; stand, rogue, stand; you neat slave, strike.
Osw. Help, ho! murder! murder!

Enter EDMUND, with his rapier drawn, CORNWALL, REGAN, GLOUCESTER, and Servants.

Edm. How now! What's the matter?
Kent. With you, Goodman boy, an you please: come, I'll flesh ye: come on, young master.

Glow. Weapons! arms! What's the matter here!

Corn. Keep peace, upon your lives; He dies that strikes again. What is the matter!

Reg. The messengers from our sister and the king.

Corn. What is your difference? speak.
Osw. I am scarce in breath, my lord.

Kent. No marvel, you have so beatirred your valour. You cowardly rascal, nature disclaims in thee: a tailor made thee.

Corn. Thou art a strange fellow: a tailor make a man?

Kent. Ay, a tailor, sir; a stone-cutter or a painter could not have made him so ill, though he had been but two hours at the trade.

Corn. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel?
Osw. This ancient ruffian, sir, whose life I have spared at suit of his gray beard.

Kent. Thou whoreson zel! thou unnecessary letter! My lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this unbolted villain into mortar, and daub the walls of a jakes with him. Spare my Peace, sirrah!

You beastly knave, know you no reverence!

Kent. Yes, sir; but anger hath a privilege.

Corn. Why art thou angry?

Kent. That such a slave as this should wear a sword,

Who wears no honesty. Such smiling rogues as these,

Like rats, off bite the holy cords a-twain
Which are too intrinse and unclose; smooth every passion

That in the natures of their lords rebel;

Will oil to fire, snow to their colder moods;
And flatter, and turn their halcyon beaks

Every gale and vary of their masters,
Knowing nought, like dogs, but following.

A plague upon your epileptic visage!
Smile you my speeches, as I were a fool!

Down, if I had you upon Sarnum plain,
I'd drive ye cackling home to Camelot.

Corn. What art thou mad, old fellow?

Kent. How fell you out? say that.

Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy

Than I and such a knave.

Corn. Why dost thou call him knave?

What's his offence?

Kent. His countenance likes me not.
Corn. No more, perchance, does mine, nor his, nor hers.

Kent. Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plain: I have seen better faces in my time

Than stands on any shoulder that I see
Before me at this instant.

Corn. This is some fellow,
Who, having been praised for bluntness, doth affect

A saucy roughness, and constrains the garb
Quite from his nature: he cannot flatter, he,

An honest mind and plain, he must speak truth!

An they will take it, so; if not, he's plain.
These kind of knaves I know, which in this plainness

Harbour more craft and more corrupter ends

Than twenty silly ducking observants
That stretch their duties nicely.

Kent. Sir, in good sooth, in sincere verity,
Under the allowance of your great aspect,

Whose influence, like the wreath of radiant fire
On flickering Phœbus' front,—

Corn. What mean'st by this!

Kent. To go out of my dialect, which you discommend so much. I know, sir, I am no flatterer: he that beguiled you in a plain account was a plain knave; which for my part I will not be, though I should win your displeasure to entreat me to't.

Corn. What was the offence you gave him?

Osw. I never gave him any:
It pleased the king his master very late

To strike at me, upon his misconstruction;
When he, conjunct, and flattering his displeasure,

Tripp'd me behind; being down, insulted, rail'd,

And put upon him such a deal of man,
That worthied him, got praises of the king

For him attempting who was self-subdued;
And, in the fleshment of this dread exploit,

Drew on me here again.

Kent. None of these rogues and cowards
But Ajax is their fool.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks!
You stubborn ancient knave, you reverend braggart,

We'll teach you—

Kent. Sir, I am too old to learn:
Call not your stocks for me: I serve the king;

On whose employment I was sent to you:
You shall do small respect, show too bold malice

Against the grace and person of my master,
Stocking his messenger.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks! As I have life and honour,

There shall he sit till noon.

Reg. Till noon! till night, my lord; and all night too.

Kent. Why, madam, if I were your father's dog,

You should not use me so.

Reg. Sir, being his knave, I will Corn. This is a fellow of the self-same colour our sister speaks of. Come, bring away the stocks! [Stocks brought out.]

Glow. Let me beseech your grace not to do so:

His fault is much, and the good king his master

Will check him for't: your purposed low correction

as such as basest and contemned'st wretches for pilferings and most common trespasses

Are punish'd with: the king must take it ill, that he's so slightly valued in his messenger,

should have him thus restrain'd.

Corn. I'll answer that.

Reg. My sister may receive it much more worse,

To have her gentleman abused, assaulted,
for following her affairs. Put in his legs.

[Kent is put in the stocks.]

Come, my good lord, away.

[Exeunt all but Gloucester and Kent.]

Glow. I am sorry for thee, friend; 'tis the duke's pleasure,

Whose disposition, all the world well knows,
Will not be rubb'd nor stopp'd: I'll entreat for
thee.

Kent. Pray, do not, sir: I have watched and travell'd hard;

Some time I shall sleep out, the rest I'll whistle.
A good man's fortune may grow out at heels:

Give you good morning!

Glow. The duke's to blame in this; 'twill be ill taken.

Kent. Good king, that must approve the common saw,

Thou out of heaven's benediction comest
To the warm sun!

Approach, thou beacon to this under globe,
That by thy comfortable beams I may

Peruse this letter! Nothing almost sees miracles
But misery: I know 'tis from Cordelia,

Who hath most fortunately been inform'd
Of my obscured course; and shall find time

From this enormous state, seeking to give Lames their remedies. All weary and o'erwatch'd,

like vantage, heavy eyes, not to behold
This shameful lodging.

Fortune, good night: smile once more; turn thy wheel!

[Sleeps.]

SCENE III. A wood.

Enter EDGAR.

Edg. I heard myself proclaim'd;
And by the happy hollow of a tree

Escaped the hunt. No port is free; no place,
That guard, and most unusual vigilance,

Does not attend my taking. Whiles I may escape,

I will preserve myself: and am bethought
To take the basest and most poorest shape

That ever penury, in contempt of man,
Bring near to beast: my face I'll grime with filth;

And make my locks; all my hair in knots; so
I with present nakedness out-face

The winds and persecutions of the sky.
The country gives me proof and precedent

Of Bedlam beggars, who, with roaring voices,
Strike in their numb'd and mortified bare arms

Pins, wooden pricks, nails, sprigs of rosemary;
And with this horrible object, from low farms,

Poor pelted villages, sheep-cotes, and mills,
Sometime with lunatic bans, sometime with prayers,

Enforce their charity. Poor Turligod! poor

Tom!

That's something yet: Edgar I nothing am.

[Exit.]

SCENE IV. Before Gloucester's castle. Kent
in the stocks.

Enter LEAR, Fool, and Gentleman.

Lear. 'Tis strange that they should so depart from home,

And not send back my messenger.

Gent. As I learn'd,

The night before there was no purpose in them
Of this remove.

Kent. Hail to thee, noble master!

Lear. Ha!

Makest thou this shame thy pastime?

Kent. No, my lord.

Fool. Ha, ha! he wears cruel garters. Horses are tied by the heads, dogs and bears by the neck, monkeys by the loins, and men by the legs: when a man's over-lusty at legs, then he wears wooden nether-stocks.

Lear. What's he that hath so much thy place mistook

To set thee here?

Kent. It is both he and she;
Your son and daughter.

Lear. No.

Kent. Yes.

Lear. No, I say.

Kent. I say, yea.

Lear. No, no, they would not.

Kent. Yes, they have.

Lear. By Jupiter, I swear, no.

Kent. By Juno, I swear, ay.

Lear. They durst not do't;

They could not, would not do't; 'tis worse than murder,

To do upon respect such violent outrage:
Resolve me, with all modest haste, which way

Thou mightst deserve, or they impose, this usage,

Coming from us.

Kent. My lord, when at their home
I did commend your highness' letters to them,

Ere I was risen from the place that show'd
My duty kneeling, came there a rooking post.

Stew'd in his haste, half-breathless, panting forth

From Goneril his mistress salutations;
Deliver'd letters, spits of intermission,

Which presently they read: on whose contents,
They summon'd up their mainy, straight took

horse;
Commanded me to follow; and attend
The leisure of their answer; gave the cold looks:

And meeting here the other messenger,
Whom welcome, I perceived, had poison'd

Being the very fellow that of late
Display'd so saucily against your highness,—⁴⁰
Having more man than wit about me, drew :
He rais'd the house with loud and coward cries.
Your son and daughter found this trespass
worth

The shame which here it suffers.

Fool. Winter's not gone yet, if the wild-geese fly that way.

Fathers that wear rags

Do make their children blind ;

But fathers that bear bags

Shall see their children kind. ⁵⁰

Fortune, that arrant whore,

Ne'er turns the key to the poor.

But, for all this, thou shalt have as many dolorous for thy daughters as thou canst tell in a year.

Lear. O, how this mother swells up toward my heart !

Hysterica passio, down, thou climbing sorrow,
Thy element's below ! Where is this daughter ?

Kent. With the earl, sir, here within.

Lear. Follow me not ; ^[Exit 60]

Stay here. ^[Exit 60]
Gent. Made you no more offence but what you speak of ?

Kent. None.
How chance the king comes with so small a train ?

Fool. An thou hadst been set i' the stocks for that question, thou hadst well deserved it.

Kent. Why, fool ?

Fool. We'll set thee to school to an ant, to teach thee there's no labouring i' the winter.
All that follow their noses are led by their eyes but blind men ; and there's not a nose among twenty but can smell him that's stinking. Let go thy hold when a great wheel runs down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following it ;
but the great one that goes up the hill, let him draw thee after. When a wise man gives thee better counsel, give me mine again : I would have none but knaves follow it, since a fool gives it.

That sir which serves and seeks for gain,
And follows but for form, ⁸⁰

Will pack when it begins to rain,
And leave thee in the storm.

But I will tarry ; the fool will stay,
And let the wise man fly :

The knave turns fool that runs away ;
The fool no knave, perdy.

Kent. Where learned you this, fool ?

Fool. Not i' the stocks, fool.

Re-enter LEAR, with GLOUCESTER.
Lear. Dost thou speak with me ! They are sick ! they are weary !

all'd all the night ! Mere fetches ;
revols and flying off. ⁹⁰

I see a better answer.

Glow. My dear lord,
How know the fiery quality of the duke ;
How unmovable and fix'd he is

In his own course.

Lear. Vengeance ! plague ! death ! confusion !
Fiery ! what quality ! Why, Gloucester, Glou-

I'd speak with the Duke of Cornwall and his wife.

Glow. Well, my good lord, I have inform'd them so.

Lear. Inform'd them ! Dost thou understand me, man ? ¹⁰⁰

Glow. Ay, my good lord.

Lear. The king would speak with Cornwall ;
the dear father

Would with his daughter speak, commands her service :

Are they inform'd of this ! My breath and
blood !

Fiery ! the fiery duke ! Tell the hot duke
that—

No, but not yet : may be he is not well ;
Infirmity doth still neglect all office

Whereto our health is bound ; we are not ourselves

When nature, being oppress'd, commands the mind

To suffer with the body : I'll forbear ; ¹¹⁰
And am fall'n out with my more headier will,
To take the indisposed and sickly fit

For the sound man. Death on my state !
wherfore ^[Looking on Kent.]

Should he sit here ! This act persuades me
That this remotion of the duke and her

Is practice only. Give me my servant forth.
Go tell the duke and's wife I'd speak with
them,

Now, presently : bid them come forth and hear
me,

Or at their chamber-door I'll beat the drum
Till it cry sleep to death. ¹²⁰

Glow. I would have all well betwixt you. ^[Exit.]

Lear. O me, my heart, my rising heart !
but, down !

Fool. Cry to it, nuncle, as the cockney did to the oels when she put 'em i' the paste alive ;

she knapped 'em o' the coxcombs with a stick,
and cried 'Down, wantons, down !' 'Twas her brother that, in pure kindness to his home, battered his hay.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GLOUCESTER, and Servants.

Lear. Good morrow to you both.

Cor. Hail to your grace !
^[Kent is set at liberty.]

Reg. I am glad to see your highness. ¹³⁰

Lear. Regan, I think you are ; I know what reason

I have to think so : if thou shouldst not be glad,
I would divorce me from thy mother's tomb, Sepulchring an adulteress. ^[To Kent.] O, are you free !

Some other time for that.

Thy sister's naught : O Regan, she Sharp-tooth'd unkindness, like a vulture, here :

I can see your fault ; then, if not better,
With how degenerated a quality—O Regan !

Reg. I pray you, sir, take patience: I have hope
You less knew how to value her desert
Than she to scant her duty.

Lear. Say, how is that?
Reg. I cannot think my sister in the least
Would fall her obligation: if, sir, perchance
She have restrain'd the riots of your followers,
'Tis on such ground, and to such wholesome
end,

As clears her from all blame.

Lear. My curses on her!

Reg. O, sir, you are old;
Nature in you stands on the very verge
Of her confine: you should be ruled and led
By some discretion, that discerns your state
Better than you yourself. Therefore, I pray you,
That to our sister you do make return;
Say you have wrong'd her, sir.

Lear. Ask her forgiveness!
Do you but mark how this becomes the house:
'Dear daughter, I confess that I am old;

[Kneeling.]
Age is unnecessary: on my knees I beg That you'll vouchsafe me raiment, bed, and food.'

Reg. Good sir, no more; these are unightly tricks:

Return you to my sister.

Lear. [Rising.] Never, Regan: 160
She hath abated me of half my train;
Look'd black upon me; struck me with her
tongue,

Most serpent-like, upon the very heart:
All the stored vengeance of heaven fall
On her ingrateful top! Strike her young bones,
You taking airs, with lameness!

Corn. Pity, sir, pity!

Lear. You nimble lightnings, dart your blinding flames
Into her scornful eyes! Infect her beauty,
You fen-suck'd fogs, drawn by this powerful
sun,

To fall and blast her pride! 170

Reg. O the blest gods! so will you wish on
me.

When the rash mood is on.

Lear. No, Regan, thou shalt never have my curse:

Thy tender-hefted nature shall not give These o'er to harshness: her eyes are fierce; but thine

Do comfort and not burn. 'Tis not in thee
To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train,
To bandy hasty words, to scant my sizes,
And in conclusion to oppose the bolt
Against my coming in: thou better know'st
The offices of nature, bond of childhood, 18
Effects of courtesy, dues of gratitude;
Thy half of the kingdom hast thou not forgot,
Wherein I thee endow'd.

Reg. Good sir, to the purpose.
Lear. Who put my man in the stocks?

Corn. What trumpet's that?

Reg. I know't, my sister's: this approves her letter.
That she would soon be here.

Enter OSWALD.

Lear. Is your lady come?
This is a slave, whose easy-borrow'd
pride
wells in the fickle grace of her he follows.
Out, varlet, from my sight!

Corn. What means your grace?
Lear. Who stock'd my servant? Regan, I have good hope 190
Thou didst not know on't. Who comes here!
O heavens,

Enter GONERIL.

If you do love old men, if your sweet sway
Allow obedience, if yourselves are old,
Make it your cause; send down, and take my part!

To Gon. Art not ashamed to look upon this beard?

O Regan, wilt thou take her by the hand?

Gon. Why not by the hand, sir? How have
I offended?

It's not offence that indiscretion finds

And dotage terms so.

Lear. O sides, you are too tough;
Will you yet hold! How came my man in the stocks? 200

Corn. I set him there, sir: but his own disorders

Deserv'd much less advancement.

Lear. You! did you!

Reg. I pray you, father, being weak, seem so.

If, till the expiration of your month,

You will return and sojourn with my sister,

Dismissing half your train, come then to me:

I am now from home, and out of that provision

Which shall be needful for your entertainment.

Lear. Return to her, and fifty men dismiss'd! 210

No, rather I abjure all roofs, and choose

To wage against the enmity o' the air;

To be a comrade with the wolf and owl—

Necessity's sharp pinch! Return with her!

Why, the hot-blooded France, that downy took

Our youngest born, I could as well be brought To kneel his throne, and, snuff-like, paying bag

To keep base life afoot. Return with her!

Persuade me rather to be slave and sumpter

To this detested groom. [Pointing at Oswald.]

Gon. At your choice, sir.

Lear. I prithee, daughter, do not make me mad: 220

I will not trouble thee, my child; farewell!

We'll no more meet, no more see one another:

But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my

daughter;

Or rather a disease that's in my flesh,

Which I must needs call mine; thou art a still

A plague-sore, an embossed carbuncle

In my corrupted blood. But I will not blush to Let shame come when it will; I do not care.

I do not bid the thunder-bearer top

Nor tell tales of thee to high-gigging gossips;

Mind when thou com'st to be shaming; let them

I can be patient; I can stay with sorrow

I and my hundred knights.

Reg. Not altogether so:
I look'd not for you yet, nor am provided For your fit welcome. Give ear, sir, to my sister;

For those that mingle reason with your passion
Must be content to think you old, and so—
But she knows what she does.

Lear. Is this well spoken?
Reg. I dare avouch it, sir: what, fifty followers!

Is it not well? What should you need of more?
Yes, or so many, with that both charge and danger

Speak 'gainst so great a number? How, in one house,

Should many people, under two commands,
Hold amity? 'Tis hard; almost impossible.

Gon. Why might not you, my lord, receive attendance

From those that she calls servants or from mine!

Reg. Why not, my lord? If then they chanced to slack you,

We could control them. If you will come to
me,—

For now I spy a danger,—I entreat you 250
To bring but five and twenty: to no more

Will I give place or notice.

Lear. I gave you all—

Reg. And in good time you gave it.

Lear. Made you my guardians, my deposit-
aries;

But kept a reservation to be follow'd With such a number. What, must I come to
you?

With five and twenty, Regan? said you so?

Reg. And speak 't again, my lord; no more with me.

Lear. Those wicked creatures yet do look well-favour'd,

When others are more wicked; not being the worst 260

Stands in some rank of praise. [To Gon.]
I'll go with thee:

Thy fifty yet doth double five-and-twenty,
And thou art twice her love.

Gon. Hear me, my lord:
What need you five and twenty, ten, or five,

To follow in a house where twice so many
Have a command to tend you?

Reg. What need one?

Lear. O, reason not the need: our basest

Are in the poorest thing superfluous:
Allow not nature more than nature needs,

Man's life's as cheap as beast's: thou art a lady; 270

If only to go warm were gorgeous,
Why, nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st.

Which scarcely keeps thee warm. But, for true need,—

You heavens, give me that patience, patience I need!

You see me here, you gods, a poor old man,
As full of grief as age; wretched in both!

If it be you that stir these daughters' hearts
Against their father, fool me not so much

To bear it tamely; touch me with noble anger,
And let not women's weapons, water-drops, Stain my man's cheeks! No, you unnatural hags, 281

I will have such revenges on you both,
That all the world shall—I will do such things,—

What they are, yet I know not; but they shall be

The terrors of the earth. You think I'll weep;
No, I'll not weep:

I have full cause of weeping; but this heart
Shall break into a hundred thousand flaws,

Or ere I'll weep. O fool, I shall go mad!

[Exeunt Lear, Gloucester, Kent, and Fool.
Storm and tempest.]

Corn. Let us withdraw; 'twill be a storm.

Reg. This house is little: the old man and his people 291

Cannot be well bestow'd.

Gon. 'Tis his own blame; hath put himself from rest,

And must needs taste his folly.

Reg. For his particular, I'll receive him gladly,

But not one follower.

Gon. So am I purposed.

Where is my lord of Gloucester?

Corn. Follow'd the old man forth: he is return'd.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glou. The king is in high rage.

Corn. Whither is he going?

Glou. He calls to horse; but will I know not whither. 300

Corn. 'Tis best to give him way; he leads himself.

Gon. My lord, entreat him by no means to stay.

Glou. Alack, the night comes on, and the bleak winds

Do sorely ruffle; for many miles about
There's scarce a bush.

Reg. O, sir, to wilful men,
The injuries that they themselves procure

Must be their schoolmasters. Shut up your doors:

He is attended with a desperate train;
And what they may incense him to, being apt

To have his ear abused, wisdom bids fear. 310

Corn. Shut up your doors, my lord; 'tis a wild night:

My Regan counsels well: come out o' the storm. [Exeunt.]

ACT III

SCENE I. A Heath.

Storm still. Enter KENT and a Gentleman, meeting.

Kent. Who's there, besides foul weather?

Gent. One minded like the weather, most unquietly.

Kent. I know you. Where's the king?

Gent. Contending with the fretful element;
Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea,
Or swell the curled waters 'bove the main,
That things might change or cease; tears his white hair,

Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless rage,
Catch in their fury, and make nothing of;
Strives in his little world of man to out-scorn
The to-and-fro-conflicting wind and rain. ²¹
This night, wherein the cub-drawn bear would couch,

The lion and the belly-pinched wolf
Keep their fur dry, unbanned he runs,
And bids what will take all.

Kent. But who is with him?

Gent. None but the fool; who labours to out-jest
His heart-struck injuries.

Kent. Sir, I do know you;
And dare, upon the warrant of my note, Commend a dear thing to you. There is division,

Although as yet the face of it be cover'd ²⁰
With mutual cunning, 'twixt Albany and Cornwall;

Who have—as who have not, that their great stars
Throned and set high!—servants, who seem no less,

Which are to France the spies and speculations
Intelligent of our state; what hath been seen,
Either in snuffs and packings of the dukes
Or the hard rein which both of them have borne

Against the old kind king; or something deeper,

Whereof perchance these are but furnishings;
But, true it is, from France there comes a power ³⁰

Into this scatter'd kingdom; who already,
Wise in our negligence, have secret feet
In some of our best ports, and are at point
To show their open banner. Now to you:

If on my credit you dare build so far
To make your speed to Dover, you shall find
Some that will thank you, making just report
Of how unnatural and bemadding sorrow
The king hath cause to plain.

I am a gentleman of blood and breeding; ⁴⁰
And, from some knowledge and assurance, offer
This office to you.

Gent. I will talk further with you.

Kent. No, do not.
For confirmation that I am much more Than my out-wall, open this purse, and take
What it contains. If you shall see Cordelia,—
As fear not but you shall,—show her this ring;
And she will tell you who your fellow is
That yet you do not know. Fie on this storm!
I will go seek the king. ⁵⁰

Gent. Give me your hand: have you no more to say?

Kent. Few words, but, to effect, more than all yet;

That, when we have found the king,—in which

—way, I ——— on him
Holds the other. [Exeunt severally.

SCENE II. Another part of the heath. Storm still.

Enter LEAR and Fool.

Lear. Blow, winds, and crack your cheeks!
rage! blow!

You cataracts and hurricanoes, spout
Till you have drench'd our steeples, drown'd the cocks!

You sulphurous and thought-executing fires,
Vaunt-couriers to oak-cleaving thunderbolts, Singe my white head! And thou, all-shaking thunder,

Smite flat the thick rotundity o' the world!
Crack nature's moulds, all germens spill at once,

That make ingrateful man!

Fool. O nuncle, court holy-water in a dry house is better than this rain-water out o' door.
Good nuncle, in, and ask thy daughters' blessing:
here's a night pities neither wise man nor fool.

Lear. Rumble thy bellyful! Spit, fire!
spout, rain!

Nor rain, wind, thunder, fire, are my daughters;
I tax not you, you elements, with unkindness;
I never gave you kingdom, call'd you children,
You owe me no subscription: then let fall
Your horrible pleasure; here I stand, your slave,

A poor, infirm, weak, and despised old man:
But yet I call you servile ministers,
That have with two pernicious daughters join'd
Your high engender'd battles 'gainst a head
So old and white as this. O! O! 'tis foul!

Fool. He that has a house to put's head in has a good head-piece.

The cod-piece that will house

Before the head has any,

The head and he shall louse;

So beggars marry many. ³⁰

The man that makes his toe

What he his heart should make

Shall of a corn cry woe,

And turn his sleep to wake.

For there was never yet fair woman but she made mouths in a glass.

Lear. No, I will be the pattern of all patience;

I will say nothing.

Enter KENT.

Kent. Who's there?

Fool. Marry, here's grace and a cod-piece;
that's a wise man and a fool. ⁴⁰

Kent. Alas, sir, are you here? things that love night

Love not such nights as these; the wrathful
skies

Gallow the very wanderers of the dark,
And make them keep their caves: since I was
man,

Such sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid
thunder,

Such groans of roaring wind and rain; I never Remember to have heard: man's nature cannot carry

The affliction nor the fear.

Lear. Let the great gods,

That keep this dreadful pother o'er our heads;
Find out their enemies now. Tremble, thou wretch,

That hast within thee undivulged crimes,
Unwhipp'd of justice: hide thee, thou bloody
hand;

Thou perfur'd, and thou simular man of virtue
That art incestuous: caidit, to pieces shake,
That under covert and convenient seeming Hast practis'd on man's life: close pent-up guilt,

Give your concealing continents, and cry
These dreadful summoners grace. I am a man
More stunn'd against than sinning.

Kent. Alack, bare-headed! 60
Gracious my lord, hard by here is a hovel;
Some friendship will it lead you 'gainst the tempest:

Repose you there; while I to this hard house—
More harder than the stones whereof 'tis raised;
Which even but now, demanding after you,
Denied me to come in—return, and force
Their scanty courtesy.

Lear. My wits begin to turn.
Come on, my boy: how dost, my boy? art
cold?

I am cold myself. Where is this straw, my fellow!

The art of our necessities is strange, 70
That can make vile things precious. Come, your hovel.

Poor fool and knave, I have one part in my heart
That's sorry yet for thee.

Fool. [Singing] He that has and a little tiny
wit—

With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,—
Must make content with his fortunes fit,
For the rain it raineth every day.

Lear. True, my good boy. Come, bring us to this hovel. [Exeunt Lear and Kent.]

Fool. This is a brave night to cool a courtisan.

I'll speak a prophecy ere I go: 80

When priests are more in word than matter;
When brewers mar their malt with water;
When nobles are their tailors' tators;
No heretics burn'd, but venches' suitors;
When every case in law is right;
No squire in debt, nor no poor knight;
When slanders do not live in tongues;
Nor cutpurses come not to throngs;
When usurers tell their gold i' the field;
And bawds and whores do churches build;
Then shall the realm of Albion 91

Come to great confusion:
Then comes the time, who lives to see 't,
That going shall be used with feet.

This prophecy Merlin shall make; for I live before his time. [Exit.]

SCENE III. Gloucester's castle.

Enter Gloucester and Edmund.

Glouc. Alack, alack, Edmund, I like not this business of banishing. When I desired their leave that I might play him, they took from me the means of my return; charged me, on pain of their perpetual displeasure, neither to speak of him, entreat for him, nor any way sustain

him.

Edm. Most savage and unnatural!
Glouc. Go to; say you nothing. There's a division betwixt the dukes; and a worse master than that: I have received a letter this night;
'tis dangerous to be spoken: I have locked the letter in my closet: these injuries the king now bears will be revenged home; there's part of a power already footed: we must incline to the king. I will seek him, and privately relieve him:
go you and maintain talk with the duke, that my charity be not of him perceived: if he ask for me, I am ill, and gone to bed. Though I die for it, as no less is threatened me, the king my old master must be relieved. There is some strange thing toward, Edmund; pray
you, be careful. [Exit.]

Edm. This courtesy, forbid thee, shall the duke

Instantly know; and of that letter too:
This seems a fair deserving, and must draw me
That which my father loses; no less than all:
The younger rises when the old doth fall. [Exit.]

SCENE IV. The heath. Before a hovel.

Enter LEAR, KENT, and Fool.

Kent. Here is the place, my lord; good my lord, enter:

The tyranny of the open night's too rough
For nature to endure. [Storm still.]

Lear. Let me alone.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Will break my heart!

Kent. I had rather break mine own. Good my lord, enter.

Lear. Thou think'st 'tis much that this contentious storm
Invades us to the skin: so 'tis to thee;

But where the greater malady is fix'd,
The lesser is scarce felt. Thou 'dst shun a bear;

But if thy flight lay toward the raging sea, 10 Thou 'dst meet the bear i' the mouth. When the mind's free,

The body's delicate: the tempest in my mind
Doth from my senses take all feeling else
Save what beats there. Filial ingratitude!
Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand
For lifting food to 't? But I will punish home:

No, I will weep no more. In such a night
To shut me out! Four on; I will endure.
In such a night as this! O Regan, Goneril!

Your old kind father, whose frank heart gave
all— 20
O, that way madness lies; let me shun that;
No more of that.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Prithas, go in thyself; seek thine own case:

This tempest will not give me leave to ponder
On things would hurt me more. But I'll go in.
[To the Fool] In, boy; go first. You hear how poverty,—
Nay, get thee in. I'll pray, and then I'll sleep.
[Fool goes in.]

Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are,
That hide the pining of this pitiless storm,
How shall your houseless heads and unfed
sides,

Your toup'd and window'd raggedness, defend
you

From seasons such as these? O, I have ta'en
Too little care of this! Take physic, pomp;
Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel,
That thou mayst shake the superflux to them,
And show the heavens more just.

Edg. [Within] Fathom and half, fathom and half! Poor Tom!

[The Fool runs out from the hotel.]

Fool. Come not in here, nuncle, here's a spirit. Help me, help me!

Kent. Give me thy hand. Who's there?

Fool. A spirit, a spirit: he says his name's poor Tom.

Kent. What art thou that dost grumble there i' the straw? Come forth.

Enter EDGAR disguised as a madman.

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Through the sharp hawthorn blows the cold
wind.

Hum! go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.

Lear. Hast thou given all to thy two daughters?

And art thou come to this?

Edg. Who gives any thing to poor Tom?
whom the foul fiend hath led through fire and through flame, through ferd and whirlpool, o'er bog and quagmire; that hath laid knives under his pillow, and halters in his pew; set ratsbane by his porridge; made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting-horse over fourinched bridges, to course his own shadow for a traitor. Bless thy five wits! Tom's a-cold,— O, do da, do da, do da. Bless thee from whirlwinds, star-blasting, and taking! Do poor Tom some charity, whom the foul fiend vexes: there could I have him now,—and there,—and there again, and there.

Lear. What, have his daughters brought him to this pass?

Couldst thou save nothing? Didst thou give them all?

Fool. Nay, he reserved a blanket, else we had been all shamed.

Lear. Now, all the plagues that in the pendulous air

Hang fated o'er men's faults light on thy daughters!

Kent. He hath no daughters, sir.

Lear. Death, traitor! nothing could have subdued nature

To such a lowness but his unkind daughters.
Is it the fashion, that discarded fathers
Should have thus little mercy on their flesh?
Judicious punishment! 'twas this that begot
Those pelican daughters.

Edg. Filibuster sit on Filibuster-hill!

Halloo, halloo, Joe, Joe!

Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.

Edg. Take heed o' the foul fiend: obey thy parents; keep thy word justly; swear not;

commit not with men's sworn oaths; set not thy sweet heart on proud array. Tom's a-cold.

Lear. What hast thou been?

Edg. A serving-man, proud in heart and mind; that outdid my hair: wore gloves in my cap; served the lust of my mistress' heart, and did the act of darkness with her; swore as many oaths as I spake words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven: one that slept in the contriving of lust, and waked to do it:
wine loved I deeply, dice dearly; and in woman out-paramoured the Turk: false of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand; hog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in madness, lion in prey. Let not the creaking of shoes nor the rustling of silks betray thy poor heart to woman: keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy pen from lenders'
books, and defy the foul fiend.

Still through the hawthorn blows the cold
wind:

Says suum, mum, ha, no, nonny.

Dolphin my boy, my boy, seem! let him trot by.

[Storm still.]

Lear. Why, thou wert better in thy grave than to answer with thy uncovered body this extremity of the skies. Is man no more than this? Consider him well. Thou swest the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume. Ha! here's three on's are sophisticated! Thou art the thing itself: unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art.
Off, off, you lendings! come, unbutton here.

[Tearing off his clothes.]
Fool. Prithce, nuncle, be contented; 'tis a naughty night to swim in. Now a little fire in a wild field were like an old lecher's heart; a small spark, all the rest on's body cold. Look, here comes a walking fire.

Enter GLOUCESTER, with a torch.

Edg. This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet;
he begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock; he gives the web and the pin, squints the eye, and makes the hare-lip; maddens the white wheat, and hurts the poor creature of earth.

S. Withold footed thrice the old
He met the night-mare, and her nine-fold.

Bid her alight,
And her troth plight,

And, aroint thee, witch, aroint thee!

Kent. How fares your grace?

Lear. What's he?

Kent. Who's there? What is't you seek?

Glow. What are you there? Your names?

Edg. Poor Tom; that eats the swimming frog, the toad, the tadpole, the wall-newt, and the water; that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend rages, eats raw-dung for pelican;
swallows the old rat and the ditch-dog; drinks the green mantle of the standing pool; who is whipped from tithing to tithing, and stock-punished and harridaned; who hath had three suits to his back, six shirts to his body, horse to ride, and weapon to wear;

that murthered his, and made himself dead;
Have been Tom's food for seven long years.

Beware my follower. Peace, Smulkin; peace, thou fiend!

Glow. What, hath your grace no better company!

Edg. The prince of darkness is a gentleman: Modest he's call'd, and Mahu.

Glow. Our flesh and blood is grown so vile, my lord, 150

That it doth hate what gets it.

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.

Glow. Go in with me; my duty cannot suffer To obey in all your daughters' hard commands: Though their injunction be to bar my doors, And let this tyrannous night take hold upon you,

Yet have I ventured to come seek you out, And bring you where both fire and food is ready.

Lear. First let me talk with this philosopher. What is the cause of thunder? 160

Kent. Good my lord, take his offer; go into the house.

Lear. I'll talk a word with this same learned Theban.

What is your study?

Edg. How to prevent the fiend, and to kill vermin.

Lear. Let me ask you one word in private.

Kent. Importune him once more to go, my lord;

His wits begin to unsettle.

Glow. Canst thou blame him? [Storm still. His daughters seek his death; ah, that good Kent!

He said it would be thus, poor banish'd man! Thou say'st the king grows mad; I'll tell thee, friend, 170

I am almost mad myself: I had a son, Now outlaw'd from my blood; he sought my life, But lately, very late: I loved him, friend: No father his son dearer: truth to tell thee, The grief hath crazed my wits. What a night's this!

I do beseech your grace,—

Lear. O, cry you mercy, sir.

Noble philosopher, your company.

Edg. Tom's a-cold.

Glow. In, fellow, there, into the hovel: keep thee warm.

Lear. Come, let's in all.

Kent. This way, my lord.

Lear. With him;

I will keep still with my philosopher. 181

Kent. Good my lord, soothe him; let him take the fellow.

Glow. Take him you on.

Kent. Sirrah, come on; go along with us.

Lear. Come, good Athenian.

Glow. No words, no words: hush.

Edg. Child Rowland to the dark tower came, His word was still,—Fie, lo! and fum,

I smell the blood of a British man. [Exeunt.

SCENE V. Gloucester's castle.

Enter CORNWALL and EDMUND.

Corn. I will have my revenge ere I depart this house.

Edm. How, my lord, I may be censured, that nature thus gives way to loyalty, something fears me to think of.

Corn. I now perceive, it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him seek his death; but a provoking merit, set a-work by a reprovable badness in him. 19

Edm. How malicious is fortune, that I must repent to be just! This is the letter he spoke of, which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O heavens! that this treason were not, or not I the detector!

Corn. Go with me to the duchess.

Edm. If the matter of this paper be certain, you have mighty business in hand.

Corn. True or false, it hath made these ears of Gloucester. Seek out where thy father is, that he may be ready for our apprehension. 20

Edm. [Aside] If I find him comforting the king, it will stuff his suspicion more fully.—I will persevere in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood.

Corn. I will lay trust upon thee; and thou shalt find a dearer father in my love. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI. A chamber in a farmhouse adjoining the castle.

Enter GLOUCESTER, LEAR, KENT, Fool, and EDGAR.

Glow. Here is better than the open air; take it thankfully. I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can: I will not be long from you.

Kent. All the power of his wits have given way to his impatience: the gods reward your kindness! [Exit Gloucester.

Edg. Frateretto calls me; and tells me Nero is an angler in the lake of darkness. Pray, innocent, and beware the foul fiend.

Fool. Prithee, nuncle, tell me whether a madman be a gentleman or a yeoman? 21

Lear. A king, a king!

Fool. No, he's a yeoman that has a gentleman to his son; for he's a mad yeoman that sees his son a gentleman before him.

Lear. To have a thousand with red burning spits

Come hissing in upon 'em,—

Edg. The foul fiend bites my back.

Fool. He's mad that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse's health, a boy's love, or a whore's oath. 22

Lear. It shall be done; I will arraign them straight.

[To Edgar] Come, sit thou here, most learned justice:

[To the Fool] Thou, sapient sir, sit here. Now, you see the loxes!

Edg. Look, where he stands and glares! Wantest thou eyes at trial, madam?

Lear. Come o'er the bourn, Bussy, to me,—

Fool. Her boat hath a leak,

And she must not speak. 23

Why she dares not come over to thee.

Edg. The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale. Hopeance cries in Tom's belly for two white herring. Croak not, black angel; I have no food for thee.

Kent. How do you, sir? Stand you not so amazed:

Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions? Lear. I'll see their trial first. Bring in the evidence.

[To Edgar] Thou robed man of justice, take thy place;

[To the Fool] And thou, his yoke-fellow of equity,

Bench by his side: [To Kent] you are o' the commission, 40
Sit you too.

Edg. Let us deal justly.

Sleepest or wakest thou, jolly shepherd?

Thy sheep be in the corn;

And for one blast of thy minikin mouth,

Thy sheep shall take no harm.

Pur! the cat is gray.

Lear. Arraign her first; 'tis Goneril. I here take my oath before this honourable assembly, she kicked the poor king her father. 50

Fool. Come hither, mistress. Is your name Goneril?

Lear. She cannot deny it.

Fool. Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool.

Lear. And here's another, whose warp'd looks proclaim
What store her heart is made on. Stop her there!

Arms, arms, sword, fire! Corruption in the place!

False justicer, why hast thou let her 'scape?

Edg. Bless thy five wits! 60

Kent. O pity! Sir, where is the patience now,

That you so oft have boasted to retain?

Edg. [Aside] My tears begin to take his part so much,

They'll mar my counterfeiting.

Lear. The little dogs and all,

Tray, Blanch, and Sweet-heart, see, they bark at me.

Edg. Tom will throw his head at them. Avaunt, you curs!

Be thy mouth or black or white,

Tooth that poisons if it bite;

Mastiff, greyhound, mongrel grim,

Blound or spaniel, brach or lyn,

Or bobtail like or trundle-tail,

Tom will make them weep and wail:

For, with throwing thus my head,

Dogs leap the hatch, and all are fled.

Do, do, de, de, de. Sence! Come, march to wakes and fairs and market-towns. Poor Tom, thy horn is dry. 70

Lear. Then let them anatomise Regan; see what breeds about her heart. Is there any cause in nature that makes these hard hearts?

[To Edgar] You, sir, I entertain for one of my hundred; only I do not like the fashion of your garments; you will say they are Persian attire; but let them be changed.

Kent. Now, good my lord, lie here and rest awhile.

Lear. Make no noise, make no noise; draw the curtains; so, so, so. We'll go to supper 't the morning. So, so, so. 91

Fool. And I'll go to bed at noon.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glou. Come hither, friend: where is the king my master?

Kent. Here, sir; but trouble him not, his wits are gone.

Glou. Good friend, I prithee, take him in thy arms;

I have o'erheard a plot of death upon him:

There is a litter ready; lay him in't, And drive towards Dover, friend, where thou shalt meet

Both welcome and protection. Take up thy master: 99

If thou shouldst dally half an hour, his life, With thine, and all that offer to defend him,

Stand in assured loss: take up, take up;

And follow me, that will to some provision

Give thee quick conduct.

Kent. Oppressed nature sleeps: This rest might yet have balm'd thy broken sinews, Which, if convenience will not allow,

Stand in hard cure. [To the Fool] Come, help to bear thy master;

Thou must not stay behind.

Glou. Come, come, away.

[Exeunt all but Edgar.]

Edg. When we our betters see bearing our woes,

We scarcely think our miseries our foes. 100

Who alone suffers suffers most 't the mind,

Leaving free thifters and happy shows behind:

But then the mind much sufferance doth o'erskip,

When grief hath mates, and bearing fellowship.

How light and portable my pain seems now,

When that which makes me bend makes me

king bow,

He childed as I father'd! Tom, away!

Mark the high noises; and thyself bewray,

When false opinion, whose wrong thought defiles thee,

In thy just proof, repeals and reconciles thee.

What will hap more to-night, safe 'scape the

king! 101

Lurk, lurk. [Exit.]

SCENE VII. Gloucester's castle.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GONERIL, EDMUND, and Servants.

Corn. Post speedily to my lord your husband; show him this letter: the army of France is landed. Seek out the villain Gloucester.

[Exeunt some of the Servants.]

Reg. Hang him instantly.

Gon. Pluck out his eyes.

Corn. Leave him to my displeasure. Edmund, keep you our sister company: the ravens we are bound to take upon your traitorous father are not fit for your beholding. Advise the duke, where you are going, to a most tedious preparation: we are bound to the like. Our guests shall he swift and intelligent betwixt us. Farewell, dear sister: farewell, my lord of Gloucester.

Enter OSWALD.

How now! where's the king?

Osw. My lord of Gloucester hath convey'd him hence:

Some five or six and thirty of his knights,
Hot questuists after him, met him at gate;
Who, with some other of the lords dependants,
Are gone with him towards Dover; where they boast

To have well-armed friends.

Corn. Get horses for your mistress. so

Gon. Farewell, sweet lord, and sister.

Corn. Edmund, farewell.

[Exit Goneril, Edmund, and Oswald.]

Go seek the traitor Gloucester,
Pinch him like a thief, bring him before us.

[Exit other Servants.]

Though well we may not pass upon his life
Without the form of justice, yet our power
Shall do a courtesy to our wrath, which men May blame, but not control. Who's there? the traitor!

Enter GLOUCESTER, brought in by two or three.

Reg. Ingrateful fox! 'tis he.

Corn. Bind fast his corky arms.

Glow. What mean your graces? Good my friends, consider

You are my guests: do me no foul play, friends.

Corn. Bind him, I say. [Servants bind him.]

Reg. Hard, hard. O sly traitor!

Glow. Unmerciful lady as you are, I'm none.

Corn. To this chair bind him. Villain, thou shalt find—

[Regan plucks his beard.]

Glow. By the kind gods, 'tis most ignobly done

To pinch me by the beard.

Reg. So white, and such a traitor!

Glow. Naughty lady,
These hairs, which thou dost ravish from my
chin,

Will quicken, and accuse thee: I am your host:
With robbers' hands my hospitable favours
You should not ruffle thus. What will you do?

Corn. Come, sir, what letters had you late from France?

Reg. Be simple answerer, for we know the truth.

Corn. And what confederacy have you with the traitors

Late feated in the kingdom?

Reg. To whose hands have you sent the humiliating king?

Speak.

Glow. I have a letter grossingly set down,
Which came from one that's of a neutral heart,
And not from one opposed.

Corn. Cunning.

Reg. And false.

Corn. Where hast thou sent the king? so

Glow. To Dover.

Reg. Whither to Dover? What thou dost durst at such—

Corn. Whither to Dover? Let him first

Glow. I am tied to the stake, and I must stand the course.

Reg. Whither to Dover, sir?

Glow. Because I would not see my cruel nails

Pluck out his poor old eyes; nor thy fierce sister
In his anointed flesh stick bores of iron.

The sea, with such a storm as his bare head
In hell-black night endured, would have buoy'd
up,

And quench'd the stelled fires.
Yet, poor old heart, he hop'd the heavens to rain.

If wolves had at thy gate howl'd that stern
time,

Thou shouldst have said 'Good porter, turn the key,

All cruels else subscribed: but I shall see
The winged vengeance overtake such children.

Corn. See't shalt thou never. Fellows, hold the chair.

Upon these eyes of thine I'll set my foot.

Glow. He that will think to live till he be old,

Give me some help! O cruel! O you gods! 70
Reg. One side will mock another; the other
too.

Corn. If you see vengeance,—

First Serv. Hold your hand, my lord:
I have served you ever since I was a child;

But better service have I never done you
Than now to bid you hold.

Reg. How now, you dog!

First Serv. If you did wear a beard upon your chin,

I'd shake it on this quarrel. What do you mean?

Corn. My villain! [They draw and fight.]

First Serv. Nay, then, come on, and take the chance of anger.

Reg. Give me thy sword. A peasant stand up thus!

[Takes a sword, and runs at him behind.]

First Serv. O, I am slain! My lord, you have one eye left

To see some mischief on him. O! [Dies.]

Corn. Let it see more, prevent it. Out, vile jelly!

Where is thy lustre now?

Glow. All dark and comfortable. Where's my son Edmund?

Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of nature,
To quit this horrid act.

Reg. Out, treacherous villain!

Thou call'st on him that hates thee: It was he
That made the overture of thy treason to us;

'Tis too good to pity thee.

Glow. O my follies! then Edgar was abused.
Kind gods, forgive me that, and prosper him!

Reg. Go thrust him out at gates, and let him smell

His way to Dover.

How is't, my lord?

Corn. I have received a hurt: follow me,
lady.

Turn out that cruel villain; thrust this slave Upon the daggers. Regan, I bleed upon timely comes this hurt: give me your arm.

[Exit Cornwall, led by Regan.]

Sec. Serv. I'll never care what wickedness
I do,
If this man come to good.

Third Serv. If she live long, 100
And in the end meet the old course of death,
Women will all turn monsters.

Sec. Serv. Let's follow the old earl, and get the Bedlam
To lead him where he would: his roguish madness

Allows itself to any thing.

Third Serv. Go thou: I'll fetch some flax and whites of eggs
To apply to his bleeding face. Now, heaven help him! [Exeunt severally.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I. The heath.

Enter EDGAR.

Edg. Yet better thus, and known to be con-temn'd,
Than still condemn'd and flatter'd. To be worst,
The lowest and most dejected thing of fortune,
Stands still in esperance, lives not in fear:
The lamentable change is from the best;
The worst returns to laughter. Welcome, then,
Thou unsubstantial air that I embrace!
The wretch that thou hast blown unto the worst
Owes nothing to thy blasts. But who comes here!

Enter GLOUCESTER, led by an Old Man.

My father, poorly led! World, world, O world!
But that thy strange mutations make us hate
thee,

Life would not yield to age.

Old Man. O, my good lord, I have been your tenant, and your father's tenant, these fourscore years.

Glow. Away, get thee away; good friend, be
gone;

Thy comforts can do me no good at all;
Thee they may hurt.

Old Man. Alack, sir, you cannot see your way.

Glow. I have no way, and therefore want no
eyes;

I stumbled when I saw: full oft 'tis seen,
Our means secure us, and our mere defects
Prove our commodities. O dear son Edgar,
The food of thy abused father's wrath!
Might I but live to see thee in my touch,
I'd say I had eyes again!

Old Man. How now! Who's there?
Edg. [Aside] O gods! Who is't can say 'I am at the worst'!

I am worse than e'er I was.

Old Man. 'Tis poor mad Tom.
Edg. [Aside] And worse I may be yet: the worst is not

So long as we can say 'This is the worst.' 30

Old Man. Fellow, where goest?
Glow. Is it a beggar-man

Old Man. Madman and beggar too.

Glow. He has some reason, else he could not beg.

the last night's storm I such a fellow saw;
Which made me think a man a worm: my son
Came then into my mind; and yet my mind
Was then scarce friends with him: I have heard more since.

As flies to wanton boys, are we to the gods,
They kill us for their sport.

Edg. [Aside] How should this be! 30
Bad is the trade that must play fool to sorrow,
Angering itself and others.—Bless thee, master!

Glow. Is that the naked fellow?

Old Man. Ay, my lord.
Glow. Then, prithee, get thee gone: if, for my sake,

Thou wilt o'ertake us, hence a mile or twain,
I'll the way toward Dover, do it for ancient love;
And bring some covering for this naked soul,
Who I'll entreat to lead me.

Old Man. Alack, sir, he is mad.
Glow. 'Tis the times' plague, when madmen lead the blind.

Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure;
Above the rest, be gone.

Old Man. I'll bring him the best 'parel that I have, [Exit.]

Come on't what will. [Exit.]
Glow. Sirrah, naked fellow,—

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold. [Aside] I cannot daub it further.

Glow. Come hither, fellow.

Edg. [Aside] And yet I must.—Bless thy sweet eyes, they bleed.

Glow. Know'st thou the way to Dover?

Edg. Both stile and gate, horse-way and foot-path. Poor Tom hath been scared out of his good wits: bless thee, good man's son, from the foul fiend! five fiends have been in poor Tom at once; of lust, as Oldcut; Hobdidi-dance, prince of dumbness; Mahu, of stealing;
Modo, of murder; Flibbertigibbet, of mopping and mowing, who since possesses chambermaids and waiting-women. So, bless thee,
master!

Glow. Here, take this purse, thou' whom the heavens' plagues

Have humbled to all strokes: that I am wretched

Makes thee the happier: heavens, deal so still!
Let the superfluous and lust-dieted man, 70

That slaves your ordinance, that will not see Because he doth not feel, feel your power quickly;

So distribution should undo excess,

And each man have enough. Dost thou know Dover?

Edg. Ay, master.

Glow. There is a cliff, whose high and bending head

Looks fearfully in the confined deep:
Bring me but to the very brim of it,

And I'll repair the misery that dost bear
With something rich about me; from that place

I shall no leading need.

Edg. Give me thy arm: 80
Poor Tom shall lead thee. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Before the Duke of Albany's palace.

Enter GONERIL and EDMUND.

Gon. Welcome, my lord: I marvel our mild husband
Not met us on the way.

Enter OSWALD.

Osw. Now, where's your master?
One, Madam, within; but never man so changed.

I told him of the army that was landed;
He smiled at it: I told him you were coming;
His answer was 'The worse:' of Gloucester's treachery,

And of the loyal service of his son,
When I inform'd him, then he call'd me sot,
And told me I had turn'd the wrong side out:
What most he should dislike seems pleasant to him;

What like, offensive.
Gon. [To Edm.] Then shall you go no further.

It is the cowish terror of his spirit,
That dares not undertake: he'll not feel wrongs
Which tie him to an answer. Our wishes on the way

May prove effects. Back, Edmund, to my brother;

Hasten his musters and conduct his powers:
I must change arms at home, and give the distaff

Into my husband's hands. This trusty servant
Shall pass between us: ere long you are like to hear,

If you dare venture in your own behalf,
As a mistress's command. Wear this; spare speech;
[Giving a favour.]

Decline your head: this kiss, if it durst speak,
Would stretch thy spirits up into the air:
Conceive, and fare thee well.

Edm. Yours in the ranks of death.
Gon. My most dear Gloucester!

O, the difference of man and man!
To thee a woman's services are due:
My fool usurps my body.

Osw. Madam, here comes my lord.
[Exit.]

Enter ALBANY.

Gon. I have been worth the whistle.
Alb. O Goneril!

You are not worth the dust which the rude wind

Blows in your face. I fear your disposition:
That nature, which contemns its origin,
Cannot be harder'd certain in itself;
She that herself will sliver and disbranch
From her material sap, perforce must wither
And come to deadly use.

Gon. I am sure; the text is foolish.
Alb. I am sure; and goodness to the vile seem

What have you

Tigers, not daughters, what have you perform'd?
A father, and a gracious aged man,

Whose reverence even the head-lugg'd bear
would lick,

Most barbarous, most degenerate! have you maddened.

Could my good brother suffer you to do it!
A man, a prince, by him so benighted!

If that the heavens do not their visible spirits
Send quickly down to tame these vile offences,
It will come,

Humanity must perforce prey on itself,
Like monsters of the deep.

Gon. Milk-liver'd man! so
That bear'st a cheek for blows, a head for wrongs:

Who hast not in thy brows an eye discerning
Thine honour from thy suffering; that not know'st

Fools do those villains pity who are punish'd
Ere they have done their mischief. Where's thy drum?

France spreads his banners in our noiseless
land,

With plumed helm thy state begins to threat;
Whiles thou, a moral fool, sit'st still, and criest
'Alack, why does he so?'

Alb. See thyself, devil!
Proper deformity seems not in the fiend

So horrid as in woman.

Gon. O vain fool!
Alb. Thou changed and self-cover'd thing,
for shame,

Be-monster not thy feature. Were't my fitness
To let these hands obey my blood,

They are apt enough to dislocate and tear
Thy flesh and bones: how'er thou art a fiend;
A woman's shape doth shield thee.

Gon. Marry, your manhood now—

Enter a Messenger.

Alb. What news?
Mess. O, my good lord, the Duke of Corn-wall's dead;

Slain by his servant, going to put out
The other eye of Gloucester.

Alb. Gloucester's eyes!
Mess. A servant that he bred, thrill'd with remorse,

Opposed against the act, bending his sword
To his great master; who, thereat enraged, Flew on him, and amongst them fell'd him
dead;

But not without that harmful stroke, which since

Hath pluck'd him after.

Alb. This shows you are above,
You justicers, that these our nether crimes
So speedily can venge! But, O poor Gloucester!
Lost he his other eye!

Mess. Both, both, my lord. A
This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer;
Tis from your sister.

Gon. [Aside] One way I like this well:
But being widow, and my Gloucester with her,
May all the building in my fancy pluck
Upon my hateful life: another way,

The news is not so tart.—I'll read, and answer.

[Exit.]

Alb. Where was his son when they did take his eyes?

Mess. Come with my lady hither.

Alb. He is not here.

Mess. No, my good lord; I met him back again.

Alb. Knows he the wickedness?

Mess. Ay, my good lord; 'twas he inform'd against him;

And quit the house on purpose, that their punishment Might have the freer course.

Alb. Gloucester, I live To thank thee for the love thou show'st the king.

And to revenge thine eyes. Come hither, friend!

Tell me what more thou know'st. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. The French camp near Dover.

Enter KENT and a Gentleman.

Kent. Why the King of France is so suddenly gone back know you the reason?

Gent. Something he left imperfect in the state, which since his coming forth is thought of; which imports to the kingdom so much fear and danger, that his personal return was most required and necessary.

Kent. Who hath he left behind him general?

Gent. The Marshal of France, Monsieur La Far.

Kent. Did your letters pierce the queen to any demonstration of grief?

Gent. Ay, sir; she took them, read them in my presence;

And now and then an ample tear fell'd down Her delicate cheek: it seem'd she was a queen Over her passion; who, most rebel-like, Bought to be king o'er her.

Kent. O, then it moved her.

Gent. Not to a rage: patience and sorrow strove

Who should express her goodliest. You have seen

Sunshine and rain at once: her smiles and tears

Were like a better way: those happy smiles, That play'd on her ripe lip, seem'd not to know

What guests were in her eyes; which parted thence,

As pearls from diamonds dropp'd. In brief, Sorrow would be a rarity most beloved,

If all could so become it.

Kent. Must she no verbal question?

Gent. Faith, once or twice she heaved the name of 'father'

Painfully forth, as if it press'd her heart;

Cried 'Sisters! sisters! Shame on ladies' sisters!

Kent. father! sisters! What, 's the storm? 's the night?

Let pity not be believed! There she shook

The holy water from her heavenly eyes, And clamour meltin'd; then away she started

To deal with grief alone.

Kent. It is the stars, 'he stars above us, govern our conditions; Else one self mate and mate could not begot Such different issues. You spoke not with her since!

Gent. No.

Kent. Was this before the king return'd?

Gent. No, since.

Kent. Well, sir, the poor distressed Lear's in the town;

Who sometime, in his better tune, remembers What we are come about, and by no means Will yield to see his daughter.

Gent. Why, good sir!

Kent. A sovereign shame so elbows him: his own unkindness,

That stripp'd her from his benediction, turn'd her To foreign casualties, gave her dear rights To his dog-hearted daughters, these things sting His mind so venomously, that burning shame Detains him from Cordelia.

Gent. Alack, poor gentleman!

Kent. Of Albany's and Cornwall's powers you heard not?

Gent. 'Tis so, they are afoot.

Kent. Well, sir, I'll bring you to our master Lear,

And leave you to attend him: some dear cause Will in concealment wrap me up awhile;

When I am known aright, you shall not grieve Lending me this acquaintance. I pray you, go

Along with me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. The same. A tent.

Enter, with drum and colours, CORNBELIA, Doctor, and Soldiers.

Cor. Alack, 'tis he: why, he was met even now

As mad as the ver'd sea; singing aloud;

Crown'd with rank fumiter and furrow-weeds, With bur-docks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-

flowers, Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow

In our sustaining corn. A century and forth;

Search every acre in the high-grown field, And bring him to our eye. [Exit an Officer.]

What can man's wisdom In the restoring his bereaved sense?

He that helps him take all my outward worth.

Doct. There is means, madam:

Our foster-nurse of nature is repose, The which he lacks; that to provoke in him,

Are many simples operative, whose power Will close the eye of anguish.

Cor. All blurt omits, All you unpublik'd virtues of the marsh,

Spring with my tears! be abundant and unfeigned In the good man's distress! Seek, seek for him;

Lost his ungodly rage dissolve the life That wants the means to lead it.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. News, madam; the British powers are rolling downward.

Cor. 'Tis known before; our preparation stands
In expectation of them. O dear father,
It is thy business that I go about;
Therefore great France
My mourning and important tears hath pitied.
No blown ambition doth our arms incite,
But love, dear love, and our aged father's right:
Soon may I hear and see him! [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Gloucester's castle.

Enter REGAN and OSWALD.

Reg. But are my brother's powers set forth?
Osw. Ay, madam.
Reg. Himself in person there?
Osw. Madam, with much ado:
Your sister is the better soldier.
Reg. Lord Edmund spake not with your lord at home?
Osw. No, madam.
Reg. What might import my sister's letter
to him?
Osw. I know not, lady.
Reg. Faith, he is posted hence on serious matter.

It was great ignorance, Gloucester's eyes being
out.
To let him live: where he arrives he moves 10
All hearts against us: Edmund, I think, is in pity of his misery, to dispatch
His nighted life; moreover, to decry
The strength of the enemy.

Osw. I must needs after him, madam, with my letter.
Reg. Our troops set forth to-morrow: stay with us;
The ways are dangerous.

Osw. I may not, madam:
I charged my duty in this business.
Why should she write to Edmund?
—ight not you
Transport her purposes by word? Belike, 20 Something—I know not what: I'll love thee
much,
Let me unseal the letter.

Osw. Madam, I had rather—
Reg. I know your lady does not love her husband;
I am sure of that: and at her late being here
She gave strange cellades and most speaking looks
To noble Edmund. I know you are of her bosom.

Osw. I, madam!
Reg. I speak in understanding; you are, I know it.
Therefore I do advise you, take this note:
My lord is dead; Edmund and I have talk'd;
And more convenient is he for my hand 30
Than for your lady's: you may gather more.
If you do find him, pray you, give him this;
And when your mistress hears thus much from
you,
I pray, desire her call her wisdom to her.
So, fare you well.
If you do chance to hear of that blind traitor,

Preferment falls on him that cuts him off.
Osw. Would I could meet him, madam! I should show
What party I do follow.
Reg. Fare thee well. [Exeunt. 40]

SCENE VI. Fields near Dover.

Enter GLOUCESTER, and EDGAR dressed like a peasant.

Glou. When shall we come to the top of that same hill?
Edg. You do climb up it now: look, how we labour.
Glou. Methinks the ground is even.
Edg. Horrible steep.
Hark, do you hear the sea? No, truly.
Glou. Why, then, your other senses grow imperfect
By your eyes' anguish.

Glou. So may it be, indeed:
Methinks thy voice is alter'd; and thou speak'st
In better phrase and matter than thou didst.
Edg. You're much deceived: in nothing am
I changed

But in my garments.
Glou. Methinks you're better spoken. 10
Edg. Come on, sir; here's the place: stand still. How fearful
And dizzy 'tis, to cast one's eyes so low!
The crows and choughs that wing the midway
air

Show scarce so gross as beetles: half way down
Hangs one that gathers samphire, dreadful trade!
Methinks he seems no bigger than his head:
The fishermen, that walk upon the beach,
Appear like mice; and yond tall anchoring
bark,

Diminish'd to her cock; her cock, a buoy
Almost too small for sight: the murmuring surge, 20
That on the unnumber'd idle pebbles chafes,
Cannot be heard so high. I'll look no more;
Lest my brain turn, and the deficient sight
Topple down headlong.

Glou. Set me where you stand.
Edg. Give me your hand: you are now within a foot
Of the extreme verge: for all beneath the moon
Would I not leap upright.

Glou. Let go my hand.
Here, friend, 's another purse; in it a jewel
Well worth a poor man's taking: fairies and gods
Prosper it with thee! Go thou farther off; 30
Bid me farewell, and let me hear thee going.

Edg. Now fare you well, good sir.
Glou. With all my heart.
Edg. Why I do trifle thus with his despair
Is done to cure it.
Glou. [Kneeling.] O you mighty gods!
This world I do renounce, and, in your sights,
Shake patiently my great affliction off;
If I could bear it longer, and not fall,
To quarrel with your great opposèd wills,
My snuff and loathed part of nature should 39

Burn itself out. If Edgar live, O, bless him!
Now, fellow, fare thee well. [He falls forward.]

Edg. Gone, sir: farewell.
And yet I know not how conceit may rob
The treasury of life, when life itself Yields to the thief: had he been where he thought,

By this, had thought been past. Alive or dead!
Ho, you sir! friend! Hear you, sir! speak!
Thus might he pass indeed: yet he revives.
What are you, sir?

Glou. Away, and let me die.
Edg. Hadst thou been sought but gossamer, feathers, air,
So many fathoms down precipitating,
Thou 'dst shiver'd like an egg: but thou dost
breathe;
Hast heavy substance; bleed'st not; speak'st;
art sound.

Ten masts at each make not the altitude
Which thou hast perpendicularly fell:
Thy life's a miracle. Speak yet again.

Glou. But have I fall'n, or no?

Edg. From the dread summit of this chalky bourn.

Look up a-height; the shrill-gorged lark so far
Cannot be seen or heard: do but look up.

Glou. Alack, I have no eyes. 60
Is wretchedness deprived that benefit,
To end itself by death? 'Twas yet some comfort,

When misery could beguile the tyrant's rage,
And frustrate his proud will.

Edg. Give me your arm:
Up: so. How is 't? Feel you your legs? You
stand.

Glou. Too well, too well.

Edg. This is above all strangeness.
Upon the crown o' the cliff, what thing was
that
Which parted from you?

Glou. A poor unfortunate beggar.

Edg. As I stood here below, methought his
eyes
Were two full moons; he had a thousand noses, 70

Horns whelk'd and waved like the enridged sea:

It was some fiend; therefore, thou happy father,
Think that the clearest gods, who make them
honours

Of men's impossibilities, have preserved thee.

Glou. I do remember now: henceforth I'll bear
Affliction till it do cry out itself

'Enough, enough,' and die. That thing you speak of,

I took it for a man; often 'twould say
'The fiend, the fiend:' he led me to that place.

Edg. Bear free and patient thoughts. But who comes here! 80

Enter LEAR, fantastically dressed with wild flowers.

The safer sense will ne'er accommodate
His master thus.

Lear. No, they cannot touch me for coining
I am the king himself.

Nature's above art in that respect.
There's your press-mongy. That fellow handles his bow like a crow-keeper: draw me a clothier's yard. Look, look, a mouse! Peace, peace; this piece of toasted cheese will do 't. There's my gauntlet; I'll prove it on a giant. Bring up the brown bills. O, well down, bird! 't the clout, 't the clout: hewh! Give the word.

Edg. Sweet marjoram.

Lear. Pass.

Glou. I know that voice.

Lear. Ha! Goneril, with a white beard!
They flattered me like a dog; and told me I had white hairs in my beard ere the black ones were there. To say 'ay' and 'no' to every thing that I said!—'Ay' and 'no' too was no good divinity. When the rain came to wet me once, and the wind to make me chatter; when the thunder would not peace at my bidding;
there I found 'em, there I smelt 'em out. Go to, they are not men o' their words: they told me I was every thing; 'tis a lie, I am not agueproof.

Glou. The trick of that voice I do well remember:

Is 't not the king?

Lear. Ay, every inch a king: 100
When I do stare, see how the subject quakes.
I pardon that man's life. What was thy cause?
Adultery!

Thou shalt not die: die for adultery! No:
The wren goes to 't, and the small gilded fly
Does lecher in my sight.

Let copulation thrive; for Gloucester's bastard
son

Was kinder to his father than my daughters
Got 'twixen the lawful sheets.

To 't, luxury, pell-mell! for I lack soldiers.
Behold yond simpering dame, 120

Whose face between her forks presages snow;
That minces virtue, and does shake the head

To hear of pleasure's name;
The fitchew, nor the soiled horse, goes to 't

With a more riotous appetite.
Down from the waist they are Centaurs,

Though women all above:
But to the girdle do the gods inherit,

Beneath is all the fiends';
There's hell, there's darkness, there's the sulphurous pit, 130

Burning, scalding, stench, consumption; fie, fie, fie! pah, pah! Give me an ounce of civet, good apothecary, to sweeten my imagination:

there's money for thee.

Glou. O, let me kiss that hand!

Lear. Let me wipe it first; it smells of mortality.

Glou. O ruin'd piece of nature! This great world

Shall so wear out to nought. Dost thou know
me?

Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough.
Dost thou squiny at me? No, do thy worst, blind Cupid; I'll not love. Read thus this challenge; mark but the penning of it.

Glou. Were all the letters wives, I could not see one.

Edg. I would not take this from report;
it is,
And my heart breaks at it.

Lear. Read.

Glou. What, with the case of eyes?

Lear. O, ho, are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse! Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light: yet you see how this world goes.

Glou. I see it feelingly.

Lear. What, art mad? A man may see how this world goes with no eyes. Look with thine ears: see how yond justice rails upon yond simple thief. Hark, in thine ear: change places; and, handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief! Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar!

Glou. Ay, sir.

Lear. And the creature run from the cur!
There thou mightst behold the great image of authority: a dog's obeyed in office.

Thou rascal beadle, hold thy bloody hand!
Why dost thou lash that whore? Strip thine own back;

Thou hotly lust'st to use her in that kind
For which thou whipp'st her. The usurer hangs the cozener.

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear;
Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin with gold,

And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks;
Arm it in rags, a pigmy's straw does pierce it.
None does offend, none, I say, none; I'll abide 'em:

Take that of me, my friend, who have the
power

To seal the accuser's lips. Get these glass eyes;
And, like a scurvy politician, seem
To see the things thou dost not. Now, now,

now, now:
Pull off my boots: harder, harder: so.

Edg. O, matter and impertinency mix'd!
Reason in madness!

Lear. If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take my eyes.

I know thee well enough; thy name is Gloucester:

Thou must be patient; we came crying hither:
Thou know'st, the first time that we smell the
air,

We wawl and cry. I will preach to thee: mark.
Glou. Alack, alack the day!

Lear. When we are born, we cry that we are come

To this great stage of fools: this's a good block;
It were a delicate stratagem, to shoe
A troop of horse with felt: I'll put 't in proof;
And when I have stol'n upon these sons-in-law,
Then, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill!

Enter a Gentleman, with Attendants.

Glou. O, here he is: lay hand upon him. Sir,
Your most dear daughter—

Lear. No rescue! What, a prisoner! I am

The natural fool of fortune. Use me well;
I shall have surgeons
To cut out the brain.

Glou. You shall have any thing.

Lear. No seconds! all myself!
Why, this would make a man a man of salt,
To use his eyes for garden water-pots,
Ay, and laying autumn's dust.

Glou. Good sir,—
What!

I will die bravely, like a bridegroom.
What!
I will be jovial: come, come; I am a king,
My masters, know you that.

Glou. You are a royal one, and we obey
you.

Lear. Then there's life in 't. Nay, if you get it, you shall get it with running. Exit running: Attendants follow.

Glou. A sight most pitiful in the meanest
wretch,

Past speaking of in a king! Thou hast one daughter,

Who redeems nature from the general curse
Which twain have brought her to.

Edg. Hail, gentle sir.

Glou. Sir, speed you: what's your will?

Edg. Do you hear aught, sir, of a battle toward?

Glou. Most sure and vulgar: every one hears
that,

Which can distinguish sound.

Edg. But, by your favour,
How near's the other army?

Glou. Near and on speedy foot: the main descry

Stands on the hourly thought.

Edg. I thank you, sir: that's all.

Glou. Though that the queen on special cause is here,

Her army is moved on.
Edg. I thank you, sir.

Glou. You ever-gentle gods, take my breath from me;

Let not my worse spirit tempt me again
To die before you please!

Edg. Well pray you, father.

Glou. Now, good sir, what are you?

Edg. A most poor man, made tame to fortune's blows;

Who, by the art of known and feeling sorrows, Am pregnant to good pity. Give me your
hand,

I'll lead you to some biding.

Glou. Hearty thanks:
The bounty and the benison of heaven
To boot, and boot!

Enter OSWALD.

Osw. A proclaim'd prize! Most happy!
That eyeless head of thine was first framed

To raise my fortunes. Thou old unhappy
traitor,

Briefly thyself remember: the sword is out
That must destroy thee.

Glou. Now let thy friendly hand
Put strength enough to 't.

Osw. Wharrest, hold peasant.
Darest thou support a public traitor? Hence;
Lest that the infection of his fortune take

Like hold on thee. Let go his arm.

Edg. Chill not let go, sir, without further
'cession. 240

Cor. Let go, slave, or thou diest!

Edg. Good gentleman, go your gait, and let poor folk pass. An chud ha' bin swaggered out of my life, 'twould not ha' bin so long as
'tis by a fortnight. Nay, come not near th' old man; keep out, che vor ye, or ise try whether your oostard or my ballow be the harder: chill be plain with you.

Cor. Out, dunghill!

Edg. Chill pick your teeth, sir: come; no matter vor your foina. 251

[They fight, and Edgar knocks him down.]

Cor. Slave, thou hast slain me: villain, take my purse:

If ever thou wilt thrive, bury my body;
And give the letters which thou find'st about
me

To Edmund earl of Gloucester: seek him out
Upon the British party: O, untimely death!

[Dies.]

Edg. I know thee well: a serviceable villain;
As dutious to the vices of thy mistress
As badness would desire.

Glou. What, is he dead!

Edg. Sit you down, father; rest you. 260
Let's see these pockets: the letters that he speaks of

May be my friends. He's dead; I am only sorry

He had no other death's-man. Let us see:
Leave, gentle wax; and, manners, blame us
not:

To know our enemies' minds, we'd rip their hearts;

Their papers, is more lawful.

[Reads.] Let our reciprocal vows be remembered. You have many opportunities to cut him off: if your will want not, time and place will be fruitfully offered. There is nothing done, if he return the conqueror: then am I the prisoner, and his head my goal; from the loathed warmth whereof deliver me, and supply the place for your labour.

'Your—wife, so I would say—Affectionate servant,
'GONERIL'

O undistinguish'd space of woman's will!
A plot upon her virtuous husband's life;

And the exchange my brother! Here, in the sands,

Thee I'll rake up, the post unsanctified 281
Of murderous lechers: and in the mature time

With this ungracious paper strike the sight
Of the death-practised duke: for him 'tis well

That of thy death and business I can tell.

Glou. The king is mad: how stiff is my vile sense,

That I stand up, and have ingenious feeling
Of my huge sorrows! Better I were distract:

So should my thoughts be sever'd from my griefs,

And woe by wrong imaginations lose 290
The knowledge of themselves.

Edg. Give me your hand.
[Draws sword.]

Far off, methinks, I hear the beaten drum:
Come, father, I'll bestow you with a friend.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. A tent in the French camp.
LEAR on a bed asleep, soft music playing;
Gentleman, and others attending.

Enter CORDELLIA, KENT, and Doctor.

Cor. O thou good Kent, how shall I live and work,

To match thy goodness! My life will be too short,

And every measure fall me.

Kent. To be acknowledged, madam, is overpaid.

All my reports go with the modest truth;
Nor more nor clipp'd, but so.

Cor. Be better suited:
These weeds are memories of those warmer
hours:

I prithee, put them off.

Kent. Pardon me, dear madam;
Yet to be known shortens my made intent:

My boon I make it, that you know me not 30
Till time and I think meet.

Cor. Then be't so, my good lord. [To the Doctor] How does the king!

Doct. Madam, sleeps still.

Cor. O you kind gods,

Cure this great breach in his abused nature!
The untuned and jarring senses, O, wind up
Of this child-changed father!

Doct. So please your 31
That we may wake the king: he hath slept!

Cor. Be govern'd by your knowledge;
proceed

I the sway of your own will. Is he arm'd? 32
Gent. Ay, madam; in the heaviness of his sleep

We put fresh garments on him.

Doct. Be by, good madam, when we do awake him;

I doubt not of his temperance.

Cor. Very well.

Doct. Please you, draw near. Louder the music there!

Cor. O my dear father! Restoration hang
Thy medicine on my lips; and let this kiss
Repair those violent harms that my two sisters
Have in thy reverence made!

Kent. Kind and dear princess! 33
Cor. Had you not been their father, these white flakes

Had challenged pity of them. Was this a face
To be oppos'd against the warring winds?

To stand against the deep dread-bolted thunder?
In the most terrible and nimble strokes

Of quick, cross lightning? to watch the proud!

With this thin helm? Mine enemy's dog,
Though he had bit me, should have stood that
night

Against my fire; and wast thou fain, poor
father,

To howl thee with swine, and round-bottom'd
In short and musty show? Alack, alack!

'Tis wonder that thy life and wits are

Had not concluded all. He wakes; speak to him.

Doct. Madam, do you; 'tis fittest.

Cor. How does my royal lord? How fares your majesty?

Lear. You do me wrong to take me out of the grave:

Thou art a soul in bliss; but I am bound Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears Do scald like molten lead.

Cor. Sir, do you know me?
Lear. You are a spirit, I know: when did you die?

Cor. Still, still, far wide!

Doct. He's scarce awake: let him alone awhile.

Lear. Where have I been? Where am I? Fair daylight?

I am mightily abused. I should e'en die with pity,

To see another thus. I know not what to say. I will not swear these are my hands: let's see; I feel this pin prick. Would I were assured Of my condition!

Cor. O, look upon me, sir, And hold your hands in benediction o'er me: No, sir, you must not kneel.

Lear. Pray, do not mock me: I am a very foolish fond old man, 60 Four-score and upward, not an hour more nor less;

And, to deal plainly, I fear I am not in my perfect mind. Methinks I should know you, and know this man;

Yet I am doubtful: for I am mainly ignorant What place this is; and all the skill I have Remembers not these garments; nor I know not Where I did lodge last night. Do not laugh at me;

For, as I am a man, I think this lady To be my child Cordelia.

Cor. And so I am, I am. 70
Lear. Be your tears wet! yes, 'faith. I pray, weep not:

If you have poison for me, I will drink it. I know you do not love me; for your sisters Have, as I do remember, done me wrong: You have some cause, they have not.

Cor. No cause, no cause.

Lear. Am I in France?

Kent. In your own kingdom, sir.

Lear. Do not abuse me.

Doct. Be comforted, good madam: the great rage,

You see, is kill'd in him; and yet it is danger To make him even o'er the time he has lost. So Desire him to go in; trouble him no more Till further settling.

Cor. Will't please your highness walk?

Lear. You must bear with me: Pray you now, forget and forgive: I am old and foolish.

[Exeunt all but Kent and Gentleman.
Gent. Holds it true, sir, that the Duke of Cornwall was so slain?

Kent. Most certain, sir.

Gent. What's the conductor of his people?

Kent. As 'tis said, the bastard son of Gloucester.

Gent. They say Edgar, his banished son, is with the Earl of Kent in Germany.

Kent. Report is changeable. 'Tis time to look about; the powers of the kingdom approach apace.

Gent. The arbitrement is like to be bloody. Fare you well, sir.

Kent. My point and period will be thoroughly wrought, Or well or ill, as this day's battle's fought. 90
[Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I. The British camp, near Dover.

Enter, with drum and colours, EDMUND, REGAN, Gentlemen, and Soldiers.

Edm. Know of the duke if his last purpose hold,

Or whether since he is advised by aught To change the course: he's full of alteration And self-reproving: bring his constant pleasure.

[To a Gentleman, who goes out.]

Reg. Our sister's man is certainly miscarried.
Edm. 'Tis to be doubted, madam.

Reg. Now, sweet lord, You know the goodness I intend upon you: Tell me—but truly—but then speak the truth, Do you not love my sister?

Edm. In honour'd love.
Reg. But have you never found my brother's way 10

To the forfended place?

Edm. That thought abuses you.

Reg. I am doubtful that you have been conjunct

And bosom'd with her, as far as we call hers.

Edm. No, by mine honour, madam.

Reg. I never shall endure her: dear my lord, Be not familiar with her.

Edm. Fear me not:

She and the duke her husband!

Enter, with drum and colours, ALBANY, GONERIL, and Soldiers.

Gon. [Aside] I had rather lose the battle than that sister

Should loosen him and me.

Alb. Our very loving sister, well be-met. 20 Sir, this I hear; the king is come to his daughter,

With others whom the rigour of our state Forced to cry out. Where I could not be honest,

I never yet was valiant: for this business, It toucheth us, as France invades our land, Not holds the king, with others, whom, I fear, Most just and heavy causes make oppose.

Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.

Reg. Why is this reason'd?

Gon. Combine together against the enemy: For these domestic and particular broils 30 Are not the question here.

Alb. Let's then determine

With the ancient of war on our proceedings.

Edm. I shall attend you presently at your tent.

Reg. Sister, you'll go with us!

Gon. No.

Reg. 'Tis most convenient; pray you, go with us.

Gon. [Aside] O, ho, I know the riddle.— I will go.

As they are going out, enter EDGAR disguised.

Edg. If e'er your grace had speech with man so poor, Hear me one word.

Alb. I'll overtake you. Speak.

[Exeunt all but Albany and Edgar.]
Edg. Before you fight the battle, ope this letter.

If you have victory, let the trumpet sound For him that brought it: wretched though I seem,

I can produce a champion that will prove What is avouched there. If you miscarry, Your business of the world hath so an end, And machination ceases. Fortune love you!

Alb. Stay till I have read the letter.

Edg. I was forbid it. When time shall serve, let but the herald cry, And I'll appear again.

Alb. Why, fare thee well: I will o'erlook thy paper. [Exit Edgar. 50]

Re-enter EDMUND.

Edm. The enemy's in view; draw up your powers.

Here is the guess of their true strength and forces

By diligent discovery; but your haste Is now urged on you.

Alb. We will greet the time. [Exit.]

Edm. To both these sisters have I sworn my love;

Each jealous of the other, as the stung Are of the adder. Which of them shall I take!

Both! one! or neither! Neither can be enjoy'd, If both remain alive: to take the widow Exasperates, makes mad her sister Goneril; 60 And hardly shall I carry out my side, Her husband being alive. Now then we'll use His countenance for the battle; which being done,

Let her who would be rid of him devise His speedy taking off. As for the mercy

Which he intends to Lear and to Cordelia, The battle done, and they within our power,

Shall never see his pardon; for my state Stands on me to defend, not to debate. 65

[Exit.]

SCENE II. A field between the two camps.

Alarum within. Enter, with drum and colours, LEAR, CORDELIA, and Soldiers, over the stage; and exeunt.

Enter EDGAR and GLOUCESTER.

Edg. Here, father, take the shadow of this tree

For your good host; pray that the right may thrive:

If ever I return to you again, I'll bring you comfort.

Glou. Grace go with you, sir! [Exit Edgar.]

Alarum and retreat within. Re-enter EDGAR.

Edg. Away, old man; give me thy hand; away!

King Lear hath lost, he and his daughter ta'en: give me thy hand; come on.

Glou. No farther, sir; a man may rot even here.

Edg. What, in ill thoughts again! Men must endure

Their going hence, even as their coming hither: Ripeness is all: come on.

Glou. And that's true too. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. The British camp near Dover.

Enter, in conquest, with drum and colours, EDMUND; LEAR and CORDELIA, prisoners; Captain, Soldiers, &c.

Edm. Some officers take them away: good guard,

Until their greater pleasures first be known That are to censure them.

Cur. We are not the first Who, with best meaning, have incur'd the worst.

For thee, oppressed king, am I cast down; Myself could else out-frown false fortune's frown.

Shall we not see these daughters and these sisters!

Lear. No, no, no, no! Come, let's away to prison:

We two alone will sing like birds i' the tree: When thou dost ask me blessing, I'll down, And ask of thee forgiveness: so we'll live, And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh

At gilded butterflies, and hear poor rogues Talk of court news; and we'll talk with them too,

Who loses and who wins; who's in, who's out; And take upon's the mystery of things, As if we were God's spies: and we'll wear out, In a wall'd prison, packs and sects of great ones,

That ebb and flow by the moon.

Edm. Take them away.

Lear. Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia, as The gods themselves throw incense. Have I caught thee?

He that parts us shall bring a brand from heaven, And fire us hence like foxes. Wipe thine eyes; The good-years shall devour them, flesh and fall, Ere they shall make us weep: we'll not 'em starve first.

Edm. Come hither, captain; hasten. Take thou this note [giving a paper]; go follow them to prison:

One step I have advanced thee; if thou dost

As this instructs thee, thou dost make thy way
To noble fortunes : know thou this, that men
Are as the time is : to be tender-minded 31
Does not become a sword : thy great employment

Will not bear question ; either say thou 't do 't,
Or thrive by other means.

Cap. I'll do 't, my lord.

Edm. About it ; and write happy when thou hast done.

Mark. I say, instantly ; and carry it so

As I have set it down.

Cap. I cannot draw a cart, nor eat dried oats ;

If it be man's work, I'll do it. [Exit.

Flourish. Enter ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN, another Captain, and Soldiers.

Alb. Sir, you have shown to-day your valiant strain,

And fortune led you well : you have the captives 40
That were the opposites of this day's strife :
We do require them of you, so to use them
As we shall find their merits and our safety
May equally determine.

Edm. Sir, I thought it fit
To send the old and miserable king
To some retention and appointed guard ;
Whose age has charms in it, whose title more,
To pluck the common bosom on his side,
And turn our impress'd lances in our eyes 50
Which do command them. With him I sent the queen ;

My reason all the same ; and they are ready
To-morrow, or at further space, to appear Where you shall hold your session. At this time

We sweat and bleed : the friend hath lost his friend ;

And the best quarrels, in the heat, are cursed
By those that feel their sharpness :

The question of Cordelia and her father
Requires a fitter place.

Alb. Sir, by your patience, 60
I hold you but a subject of this war,
Not as a brother.

Reg. That's as we list to grace him.
Methinks our pleasure might have been demanded,

As you had spoke so far. He led our powers ;
Bore the commission of my place and person ;
The which immediacy may well stand up,
And call itself your brother.

Gon. Not so hot :
In his own grace he doth exalt himself,
More than in your addition.

Reg. In my rights,
By me invested, he compeers the best.

Gon. That were the most, if he should husband you.

Reg. Sisters do oft prove prophets. 70
Gon. Holla, holla !

What told you so look'd but a-squint.
Look, I am not well ; else I should have

From a sick-looking stomach. General,
I have a few soldiers, prisoners, patrimony.
Dance about me ; the walls are thine :

Witness the world, that I create thee here
My lord and master.

Gon. Mean you to enjoy him ?
Alb. The let-alone lies not in your good will.

Edm. Nor in thine, lord.

Alb. Half-blooded fellow, yes, so
Reg. [To Edmund] Let the drum strike, and prove my title thine.

Alb. Stay yet ; hear reason. Edmund, I arrest thee

On capital treason ; and, in thine attain-This gilded serpent [pointing to Gon.] For your claim, fair sister,

I bar it in the interest of my wife ;

'Tis she is sub-contracted to this lord,
And I, her husband, contradict your bans.

If you will marry, make your loves to me,
My lady is bespoken.

Gon. An interlude !

Alb. Thou art arm'd, Gloucester : let the trumpet sound : 90

If none appear to prove upon thy head
Thy heinous, manifest, and many treasons,

There is my pledge [throwing down a glove] ;
I'll prove it on thy heart,

Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing less Than I have here proclaim'd these.

Reg. Sick, O, sick !
Gon. [Aside] If not, I'll ne'er trust medicine.

Edm. There's my exchange [throwing down a glove] : what in the world he is

That names me traitor, villain-like he lies :
Call by thy trumpet : he that dares approach,

On him, on you, who not ? I will maintain 100
My truth and honour firmly.

Alb. A herald, ho !

Edm. A herald, ho, a herald !
Alb. Trust to thy single virtue ; for thy soldiers,

All levied in my name, have in my name
Took their discharge.

Reg. My sickness grows upon me.
Alb. She is not well ; convey her to my tent.

[Exit Regan, led.]

Enter a Herald.

Come hither, herald, — Let the trumpet sound, —
And read out this.

Cap. Sound, trumpet ! [A trumpet sounds.]

Her. [Reads] 'If any man of quality or degree within the lists of the army will maintain upon Edmund, supposed Earl of Gloucester, that he is a manifold traitor, let him appear by the third sound of the trumpet : he is bold in his defence.'

Edm. Sound ! [First trumpet.]

Her. Again ! [Second trumpet.]

Her. Again ! [Third trumpet.]

[Trumpet answers within.]

Enter EDGAR, at the third sound, armed, with a trumpet before him.

Alb. Ask him his purposes, why he appears
Upon this call of the trumpet.

Her. What are you ? 110
Your name, your quality ! and why you answer
This present summons !

Edg. Know, my name is lost ;

By treason's tooth bare-gnawn and canker-bit;
Yet am I noble as the adversary
I come to cope.

Alb. Which is that adversary?

Edg. What's he that speaks for Edmund
Earl of Gloucester?

Edm. Himself: what say'st thou to him?

Edg. Draw thy sword,

That, if my speech offend a noble heart,
Thy arm may do thee justice: here is mine.

Behold, it is the privilege of mine honours,

My oath, and my profession: I protest, ¹³⁰

Maugre thy strength, youth, place, and eminence,

Despite thy victor sword and fire-new fortune,

Thy valour and thy heart, thou art a traitor;

False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy father;

Conspirant 'gainst this high-illustrious prince;

And, from the extremest upward of thy head

To the descent and dust below thy foot,

A most toad-spotted traitor. Say thou 'No,'

This sword, this arm, and my best spirits, are bent

To prove upon thy heart, whereto I speak, ¹⁴⁰

Thou liest.

Edm. In wisdom I should ask thy name;

But, since thy outside looks so fair and warlike,

And that thy tongue some say of breeding

brothes,

What safe and nicely I might well delay

By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn:

Back do I toss these treasons to thy head;

With the hell-hated lie o'erwhelm thy heart;

Which, for they yet glance by and scarcely bruise,

This sword of mine shall give them instant way,

Where they shall rest for ever. Trumpets, speak! ¹⁵⁰

[Alarums. They fight. Edmund falls.]

Alb. Save him, save him!

Gon. This is practice, Gloucester:

By the law of arms thou wast not bound to answer

An unknown opposite; thou art not vanquish'd,

But cosen'd and beguil'd.

Alb. Shut your mouth, dame,

Or with this paper shall I stop it. Hold, sir;

Thou worse than any name, read thine own

evil:

No tearing, lady; I perceive you know it.

[Gives the letter to Edmund.]

Gon. Say, if I do, the laws are mine, not

thine:

Who can arraign me for't?

Alb. Most monstrous! oh

Know'st thou this paper?

Gon. Ask me not what I know. [Exit.]

Alb. Go after her: she's desperate; govern

her. ¹⁶¹

Edm. What you have charged me with,

that have I done;

And more, much more; the time will bring it

out:

'Tis past, and so am I. But what art thou

That hast this fortune on me? If thou art noble,

I do forgive thee.

Edg. Let's exchange charities.

I am no less in blood than thou art, Edmund;

If more, the more thou hast wrong'd me.
My name is Edgar, and thy father's son.

The gods are just, and of our pleasant vices ¹⁷¹

Make instruments to plague us:

The dark and vicious place where thee he got

Cost him his eyes.

Edm. Thou hast spoken right, 'tis true;

The wheel is come full circle; I am here.

Alb. Methought thy very gait did prophesy

A royal nobleness: I must embrace thee:

Let sorrow split my heart, if ever I

Did hate thee or thy father!

Edg. Worthy prince, I know't.

Alb. Where have you hid yourself?

How have you known the miseries of your father? ¹⁸⁰

Edg. By nursing them, my lord. List a brief tale;

And when 'tis told, O, that my heart would burst!

The bloody proclamation to escape,

That follow'd me so near,—O, our lives' sweet-

ness!

That we the pain of death would hourly die

Rather than die at once!—taught me to shift

Into a madman's rags; to assume a semblance

That very dogs disdain'd: and in this habit

Met I my father with his bleeding rings,

Their precious stones new lost; became his guide, ¹⁹⁰

Led him, begg'd for him, saved him from despair;

Never,—O fault!—reveal'd myself unto him,

Until some half-hour past, when I was arm'd:

Not sure, though hoping, of this good success,

I ask'd his blessing, and from first to last

Told him my pilgrimage: but his flaw'd heart,

Alack, too weak the conflict to support,

'Twixt two extremes of passion, joy and grief,

Burst smilingly.

Edm. This speech of yours hath moved me,

And shall perchance do good: but speak you on; ²⁰⁰

You look as you had something more to say.

Alb. If there be more, more woeful, hold it in;

For I am almost ready to dissolve,

Hearing of this.

Edg. This would have seem'd a period

To such as love not sorrow; but another,

To amplify too much, would make much more,

And top extremity.

Whilst I was big in clamour came there in a

man,

Who, having seen me in my worst estate,

Shunn'd my abhor'd society; but then, finding

Who 'twas that so endured, with his wrong

arms ²¹¹

He fasten'd on my neck, and bellow'd out:

As he'd burst heaven; threw him on my

father;

Told the most piteous tale of Lear and him:

That ever ear received: which in recounting

His grief grew puissant, and the strings of life

Began to crack: twice then the trumpets sounded.

And there I left him tending.

Alb. But who was this?

Edg. Kent, sir, the banish'd Kent; who in disguise Follow'd his enemy king, and did him service improper for a slave. 221

Enter a Gentleman, with a bloody knife.

Gent. Help, help, O, help!

Edg. What kind of help? 222

Alb. Speak, man.

Edg. What means that bloody knife?

Gent. 'Tis hot, it smokes; It came even from the heart of—O, she's dead!

Alb. Who dead? speak, man.

Gent. Your lady, sir, your lady; and her sister By her is poisoned; she hath confess'd it.

Edm. I was contracted to them both: all three

Now marry in an instant.

Edg. Here comes Kent.

Alb. Produce their bodies, be they alive or dead: 230

This judgement of the heavens, that makes us tremble,

Touches us not with pity. [Exit Gentleman.]

Enter KENT.

O, is this he?

The time will not allow the compliment

Which very manners urge.

Kent. I am come

To bid my king and master aye good night:

Is he not here?

Alb. Great thing of us forgot!

Speak, Edmund, where's the king? and where's

Cordelia?

See'st thou this object, Kent?

[The bodies of Goneril and Regan are brought in.]

Kent. Alack, why thus!

Edm. Yet Edmund was beloved:

The one the other poison'd for my sake, 240

And after slew herself.

Alb. Even so. Cover their faces.

Edm. I pant for life: some good I mean to do,

Despite of mine own nature. Quickly send,

Be brief in it, to the castle; for my writ

Is on the life of Lear and on Cordelia:

Way, send in time.

Alb. Run, run, O, run!

Edg. To who, my lord? Who hath the office? send

Thy token of reprieve.

Edm. Well thought on: take my sword, 250

Give it the captain.

Alb. Haste thee, for thy life. [Exit Edgar.]

Edm. He hath commission from thy wife and me

To hang Cordelia in the prison, and

To lay the blame upon her own despair,

That she fordid herself.

Alb. The gods defend her! Bear him hence awhile. [Edmund is borne off.]

Re-enter LEAR, with CORDNELIA dead in his arms; EDGAR, Captain, and others following.

Lear. Howl, howl, howl! O, you are men of stones:

Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so That heaven's vault should crack. She's gone for ever! 259

I know when one is dead, and when one lives;

She's dead as earth. Lend me a looking-glass;

If that her breath will mist or stain the stone,

Why, then she lives.

Kent. Is this the promised end?

Edg. Or image of that horror?

Alb. Still, and cease!

Lear. This feather stirs; she lives! if it be so,

It is a chance which does redeem all sorrows

That ever I have felt.

Kent. [Kneeling] O my good master!

Lear. Prithee, away.

Edg. 'Tis noble Kent, your friend.

Lear. A plague upon you, murderers, traitors

all!

I might have saved her; now she's gone for ever! 270

Cordelia, Cordelia! stay a little. Ha!

What is't thou say'st? Her voice was ever soft,

Gentle, and low, an excellent thing in woman.

I kill'd the slave that was a-hanging thee.

Capt. 'Tis true, my lords, he did.

Lear. Did I not, fellow?

I have seen the day, with my good biting

falchion

I would have made them skip: I am old now,

And these same crosses spoil me. Who are

you?

Mine eyes are not o' the best: I'll tell you straight.

Kent. If fortune brag of two she loved and hated, 280

One of them we behold.

Lear. This is a dull sight. Are you not Kent?

Kent. The same.

Your servant Kent. Where is your servant

Caius?

Lear. He's a good fellow, I can tell you

that;

He'll strike, and quickly too: he's dead and rotten.

Kent. No, my good lord; I am the very

man.—

Lear. I'll see that straight.

Kent. That, from your first of difference and decay,

Have follow'd your sad steps.

Lear. You are welcome hither.

Kent. Nor no man else: all's cheerful, dark, and deadly. 290

Your eldest daughters have fordone themselves,

And desperately are dead.

Lear. Ay, so I think.

Alb. He knows not what he says: and vain

it is

That we present us to him.

Edg. Very bootless.

Enter a Captain.

Capt. Edmund is dead, my lord.

Alb. That's but a trifle here.

You lords and noble friends, know our intent.

What comfort to this great decay may come

Shall be applied : for us, we will resign,
 During the life of this old majesty,
 To him our absolute power : [To Edgar and
Kent] you, to your rights ;

With boot, and such addition as your honours
 Have more than merited. All friends shall taste

The wages of their virtue, and all foes
 The cup of their deservings. O, see, see !

Lear. And my poor fool is hang'd ! No, no, no life !

Why should a dog, a horse, a rat, have life,
 And thou no breath at all ? Thou'lt come no
 more,

Never, never, never, never !
 Pray you, undo this button : thank you, sir.

Do you see this ? Look on her, look, her lips,
 Look there, look there ! [Dies.]

Edg. He faints ! My lord, my lord !

Kent. Break, heart ; I prithee, break !

Edg. Look up, my lord.

Kent. Vex not his ghost : O, let him pass !
 he hates him much
 That would upon the rack of this tough world
 Stretch him out longer.

Edg. He is gone, indeed.
Kent. The wonder is, he hath endured so long :

He but usurp'd his life.

Alb. Bear them from hence. Our present business

Is general woe. [To Kent and Edgar] Friends of my soul, you twain

Rule in this realm, and the gored state sustain.

Kent. I have a journey, sir, shortly to go ;
 My master calls me, I must not say no.

Alb. The weight of this sad time we must obey ;

Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say.
 The oldest hath borne most : we that are young
 Shall never see so much, nor live so long.

[Exeunt, with a dead march.]

OTHELLO, THE MOOR OF VENICE

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ

DUKE OF VENICE.
BRABANTIO, a senator.
Other Senators.
GRATIANO, brother to Brabantio.
LODGVICO, kinsman to Brabantio.
OTHELLO, a noble Moor in the service of the Venetian state.
CASSIO, his lieutenant.
IAGO, his ancient.
RODERIGO, a Venetian gentleman.
MONTANO, Othello's predecessor in the government of Cyprus.

Clown, servant to Othello.

DESDEMONA, daughter to Brabantio and wife to Othello.

EMILIA, wife to Iago.

BIANCA, mistress to Cassio.

Sailor, Messenger, Herald, Officers, Gentlemen,
Musicians, and Attendants.

SCENE: Venice: a Sea-port in Cyprus.

ACT I.

SCENE I. Venice. A street.

Enter RODERIGO and IAGO.

Rod. Trah! never tell me; I take it much unkindly
That thou, Iago, who hast had my purse
As if the strings were thine, shouldst know of this.

Iago. 'Sblood, but you will not hear me:
If ever I did dream of such a matter,
Abhor me.

Rod. Thou told'st me thou didst hold him in thy hate.

Iago. Despise me, if I do not. Three great ones of the city,

In personal suit to make me his lieutenant,
Off-capp'd to him: and, by the faith of man, so
I know my price. I am worth no worse a place:
But he, as loving his own pride and purposes,
Evades them, with a bombast circumstance
Horribly stuff'd with epithets of war;

And, in conclusion,
Nonsuits my mediators; for, 'Certes,' says he,
'I have already chose my officer.'

And what was he?

Forsooth, a great arithmetician,
One Michael Cassio, a Florentine, so
A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife;
That never yet a squadron in the field,
Nor the division of a battle knows
More than a spinster; unless the bookish to

As he: mere prattle, without

Is all his soldiership. But he, sir, had the election:

And I, of whom his eyes had seen the proof
At Rhodes, at Cyprus and on other grounds Christian and heathen, must be be-lee'd and calm'd

By debtor and creditor: this counter-caster,
He, in good time, must his lieutenant be,
And I—God bless the mark!—his Moorship's ancient.

Rod. By heaven, I rather would have been his hangman.

Iago. Why, there's no remedy; 'tis the curse of service,

Preferment goes by letter and affection,
And not by old gradation, where each second Stood heir to the first. Now, sir, be judge yourself,

Whether I in any just term am affined
To love the Moor.

Rod. I would not follow him then. so

Iago. O, sir, content you;
I follow him to serve my turn upon him;
We cannot all be masters, nor all masters
Cannot be truly follow'd. You shall mark
Many a duteous and knee-crooking knave,
That, doting on his own obsequious bondage,
Wears out his time, much like his master's ass,
For nought but provender, and when he's old,
casher'd:

Whip me such honest knaves. Others there are
Who, trimm'd in forms and viages of duty, so
Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves,
And, throwing but shows of service on their lords,

Do well thrive by them and when they have lined their coats

Do themselves homage : these fellows have some soul ;

And such a one do I profess myself. For, sir, it is as sure as you are Roderigo, Were I the Moor, I would not be Iago : In following him, I follow but myself : Heaven is my judge, not I for love and duty, But seeming so, for my peculiar end : For when my outward action doth demonstrate The native act and figure of my heart In compliment extern, 'tis not long after But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve For daws to peck at : I am not what I am.

Rod. What a full fortune does the thick-lips owe,
If he can carry 't thus !

Iago. Call up her father, Rouse him : make after him, poison his delight, Proclaim him in the streets ; incense her kinsmen,

And, though he in a fertile climate dwell, Plague him with flies : though that his joy be joy,

Yet throw such changes of vexation on 't, As it may lose some colour.

Rod. Here is her father's house ; I'll call aloud.

Iago. Do, with like timorous accent and dire yell

As when, by night and negligence, the fire Is spied in populous cities.

Rod. What, ho, Brabantio ! Signior Brabantio, ho !

Iago. Awake ! what, ho, Brabantio ! thieves ! thieves ! thieves !

Look to your house, your daughter and your bags !

Thieves ! thieves !

BRABANTIO appears above, at a window.

Bra. What is the reason of this terrible summons ?

What is the matter there ?

Rod. Signior, is all your family within ?

Iago. Are your doors lock'd ?

Bra. Why, wherefore ask you this ?

Iago. 'Zounds, sir, you're robb'd ; for shame, put on your gown ;

Your heart is burst, you have lost half your soul ;

Even now, now, very now, an old black ram Is tupping your white ewe. Arise, arise ;

Awake the snorting citizens with the bell, so

Or else the devil will make a grandsire of you : Arise, I say.

Bra. What, have you lost your wits ?

Rod. Most reverend signior, do you know my voice ?

Bra. Not I : what are you ?

Rod. My name is Roderigo.

Bra. The worse welcome : I have charged thee not to haunt about my doors :

In honest plainness thou hast heard me say My daughter is not for thee ; and now, in madness,

Being full of supper and distempering draughts, Upon malicious bravery, dost thou come so

To start my quiet.

Rod. Sir, sir, sir,—

Bra. But thou must needs be sure My spirit and my place have in them power To make this bitter to thee.

Rod. Patience, good sir.

Bra. What tell'st thou me of robbing ? this is Venice ;

My house is not a grange.

Rod. Most grave Brabantio, In simple and pure soul I come to you.

Iago. 'Zounds, sir, you are one of those that will not serve God, if the devil bid you. Because we come to do you service and you think we are ruffians, you'll have your daughter covered with a Barbary horse ; you'll have your nephews neigh to you ; you'll have coursers for cousins and gennets for germans.

Bra. What profane wretch art thou ?

Iago. I am one, sir, that comes to tell you your daughter and the Moor are now making the beast with two backs.

Bra. Thou art a villain.

Iago. You are—a senator.

Bra. This thou shalt answer ; I know thee, Roderigo.

Rod. Sir, I will answer any thing. But, I beseech you,

If 't be your pleasure and most wise consent, As partly I find it is, that your fair daughter,

At this odd-even and dull watch o' the night, Transported, with no worse nor better guard

But with a knave of common hire, a gondolier, To the gross clasps of a lascivious Moor,—

If this be known to you and your allowance, We then have done you bold and manly wrongs ;

But if you know not this, my manners tell me We have your wrong rebuke. Do not believe

That, from the sense of all civility, I thus would play and trifle with your reverence ;

Your daughter, if you have not given her leave, I say again, hath made a gross revolt ;

Tying her duty, beauty, wit and fortunes In an extravagant and wheeling stranger

Of here and every where. Straight satisfy yourself :

If she be in her chamber or your house, Let loose on me the justice of the state so

For thus debauching you.

Bra. Strike on the tinder, ho ! Give me a taper ! call up all my people !

This accident is not unlike my dream : Belief of it oppresses me already.

Light, I say ! light ! [Exit above.]

Iago. Farewell ; for I must leave you : It seems not meet, nor wholesome to my shame,

To be produced—as, if I stay, I shall— Against the Moor : for, I do know, the state,

However this may gall him with some chance, Cannot with safety cast him, for he's watch'd

With such loud toasts to the Cyprus water, so Which even now stand in act, that, for their souls,

Another of his fathers they have sworn To lead their business : in which respect,

Though I do hate him as I do hell-spawn, Yet, for necessity of present life,

I must show out a flag and sign of love,

Which is indeed but sign. That you shall surely find him.

Lead to the Sagittary the raised search;
And there will I be with him. So, farewell. 160
[Exit.

Enter, below, BRABANTIO, and Servants with torches.

Bra. It is too true an evil: gone she is;
And what's to come of my despaired time
Is nought but bitterness. Now, Roderigo,
Where didst thou see her? O unhappy girl!
With the Moor, say'st thou? Who would be a father!

How didst thou know 'twas she? O, she deceives
me

Past thought! What said she to you? Get more tapers:

Raise all my kindred. Are they married, think
you?

Rod. Truly, I think they are.

Bra. O heaven! How got she out? O treason of the blood! 170

Fathers, from hence trust not your daughters'
minds

By what you see them act. Is there not charms
By which the property of youth and maidhood
May be abused? Have you not read, Roderigo,
Of some such thing?

Rod. Yes, sir, I have indeed.

Bra. Call up my brother. O, would you had had her!

Some one way, some another. Do you know
Where we may apprehend her and the Moor?

Rod. I think I can discover him, if you

To get good guard and go along with me. 180
Bra. Pray you, lead on. At every house
I'll call;

I may command at most. Get weapons, ho!
And raise some special officers of night.

On, good Roderigo: I'll deserve your pains.

[Exit.

SCENE II. Another street.

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and Attendants with torches.

Iago. Though in the trade of war I have slain men.

Yet do I hold it very stuff o' the conscience
To do no contrived murder: I lack iniquity
Sometimes to do me service: nine or ten times
I had thought to have yer'd him here under the ribs.

Oth. 'Tis better as it is.

Iago. Nay, but he prated,
And spoke such scurvy and provoking terms
Against your honour

That, with the little godliness I have,
I did full hard forbear him. But, I pray you,

Are you fast married? Be assured of this,
That the magnifico is much beloved,

And hath in his effect a voice potential
As double as the duke's: he will divorce you;

Or put upon you what restraint and grievances
The law, with all his might to enforce it on,

Will give him cable.

Oth. Let him do his spite;
My services which I have done the signior Shall out-tongue his complaints. 'Tis yet to know,—

Which, when I know that boasting is an honour,

I shall promulgate—I fetch my life and being
From men of royal siege, and my demerits
May speak unbonneted to as proud a fortune
As this that I have reach'd: for know, Iago,
But that I love the gentle Desdemona,
I would not my unhoused free condition
Put into circumscription and confine
For the sea's worth. But, look! what lights come yond?

Iago. Those are the raised father and his friends:

You were best go in.

Oth. Not I; I must be found: 30
My parts, my title and my perfect soul
Shall manifest me rightly. Is it they?

Iago. By Janus, I think no.

Enter CASSIO, and certain Officers with torches.

Oth. The servants of the duke, and my lieutenant.

The goodness of the night upon you, friends!
What is the news?

Cas. The duke does greet you, general,
And he requires your haste-post-haste appearance,

Even on the instant.

Oth. What is the matter, think you?

Cas. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine:

It is a business of some heat: the galleys 40
Have sent a dozen sequent messengers
This very night at one another's heels,
And many of the consuls, raised and met,
Are at the duke's already: you have been hotly call'd for;

When, being not at your lodging to be found,
The senate hath sent about three several quests
To search you out.

Oth. 'Tis well I am found by you.
I will but spend a word here in the house.

And go with you. [Exit.

Cas. Ancient, what makes he here?

Iago. 'Faith, he to-night hath boarded a land carack:

If it prove lawful prize, he's made for ever. 50

Cas. I do not understand.

Iago. He's married.

Cas. To who?

Re-enter OTHELLO.

Iago. Marry, to—Come, captain, will you go?

Oth. Have with you.

Cas. Here comes another troop to seek for
you.

Iago. It is Brabantio. General, be advised;
He comes to bad intent.

Enter BRABANTIO, RODERIGO, and Officers with torches and weapons.

Oth. Holla! stand there!

Rod. Signior, it is the Moor.

Bra. Down with him, thief!

[They draw on both sides.]

Iago. You, Roderigo! come, sir, I am for you.

Oth. Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them.

Good signior, you shall more command with years

Than with your weapons.

Bra. O thou foul thief, where hast thou stow'd my daughter!

Damn'd as thou art, thou hast enchanted her; For I'll refer me to all things of sense,

If she in chains of magic were not bound,

Whether a maid so tender, fair and happy,

So opposite to marriage that she shunn'd

The wealthy curled darlings of our nation,

Would ever have, to incur a general mock,

I, un from her guardage to the sooty bosom

Of such a thing as thou, to fear, not to delight.

Judge me the world, if 'tis not gross in sense

That thou hast practis'd on her with foul charms,

Abused her delicate youth with drugs or minerals

That weaken motion: I'll have't disputed on;

'Tis probable and palpable to thinking.

I therefore apprehend and do attach thee

For an abuser of the world, a practisier

Of arts inhibited and out of warrant.

Lay hold upon him: if he do resist,

Subdue him at his peril.

Oth. Hold your hands,

Both you of my inclining, and the rest:

Were it my cue to fight, I should have known it Without a prompter. Where will you that I go

To answer this your charge?

Bra. To prison, till fit time

Of law and course of direct session

Call thee to answer.

Oth. What if I do obey?

How may the duke be therewith satisfied,

Whose messengers are here about my side,

Upon some present business of the state

To bring me to him?

First Off. 'Tis true, most worthy signior;

The duke's in council, and your noble self,

I am sure, is sent for.

Bra. How! the duke in council!

In this time of the night! Bring him away:

Mine's not an idle cause: the duke himself,

Or any of my brothers of the state,

Cannot but feel this wrong as 'twere their own;

For if such actions may have passage free,

Bond-slaves and pagans shall our statesmen be.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. A council-chamber.

The DUKE and Senators sitting at a table;

Officers attending.

Duke. There is no composition in these news

That gives them credit.

First Sen. My letters say a hundred and seven galleys.

Duke. And mine, a hundred and forty.

Sec. Sen. And mine, two hundred

But though they jump not on a just account,— As in these cases, where the aim reports,

'Tis oft with difference—yet do they all confirm

A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus.

Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judgement:

I do not so secure me in the error,

But the main article I do approve

In fearful sense.

Sailor. [Within] What, ho! what, ho!

what, ho!

First Off. A messenger from the galleys.

Enter a Sailor.

Duke. Now, what's the business!

Sail. The Turkish preparation makes for

Rhodes;

So was I bid report here to the state

By Signior Angelo.

Duke. How say you by this change!

First Sen. This cannot be,

By no assay of reason: 'tis a pageant,

To keep us in false gaze. When we consider

The importance of Cyprus to the Turk,

And let ourselves again but understand,

That as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes,

So may he with more facile question bear it,

For that it stands not in such warlike brace,

But altogether lacks the abilities

That Rhodes is dress'd in: if we make thought of this,

We must not think the Turk is so unskilful

To leave that latest which concerns him first,

Neglecting an attempt of ease and gain,

To wake and wage a danger profitless.

Duke. Nay, in all confidence, he's not for Rhodes.

First Off. Here is more news.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The Ottomites, reverend and gracious,

Steering with due course towards the isle of

Rhodes,

Have there injointed them with an after fleet.

First Sen. Ay, so I thought. How many,

as you guess?

Mess. Of thirty sail: and now they do re-stem

Their backward course, bearing with frank appearance

Their purposes toward Cyprus. Signior Mon-tano,

Your trusty and most valiant servitor,

With his free duty recommends you thus,

And prays you to believe him.

Duke. 'Tis certain, then, for Cyprus.

Marcus Lucios, is not he in town?

First Sen. He's now in Florence.

Duke. Write from us to him; post-post-haste dispatch.

First Sen. Here comes Brabantio and the valiant Moor.

Enter BRABANTIO, OTHELLO, IAGO,

RODERIGO, and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you

! the general enemy Ottoman.

[To Brabantio] I did not see you; welcome,
gentle signior;

We lack'd your counsel and your help to-night.

Bra. So did I yours. Good your grace,
pardon me;

Neither my place nor aught I heard of business Hath rais'd me from my bed, nor doth the general care

Take hold on me, for my particular grief
Is of so flood-gate and o'erbearing nature
That it engulfs and swallows other sorrows
And it is still itself.

Duke. Why, what's the matter?

Bra. My daughter! O, my daughter!

Duke and Sen. Dead?

Bra. Ay, to me;
She is abus'd, stol'n from me, and corrupted
By spells and medicines bought of mount-banks;

For nature so preposterously to err,
Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense,
Sans witchcraft could not.

Duke. Whoe'er he be that in this foul proceeding

Hath thus beguiled your daughter of herself
And you of her, the bloody book of law
You shall yourself read in the bitter letter
After your own sense, yea, though our proper

son
Stood in your action.

Bra. Humbly I thank your grace. 70
Here is the man, this Moor, whom now, it seems,

Your special mandate for the state-affairs
Hath hither brought.

Duke and Sen. We are very sorry for't.

Duke. [To Othello] What, in your own part, can you say to this?

Bra. Nothing, but this is so.

Oth. Most potent, grave, and reverend signiors,

My very noble and approved good masters,
That I have ta'en away this old man's daughter,
It is most true; true, I have married her:
The very head and front of my offending 80
Hath this extent, no more. Rude am I in my

And little bless'd with the soft phrase of peace;
For since these arms of mine had seven years'
pith,

Till now some nine moons wasted, they have us'd

Their dearest action in the tented field,
And little of this great world can I speak,
More than pertains to feats of broil and battle,
And therefore little shall I grace my cause
In speaking for myself. Yet, by your gracious

patience,
I will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver 90
Of my whole course of love; what drugs, what charms,

What conjuration and what mighty magic,
For such proceeding I am charg'd withal,
I won his daughter.

Bra. A maiden never bold;
Of spirit so still and quiet, that her motion
Bare'd it of herself; and she, in spite of nature,
Of years, of country, credit, every thing,

To fall in love with what she fear'd to look on!
It is a judgement maim'd and most imperfect

That will confess perfection so could err 100
Against all rules of nature, and must be driven
To find out practices of cunning hell.

Why this should be. I therefore vouch again
That with some mixtures powerful o'er the
blood,

Or with some dram conjured to this effect,
He wrought upon her.

Duke. To vouch this, is no proof,
Without more wider and more overt test

Than these thin habits and poor likelihoods
Of modern seeming do prefer against him.

First Sen. But, Othello, speak: 110

Did you by indirect and forced courses
Subdue and poison this young maid's affections?

Or came it by request and such fair question
As soul to soul affordeth?

Oth. I do beseech you,
Send for the lady to the Sagittary,
And let her speak of me before her father:

If you do find me foul in her report,
The trust, the office I do hold of you,
Not only take away, but let your sentence
Even fall upon my life.

Duke. Fetch Desdemona hither. 120
Oth. Ancient, conduct them; you best know the place. [Exeunt Iago and Attendants.]

And, till she come, as truly as to heaven
I do confess the vices of my blood,

So justly to your grave ears I'll present
How I did thrive in this fair lady's love,
And she in mine.

Duke. Say it, Othello.

Oth. Her father loved me; oft invited me;
Still question'd me the story of my life,

From year to year, the battles, sieges, fortunes,
That I have pass'd. 131

I ran it through, even from my boyish days,
To the very moment that he bade me tell it;

Wherein I spake of most disastrous chances,
Of moving accidents by flood and field,
Of hair-breadth scapes I the imminent deadly breach,

Of being taken by the insolent foe
And sold to slavery, of my redemption thence
And portance in my travels' history:

Wherein of antres vast and deserts idle, 140
Rough quarries, rocks and hills whose heads touch heaven,

It was my hint to speak,—such was the process;
And of the Cannibals that each other eat,
The Anthropophagi and men whose heads
Do grow beneath their shoulders. This to hear
Would Desdemona seriously incline:

But still the house-affairs would draw her thence:

Which ever as she could with haste dispatch,
She'd come again, and with a greedy ear,
Devour up my discourse: which I observing, 150
Took once a pleasant hour, and found good means
To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart
That I would all my pilgrimage dilate,
Whereof by parcels she had something heard,
But not intensively: I did consent,
And often did beguile her of her tears,

When I did speak of some distressful streaks
That my youth suffer'd. My story being done,
She gave me for my pains a world of sighs:
She swore, in faith, 'twas strange, 'twas passing
strange,

'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful:
She wish'd she had not heard it, yet she wish'd
That heaven had made her such a man: she thank'd me.

And bade me, if I had a friend that loved her,
I should but teach him how to tell my story,
And that would woo her. Upon this hint I spoke:

She loved me for the dangers I had pass'd,
And I loved her that she did pity them.
This only is the witchcraft I have used:
Here comes the lady; let her witness it.

Enter DESDEMONA, IAGO, and Attendants.

Duke. I think this tale would win my daughter too.

Good Brabantio,
Take up this mangled matter at the best:
Men do their broken weapons rather use
Than their bare hands.

Bra. I pray you, hear her speak:
If she confess that she was half the wooer,
Destruction on my head, if my bad blame Light on the man! Come hither, gentle mistress:

Do you perceive in all this noble company
Where most you owe obedience?

Duke. My noble father, 180
I do perceive here a divided duty:
To you I am bound for life and education;
My life and education both do learn me
How to respect you; you are the lord of duty;
I am hitherto your daughter: but here's my husband,

And so much duty as my mother show'd
To you, preferring you before her father,
So much I challenge that I may profess
Due to the Moor my lord.

Bra. God be wi' you! I have done.
Please it your grace, on to the state-affairs: 190
I had rather to adopt a child than get it.
Come hither, Moor:

I here do give thee that with all my heart
Which, but thou hast already, with all my
heart

I would keep from thee. For your sake, jewel,
I am glad at soul I have no other child;
For thy escape would teach me tyranny,
To hang clove on them. I have done, my lord.

Duke. Let me speak like yourself, and lay a sentence,

Which, as a grise or step, may help these lovers
Into your favour.

When remedies are past, the griefs are ended
By seeing the worst, which late on hopes dependent.

To mourn a mischief that is past and gone
Is the next way to draw new mischief on.

What cannot be preserved when fortune takes Patience her injury a mockery makes.
The robb'd that smiles steals something from the thief;

He robs himself that spends a bootless grief.

Bra. So let the Turk of Cyprus be beguile;
We lose it not, so long as we can smile. 225
He hears the sentence well that nothing hears
But the free comfort which from thence he hears,

But he hears both the sentence and the sorrow
That, to pay grief, must of poor patience borrow.
These sentences, to sagar, or to gall,
Being strong on both sides, are equivocal:
But words are words; I never yet did hear
That the bruised heart was pleased through the ear.

I humbly beseech you, proceed to the affairs of state.

Duke. The Turk with a most mighty preparation makes for Cyprus. Othello, the fortitude of the place is best known to you;
and though we have there a substitute of most allowed sufficiency, yet opinion, a sovereign mistress of effects, throws a more safer voice on you: you must therefore be content to stabber the gloss of your new fortunes with this more stubborn and boisterous expedition.

Oth. The tyrant custom, most grave senators,
Hath made the flinty and steel couch of war 231
My thrice-driven bed of down: I do agnize

A natural and prompt alacrity
I find in hardness, and do undertake

These present wars against the Ottomites.
Most humbly therefore bending to your state,

I crave fit disposition for my wife,
Due reverence of place and exhibition,

With such accommodation and besort
As levels with her breeding.

Duke. If you please, 240
Be't as her father's.

Bra. I'll not have it so.

Oth. Nor I. Nor I; I would not there needs.
Duke. Nor I; I would not there needs.

To put my father in impatient thoughts
By being in his eye. Most gracious duke,

To my unfolding lend your prosperous ear;
And let me find a charter in your voice,

To assist my simpleness.

Duke. What would you, Desdemona? 249
Des. That I did love the Moor to live with
him,

My downright violence and storm of fortunes
May trumpet to the world: my heart's subdued
Even to the very quality of my lord:

I saw Othello's visage in his mind,
And to his honours and his valiant parts

Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate.
So that, dear lords, if I be left behind,

A moth of peace, and he go to the war,
The rites for which I love him are beset me,

And I a heavy interim shall support
By his dear absence. Let me go with him.

Oth. Let her have your voice.

Vouch with me, heaven, I therefore beg it not,
To please the palate of my appetite;

Nor to comply with heat—the young affects
In me defunct—and proper satisfaction.

But to be free and bounteous to her mind.
And heaven defend your good selves, that you think

I will your a-
For she is wi-

Of feather'd Cupid seal with wanton dullness
My speculative and officed instruments, 271
That my disports corrupt and taint my business,
Let housewives make a skillet of my helm,
And all indign and base adversities
Make head against my estimation!

Duke. Be it as you shall privately determine,
Either for her stay or going: the affair cries
haste,
And speed must answer it.

First Sen. You must away to-night.

Oth. With all my heart.

Duke. At nine if the morning here we'll meet again. 280

Othello, leave some officer behind,
And he shall our commission bring to you;
With such things else of quality and respect
As doth import you.

Oth. So please your grace, my ancient;
A man he is of honesty and trust:
To his conveyance I assign my wife,
With what else needful your good grace shall think

To be sent after me.

Duke. Let it be so.

Good night to every one. [To Brab.] And,
noble signior,

If virtue no delighted beauty lack, 290
Your son-in-law is far more fair than black.

First Sen. Adieu, brave Moor; use Desdemona well.

Brab. Look to her, Moor, if thou hast eyes to see:

She has deceived her father, and may thee.

[Exeunt Duke, Senators, Officers, &c.]

Oth. My life upon her faith! Honest Iago,
My Desdemona must I leave to thee:

I prithee, let thy wife attend on her;
And bring them after in the best advantage.

Come, Desdemona; I have but an hour
Of love, of worldly matters and direction, 300

To spend with thee: we must obey the time.
[Exeunt Othello and Desdemona.]

Rod. Iago,—

Iago. What say'st thou, noble heart?

Rod. What will I do, thinkest thou?

Iago. Why, go to bed, and sleep.

Rod. I will incontinently drown myself.

Iago. If thou dost, I shall never love thee after. Why, thou silly gentleman!

Rod. It is silliness to live when to live is torment; and then have we a prescription to die when death is our physician. 311

Iago. O villainous! I have looked upon the world for four times seven years; and since I could distinguish betwixt a benefit and an injury, I never found man that knew how to love himself. Ere I would say, I would drown myself for the love of a guinea-hen, I would change my humanity with a baboon.

Rod. What should I do! I confess it is my shame to be so fond; but it is not in my virtue to amend it. 321

Iago. Virtue! a fig! 'tis in ourselves that we are thus or thus. Our bodies are our gardens, to the which our wills are gardeners; so that if we will plant nettles, or sow lettuce, set hyacinth and weed up thyme, supply it with one gender of herbs, or distract it with many, either to have it sterile with idleness, or manured with industry, why, the power and corrigible authority of this lies in our wills. If the balance of our lives had not one scale of reason to poise another of sensuality, the blood and baseness of our natures would conduct us to most proposterous conclusions: but we have reason to cool our raging motions, our carnal stings, our unbitted lusts, whereof I take this that you call love to be a sect or scion.

Rod. It cannot be.

Iago. It is merely a lust of the blood and a permission of the will. Come, be a man. Drown thyself! drown cats and blind puppies. I have professed me thy friend and I confess me knit to thy deserving with cables of perdurable toughness; I could never better stead thee than now.
Put money in thy purse; follow thou the wars;
defeat thy favour with an usurped beard; I say, put money in thy purse. It cannot be that Desdemona should long continue her love to the Moor,—put money in thy purse,—nor he his to her: it was a violent commencement, and thou shalt see an answerable sequestration:— put but money in thy purse. These Moors are changeable in their wills:—fill thy purse with money:—the food that to him now is as luscious as locusts, shall be to him shortly as bitter as coloquintida. She must change for youth:
when she is sated with his body, she will find the error of her choice: she must have change, she must: therefore put money in thy purse.
If thou wilt needs damn thyself, do it a more delicate way than drowning. Make all the money thou canst: if sanctimony and a frail vow betwixt an erring barbarian and a super-subtle Venetian be not too hard for my wits and all the tribe of hell, thou shalt enjoy her; therefore make money. A pox of drowning thyself! it is clean out of the way: seek thou rather to be hanged in compassing thy joy than to be drowned and go without her.

Rod. Wilt thou be fast to my hopes, if I depend on the issue? 320

Iago. Thou art sure of me:—go, make money:—I have told thee often, and I re-tell thee again and again, I hate the Moor: my cause is hearted; thine hath no less reason.
Let us be conjunctive in our revenge against him; if thou canst cuckold him, thou dost thyself a pleasure, me a sport. There are many events in the womb of time which will be delivered. Traverse! go, provide thy money.
We will have more of this to-morrow. Adieu.

Rod. Where shall we meet? the morning!

Iago. At my lodging.

Rod. I'll be with thee betimes.

Iago. Go to; farewell. Do you hear,
Roderigo?

Rod. What say you?

Iago. No more of drowning, do you hear?

Rod. I am changed: I'll go sell all my land.

[Exit.]

Iago. Thus do I ever make my fool my purse;
For I mine own gain'd knowledge should profane, 320

If I would time expend with such a snipe,
But for my sport and profit. I hate the Moor;
And it is thought abroad, that 'twixt my sheets
He has done my office: I know not if 't be true;
But I, for mere suspicion in that kind,
Will do as if for surety. He holds me well;
The better shall my purpose work on him.
(Cassio's a proper man: let me see now:
To get his place and to plume up my will
In double knavery—How, how!—Let's see:—
After some time, to abuse Othello's ear 401
That he is too familiar with his wife.
He hath a person and a smooth dispose
To be suspected, framed to make women false.
The Moor is of a free and open nature,
That thinks men honest that but seem to be so,
And will as tenderly be led by the nose
As asses are.
I have't. It is engender'd. Hell and night Must bring this monstrous birth to the world's light. [Exit. 410

ACT II.

SCENE I. A Sea-port in Cyprus. An open place near the quay.

Enter MONTANO and two Gentlemen.

Mon. What from the cape can you discern at sea?

First Gent. Nothing at all: it is a high-wrought flood;
I cannot, 'twixt the heaven and the main,
Descry a sail.

Mon. Methinks the wind hath spoke aloud
at land;
A fuller blast ne'er shook our battlements:
If it hath ruffian'd so upon the sea,
What ribs of oak, when mountains melt on
them,

Can hold the mortise? What shall we hear of this?

Sec. Gent. A segregation of the Turkish fleet: 10

For do but stand upon the foaming shore,
The chidden billow seems to pelt the clouds;
The wind-shaken surge, with high and monstrous mane,

Seems to cast water on the burning bear,
And quench the guards of the ever-fixed pole:
I never did like molestation view
On the enchafed flood.

Mon. If that the Turkish fleet
Be not ensheather'd and embay'd, they are drown'd;

It is impossible they bear it out. 19

Enter a third Gentleman.

Third Gent. News, lads! our wars are done.
The desperate tempest hath so bang'd the Turks
That their designment halts: a noble ship o'
Venice

Hath seen a grievous wreck and sufferance
On most part of their fleet.

Mon. How! is this true?

Third Gent. The ship is here put in,
A Venetian; Michael Cassio,
Lieutenant to the warlike Moor Othello,
Is come on shore: the Moor himself at sea,

And is in full commission here for Cyprus.

Mon. I am glad on't: 'tis a worthy governor.

Third Gent. But this same Cassio, though he speak of comfort 31
Touching the Turkish loss, yet he looks sadly,
And prays the Moor be safe; for they were parted

With foul and violent tempest.

Mon. Pray heavens he be;
For I have served him, and the man commands
Like a full soldier. Let's to the seaside, ho!
As well to see the vessel that's come in
As to throw out our eyes for brave Othello,
Even till we make the main and the aerial blue
An indistinct regard.

Third Gent. Come, let's do so; 40
For every minute is expectancy
Of more arrivance.

Enter CASSIO.

Cas. Thanks, you the valiant of this warlike isle,

That so approve the Moor! O, let the heavens
Give him defence against the elements,
For I have lost him on a dangerous sea.

Mon. Is he well shipp'd?

Cas. His bark is stoutly timber'd, and his pilot

Of very expert and approved allowance;
Therefore my hopes, not surfeited to death, 30
Stand in bold cure.

[A cry within 'A sail, a sail, a sail!']

Enter a fourth Gentleman.

Cas. What noise?

Fourth Gent. The town is empty; on the brow o' the sea

Stand ranks of people, and they cry 'A sail!'

Cas. My hopes do shape him for the governor.

[Guns heard.
Sec. Gent. They do discharge their shot of courtesy:

Our friends at least.

Cas. I pray you, sir, go forth,

And give us truth who 'tis that is arrived.

Sec. Gent. I shall. [Exit.
Mon. But, good lieutenant, is your general
wived? 60

Cas. Most fortunately: he hath achieved a maid

That paragons description and wild fame;
One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens,
And in the essential vesture of creation
Does tire the ingener.

Re-enter second Gentleman.

How now! who has put in?
Sec. Gent. 'Tis one Iago, ancient to the general.

Cas. Has had most favourable and happy speed:
Tempests themselves, high seas and howling
winds,

The gutter'd rocks and congregated sands,—
Traitors ensteep'd to clog the guilless heel—
As having sense of beauty, do omit
Their mortal natures, letting go safely by The divine Desdemona.

Mon. What is she!

Cas. She that I spake of, our great captain's captain,

Left in the conduct of the bold Iago.

Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts
As midnight's speed. Great Jove, Othello guard,
And swell his sail with thine own powerful
breath,

That he may bless this bay with his tall ship,
Make love's quick pants in Desdemona's arms,
Give renew'd fire to our extincted spirits,
And bring all Cyprus comfort!

Enter DESDEMONA, EMILIA, IAGO, RODERIGO, and Attendants.

O, behold,

The riches of the ship is come on shore!
Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees.
Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven,
Before, behind thee and on every hand,
Knnewh thee round!

Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio.
What tidings can you tell me of my lord?

Cas. He is not yet arrived: nor know I
aught

But that he's well and will be shortly here.

Des. O, but I fear—How lost you company?

Cas. The great contention of the sea and skies

Parted our fellowship—But, hark! a sail.

[Within 'A sail, a sail!'] Guns heard.
Sec. Gent. They give their greeting to the citadel:

This likewise is a friend.

Cas. See for the news. [Exit Gentleman.
Good ancient, you are welcome. [To Emilia]

Welcome, mistress:
Let it not gall your patience, good Iago,
That I extend my manners; 'tis my breeding
That gives me this bold show of courtesy.

Iago. Sir, would she give you so much of her lips
As of her tongue she oft bestows on me,
You'd have enough.

Des. Alas, she has no speech.
Iago. In faith, too much:

I find it still, when I have list to sleep:
Marry, before your ladyship, I grant,
She puts her tongue a little in her heart,
And chides with thinking.

Emil. You have little cause to say so.
Iago. Come on, come on; you are pictures out of doors,

Bells in your parlours, wild-cats in your kitchens,
Saints in your injuries, devils being offended,
Players in your housewifery, and housewives
in your beds.

Des. O, so upon thee, slanderer!

Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk:
You rise to play and go to bed to work.

Emil. You shall not write my praise.

Iago. No, let me not.
Des. What wouldst thou write of me, if thou shouldst praise me?

Iago. O gentle lady, do not put me to 't;
For I am nothing, if not critical.

Des. Come on, away. There's one gone to the harbour!

Iago. Ay, madam.

Des. I am not merry; but I do beguile

The thing I am, by seeming otherwise.

Cas. How wouldst thou praise me?

Iago. I am about it; but indeed my invention

Comes from my pate as birdlime does from frize;

It plucks out brains and all: but my Muse labours

And thus she is deliver'd.

If she be fair and wise, fairness and wit,
The one's for use, the other useth it.

Des. Well praised! How if she be black and witty?

Iago. If she be black, and thereto have a
wit,

She'll find a white that shall her blackness fit.

Des. Worse and worse.

Emil. How if fair and foolish?

Iago. She never yet was foolish that was fair;

For even her folly help'd her to an heir.

Des. These are old fond paradoxes to make fools laugh i' the alehouse. What miserable praise hast thou for her that's foul and foolish!

Iago. There's none so foul and foolish there-unto,

But does foul pranks which fair and wise ones
do.

Des. O heavy ignorance! thou praisest the worst best. But what praise couldst thou bestow on a deserving woman indeed, one that, in the authority of her merit, did justly put on the vouch of very malice itself!

Iago. She that was ever fair and never proud,

Had tongue at will and yet was never loud,
Never lack'd gold and yet went never gay,

Pled from her wish and yet said 'Now I may,'
She that being anger'd, her revenge being nigh,

Bade her wrong stay and her displeasure fly,
She that in wisdom never was so frail

To change the cod's head for the salmon's tail,
She that could think and ne'er disclose her

mind,
See suitors following and not look behind,

She was a wight, if ever such wight were,—

Des. To do what?

Iago. To suckle fools and chronicle small beer.

Des. O most lame and impotent conclusion!
Do not learn of him, Emilia, though he be thy husband. How say you, Cassio? is he not a most profane and liberal councillor?

Cas. He speaks home, madam; you may relish him more in the soldier than in the scholar.

Iago. [Aside] He takes her by the palm:
ay, well said, whisper: with as little a web as this will I ensnare as great a fly as Cassio. A3.

smile upon her, do: I will give thee in thine own courtship. You may true: 'tis so, indeed:

if such tricks as these slip you out of your lieutenantry, it had been better you had not kissed your three fingers so oft, which now

again you are most apt to play the air in. Very good; well kissed! an excellent courtesy! 'tis so, indeed. Yet again your fingers to your lips! would they were cyaster-pipes for your sake! [Trumpet within.] The Moor! I know his trumpet. 180

Cas. 'Tis truly so.

Des. Let's meet him and receive him.

Cas. Lo, where he comes!

Enter OTHELLO and Attendants.

Oth. O my fair warrior!

Des. My dear Othello!

Oth. It gives me wonder great as my content To see you here before me. O my soul's joy! If after every tempest come such calms, May the winds blow till they have waken'd death!

And let the labouring bark climb hills of seas Olympus-high and duck again as low 190

As hell's from heaven! If it were now to die, 'Twere now to be most happy; for, I fear, My soul hath her content so absolute That not another comfort like to this Succeeds in unknown fate.

Des. The heavens forbid But that our loves and comforts should increase, Even as our days do grow!

Oth. Amen to that, sweet powers! I cannot speak enough of this content; It stops me here; it is too much of joy: 199 And this, and this, the greatest discord be [Kissing her.]

That e'er our hearts shall make!

Iago. [Aside.] O, you are well tuned now! But I'll set down the pegs that make this music,

As honest as I am.

Oth. Come, let us to the castle. News, friends; our wars are done, the Turks are drown'd.

How does my old acquaintance of this isle? Honey, you shall be well desired in Cyprus; I have found great love amongst them. O my sweet,

I prattle out of fashion, and I dote In mine own comforts. I prithee, good Iago, Go to the bay and disembark my coffers: 201 Bring thou the master to the citadel; He is a good one, and his worthiness Does challenge much respect. Come, Desdemona,

Once more, well met at Cyprus.

Exeunt Othello, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Iago. Do thou meet me presently at the harbour. Come hither. If thou be'st valiant,—as, they say, base men being in love have then a nobility in their natures more than is native to them,—list me. The lieutenant to-night watches on the court of guard:—first, I must tell thee this—Desdemona is directly in love with him. 205

Rod. With him! why, 'tis not possible.
Iago. Lay thy finger thus, and let thy soul be instructed. Mark me with what violence she first loved the Moor, but for bragging and telling her fantastical lies; and will she love him still for prating! let not thy discreet heart think it. Her eye must be fed; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil! When the blood is made dull with the act of sport, there should be, again to inflame it and to give satiety a fresh appetite, loveliness in 'amour, sympathy in years, manners and beauties; all which the Moor is defective in: now, for want of these required conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abused, begin to heave the gorge, disrelish and abhor the Moor; very nature will instruct her in it and compel her to some second choice. Now, sir, this granted,—as it is a most pregnant and unforced position—who stands so eminent in the degree of this fortune as Cassio does! a knave very voluble; no further conscionable than in putting on the mere form of civil and humane seeming, for the better compassing of his salt and most hidden loose affection! why, none; why, none: a slipper and subtle knave, a finder of occasions, that has an eye can stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage never present itself; a devilish knave. Besides, the knave is handsome, young, and hath all those requisites in him that folly and green minds look after: a pestilent complete knave; and the woman hath found him already.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her; she's full of most blessed condition.

Iago. Blessed fig's-end! the wine she drinks is made of grapes: if she had been blessed, she would never have loved the Moor. Blessed pudding! Didst thou not see her paddle with the palm of his hand! didst not mark that!

Rod. Yes, that I did; but that was but courtesy.

Iago. Lechery, by this hand; an index and obscure prologue to the history of lust and foul thoughts. They met so near with their lips that their breaths embraced together. Villanous thoughts, Roderigo! when these mutualities so marshal the way, hard at hand comes the master and main exercise, the incorporate conclusion. Fish! But, sir, be you ruled by me: I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to-night; for the command, I'll lay't upon you. Cassio knows you not. I'll not be far from you; do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or taunting his discipline; or from what other course you please, which the time shall more favourably minister.

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he is rash and very sudden in choler, and haply may stalk at you; provoke him, that he may; for even out of that will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny: whose qualification shall come into no true taste again but by the displanting of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires by the means I shall then have to prefer them; and the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity.

Rod. I will do this, if I can, being it is my opportunity. 210

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the citadel: I must fetch his ashore. Farewell.

Rod. Adieu.

[Exit.

Iago. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it;

That she loves him, 'tis apt and of great credit
The Moor, howbeit that I endure him not,
Is of a constant, loving, noble nature,
And I dare think he'll prove to Desdemona
A most dear husband. Now, I do love her too
Not out of absolute lust, though peradventure
I stand accountant for as great a sin,
But partly led to diet my revenge,
For that I do suspect the lusty Moor
Hath leap'd into my seat; the thought whereof Doth, like a poisonous mineral, gnaw my inwards;

And nothing can or shall content my soul
Till I am even'd with him, wife for wife,
Or falling so, yet that I put the Moor
At least into a jealousy so strong That judgement cannot cure. Which thing to do,

If this poor trash of Venice, whom I trash
For his quick hunting, stand the putting on,
I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip,
Abuse him to the Moor in the rank garb—
For I fear Cassio with my night-cap too—
Make the Moor thank me, love me and reward
me.

For making him egregiously an ass
And practising upon his peace and quiet
Even to madness. 'Tis here, but yet confused:
Knavery's plain face is never seen till used.

[Exit.

SCENE II. A street.

Enter a Herald with a proclamation; People following.

Her. It is Othello's pleasure, our noble and valiant general, that, upon certain tidings now arrived, importing the mere perdition of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into triumph; some to dance, some to make bonfires, each man to what sport and revels his addiction leads him: for, besides these beneficial news, it is the celebration of his nuptial.
So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed.
All offices are open, and there is full liberty of feasting from this present hour of five till the bell have told eleven. Heaven bless the isle of Cyprus and our noble general Othello! [Exeunt.

SCENE III. A hall in the castle.

Enter OTHELLO, DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and Attendants.

Oth. Good Michael, look you to the guard to-night:
Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop,
Not to outstrip discretion.

Cas. Iago hath direction what to do;
But notwithstanding, with my personal eye
Will I look to't.

Oth. Iago is most honest.
Michael, good night: to-morrow with your cousins

Let me have speech with you. [To Desdemona]

Come, my dear love,
The purchase made, the fruits are to ensue;
That profit's yet to come 'tween me and you. 10
Good night.

[Exeunt Othello, Desdemona, and Attendants.]

Enter IAGO.

Cas. Welcome, Iago; we must to the watch.
Iago. Not this hour, lieutenant; 'tis not yet ten o' the clock. Our general cast us thus early for the love of his Desdemona; who let us not therefore blame: he hath not yet made wanton
the night with her; and she is a sport for Jove.

Cas. She's a most exquisite lady.
Iago. And, I'll warrant her, full of game.
Cas. Indeed, she's a most fresh and delicate creature. 21

Iago. What an eye she has! methinks it sounds a parley of provocation.

Cas. An inviting eye; and yet methinks right modest.

Iago. And when he speaks, is it not an alarm to love?

Cas. She is indeed perfection.
Iago. Well, happiness to their sheets! Come, lieutenant, I have a stoup of wine; and here without are a brace of Cyprus gallants that would fain have a measure to the health of black Othello.

Cas. Not to-night, good Iago: I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking: I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment.

Iago. O, they are our friends; but one cup:
I'll drink for you. 39

Cas. I have drunk but one cup to-night, and that was craftily qualified too, and, behold, what innovation it makes here: I am unfortunate in the infirmity, and dare not task my weakness with any more.

Iago. What, man! 'tis a night of revels: the gallants desire it.

Cas. Where are they?

Iago. Here at the door; I pray you, call them in.

Cas. I'll do't; but it dislikes me. [Exit.]

Iago. If I can fasten but one cup upon him,
With that which he hath drunk to-night already, 51

He'll be as full of quarrel and offence
As my young mistress' dog. Now, my sick fool Roderigo,
Whom love hath turn'd almost the wrong side
out,

To Desdemona hath to-night caroused
Potations pottle-deep; and he's to watch:
Three lads of Cyprus, noble swelling spirits,
That hold their honours in a wary distance,
The very elements of this warlike isle,
Have I to-night fluster'd with flowing cups. 60
And they watch too. Now, amongst this flock of drunkards,

Am I to put our Cassio in some action
That may offend the isle.—But here they come:
If consequence do but approve my dream,
My boat sails freely, both with wind and stream.

Re-enter CASSIO; with him MONTANO and Gentlemen; Servants following with wine.

Cas. 'Fore God, they have given me a rouse already.

Mon. Good faith, a little one; not past a pint, as I am a soldier.

Iago. Some wine, ho! 70

[Sings] And let me the canakin clink, clink;
And let me the canakin clink:

A soldier's a man;

A life's but a span;

Why, then, let a soldier drink.

Some wine, boys!

Cas. 'Fore God, an excellent song.

Iago. I learned it in England, where, indeed, they are most potent in potting: your Dane, your German, and your swag-bellied Hollander—Drink, ho!—are nothing to your English. 81

Cas. Is your Englishman so expert in his drinking?

Iago. Why, he drinks you, with facility, your Dane dead drunk; he sweats not to overthrow your Almain; he gives your Hollander a vomit, ere the next pottle can be filled.

Cas. To the health of our general!

Mon. I am for it, lieutenant; and I'll do you justice. 90

Iago. O sweet England!

King Stephen was a worthy peer,

His breeches cost him but a crown;

He held them sixpence all too dear,

With that he call'd the tailor lown.

He was a wight of high renown,

And thou art but of low degree:

'Tis pride that pulls the country down;

Then take thine auld clonk about thee.

Some wine, ho! 100

Cas. Why, this is a more exquisite song than the other.

Iago. Will you hear't again?

Cas. No; for I hold him to be unworthy of his place that does those things. Well, God's above all; and there be souls must be saved, and there be souls must not be saved.

Iago. It's true, good lieutenant.

Cas. For mine own part,—no offence to the general, nor any man of quality,—I hope to be saved. 111

Iago. And so do I too, lieutenant.

Cas. Ay, but, by your leave, not before me; the lieutenant is to be saved before the ancient. Let's have no more of this; let's to our affairs.—

Forgive us our sins!—Gentlemen, let's look to our business. Do not think, gentlemen, I am drunk: this is my ancient; this is my right hand; and this is my left: I am not drunk now; I can stand well enough, and speak well enough. 120

All. Excellent well.

Cas. Why, very well then; you must not think then that I am drunk. [Exit.]

Mon. To the platform, masters; come, let's set the watch.

Iago. You see this fellow that is gone before;

He is a soldier fit to stand by Caesar

And give direction: and do but see his vice;

'Tis to his virtue a just equinox.
The one as long as the other: 'tis pity of him.
I fear the trust Othello puts him in, 131
On some odd time of his infirmity,
Will shake this island.

Mon. But is he often thus?

Iago. 'Tis evermore the prologue to his sleep:

He'll watch the horologe a double set,
If drink rock not his cradle.

Mon. It were well

The general were put in mind of it.
Perhaps he sees it not; or his good nature
Prizes the virtue that appears in Cassio, 139
And looks not on his evils: is not this true?

Enter RODERIGO.

Iago. [Aside to him] How now, Roderigo! I pray you, after the lieutenant; go.

[Exit Roderigo.]

Mon. And 'tis great pity that the noble

Moor

Should hazard such a place as his own second
With one of an ingraft infirmity:

It were an honest action to say

So to the Moor.

Iago. Not I, for this fair island;

I do love Cassio well; and would do much To cure him of this evil—But, hark! what noise! [Cry within: 'Help! help!']

Re-enter CASSIO, driving in RODERIGO.

Cas. You rogue! you rascal!

Mon. What's the matter, lieutenant?

Cas. A knave teach me my duty! 151

I'll beat the knave into a twiggen bottle.

Rod. Beat me!

Cas. Dost thou prate, rogue!

[Striking Roderigo.]

Mon. Nay, good lieutenant;

[Staying him.]

I pray you, sir, hold your hand.

Cas. Let me go, sir.

Or I'll knock you o'er the mazzard.

Mon. Come, come, you're drunk.

Cas. Drunk! [They fight.]

Iago. [Aside to Roderigo] Away, I say; go out, and cry a mutiny. [Exit Roderigo.]

Nay, good lieutenant,—alas, gentlemen!—

Help, ho!—Lieutenant,—sir,—Montano,—sir!— 159

Help, masters!—Here's a goodly watch indeed! [Bell rings.]

Who's that which rings the bell!—Diablo, ho! The town will rise: God's will, lieutenant, hold!

You will be shamed for ever.

Re-enter OTHELLO and Attendants.

Oth. What is the matter here?

Mon. 'Zounds, I bleed still; I am hurt to the death. [Faints.]

Oth. Hold, for your lives!

Iago. Hold, ho! Lieutenant,—sir,—Montano,—gentlemen,—

Have you forgot all sense of place and duty?

Hold! the general speaks to you; hold, hold, for shame!

Oth. Why, how now, ho! from whence arise this?

Are we turn'd Turks, and to ourselves do that
Which heaven hath forbid the Ottomites? ¹⁷⁷
For Christian shame, put by this barbarous brawl!

He that stirs next to carve for his own rage
Holds his soul light; he dies upon his motion.
Silence that dreadful bell: it frights the isle
From her propriety. What is the matter, masters?

Honest Iago, that look'st dead with grieving,
Speak, who began this! on thy love, I charge
thee.

Iago. I do not know: friends all but now, even now, ¹⁷⁹

In quarter, and in terms like bride and groom
Dressing them for bed; and then, but now—
As if some planet had unwitted men—
Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast,
In opposition bloody. I cannot speak
Any beginning to this peevish odds:
And would in action glorious I had lost
Those legs that brought me to a part of it!

Oth. How comes it, Michael, you are thus forget?

Cas. I pray you, pardon me; I cannot speak.

Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont to be civil; ¹⁸⁰

The gravity and stillness of your youth
The world hath noted, and your name is great
In mouths of wisest censure: what's the matter,
That you unlace your reputation thus
And spend your rich opinion for the name
Of a night-brawler? I give me answer to it.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger:
Your officer, Iago, can inform you,— While I spare speech, which something now offends me,—

Of all that I do know: nor know I aught ¹⁸⁰
By me that's said or done amiss this night;
Unless self-charity be sometimes a vice,
And to defend ourselves it be a sin
When violence assails us.

Oth. Now, by heaven,
My blood begins my safer guides to rule;
And passion, having my best judgement collied,
Awaits to lead the way: if I once stir,
Or do but lift this arm, the best of you Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know How this foul rout began, who set it on; ¹⁸⁰
—that is approved in this offence,
—he had twinn'd with me, both at a

Shall lose me. What! in a town of war,
Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear,
To manage private and domestic quarrel,
In night, and on the court and guard of safety!
This monstrous Iago, who began 't?

Mon. If partially sinned, or leagu'd in office,
Then dost deliver more or less than truth,
Thou art no soldier.

Iago. Trench me not so near: ¹⁸⁰
I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth.

It should do offence to Michael Cassio;
I persuade myself, to speak the truth
I nothing wrong him. Thus it is, general.

Montano and myself being in speech,
There comes a fellow crying out for help;
And Cassio following him with determined sword,

To execute upon him. Sir, this gentleman
Steps in to Cassio, and entreats his pause—
Myself the crying fellow did pursue, ¹⁸⁰
Lest by his clamour—as it fell out—
The town might fall in fright: he, swift of foot, Outran my purpose; and I return'd the rather
For that I heard the clink and fall of swords,
And Cassio high in oath; which till to-night
I ne'er might say before. When I came back—
For this was brief—I found them close together,
At blow and thrust; even as again they were
When you yourself did part them.

More of this matter cannot I report: ¹⁸⁰
But men are men; the best sometimes forget;
Though Cassio did some little wrong to him,
As men in rage strike those that wish them
best,

Yet surely Cassio, I believe, received
From him that fled some strange indignity,
Which patience could not pass.

Oth. I know, Iago,
Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter,
Making it light to Cassio. Cassio, I love thee;
But never more be officer of mine.

Re-enter DESDEMONA, attended.

Look, if my gentle love be not raised up! ¹⁸⁰
I'll make thee an example.

Des. What's the matter?
Oth. All's well now, sweeting; come away to bed.

Sir, for your hurts, myself will be your surgeon:
Lead him off. [To Montano, who is led off.
Iago, look with care about the town,
And silence those whom this vile brawl distracted.

Come, Desdemona: 'tis the soldiers' life
To have their balmy slumbers waked with strife. [Exeunt all but Iago and Cassio.

Iago. What, are you hurt, lieutenant?

Cas. Ay, past all surgery. ¹⁸⁰

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!

Cas. Reputation, reputation, reputation! O,
I have lost my reputation! I have lost the immortal part of myself, and what remains is bestial. My reputation, Iago, my reputation!

Iago. As I am an honest man, I thought you had received some bodily wound; there is more sense in that than in reputation. Reputation is an idle and most false imposition; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving:
you have lost no reputation at all, unless you repute yourself such a loser. What, man! there are ways to recover the general again: you are but now cast in his mood, a punishment more in policy than in malice; even so as one would beat his offenceless dog to frighten an imperious lion: sue to him again, and he's yours.

Cas. I will rather sue to be despised than to deceive so good a commander with so slight, so drunken, and so indiscreet an officer. Drunk!
and speak parrot! and squabble! swagger!
swear! and discourse foolishly with one's own shadow! O thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee devil!

Iago. What was he that you followed with your sword? What had he done to you?

Cas. I know not.

Iago. Is't possible?

Cas. I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinctly; a quarrel, but nothing wherefore. O God, that men should put an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains! that we should, with joy, pleasance, revel and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!

Iago. Why, but you are now well enough: how came you thus recovered?

Cas. Is hath pleased the devil drunkenness to give place to the devil wrath: one unperfectness shows me another, to make me frankly despise myself.

Iago. Come, you are too severe a moralist: as the time, the place, and the condition of this country stands, I could heartily wish this had not befallen; but, since it is as it is, mend it for your own good.

Cas. I will ask him for my place again; he shall tell me I am a drunkard! Had I as many mouths as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast! O strange! Every inordinate cup is unblessed and the ingredient is a devil.

Iago. Come, come, good wine is a good familiar creature, if it be well used: exclaim no more against it. And, good lieutenant, I think you think I love you.

Cas. I have well approved it, sir. I drunk!

Iago. You or any man living may be drunk at a time, man. I'll tell you what you shall do. Our general's wife is now the general: I may say so in this respect, for that he hath devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark, and denotement of her parts and graces: confess yourself freely to her; importune her help to put you in your place again: she is of so free, so kind, so apt, so blessed a disposition, she holds it a vice in her goodness not to do more than she is requested: this broken joint between you and her husband entreat her to splinter; and, my fortunes against any lay worth naming, this crack of your love shall grow stronger than it was before.

Cas. You advise me well.

Iago. I protest, in the sincerity of love and honest kindness.

Cas. I think it freely; and betimes in the morning I will beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me: I am desperate of my fortunes if they check me here.

Iago. You are in the right. Good night, lieutenant; I must to the watch.

Cas. Good night, honest Iago. [Exit.]

Iago. And what's he then that says I play the villain?

When this advice is free I give and honest, Probat to thinking and indeed the course To win the Moor again! For his most easy The kneeling Desdemona to subdue

In any honest suit: she's framed as fruitful As the free elements. And then for her To win the Moor—were't to announce his baptism.

All seals and symbols of redeemed sin, His soul is so enfeiter'd to her love, That she may make, unmake, do what she list, Even as her appetite shall play the god With his weak function. How am I then a villain

To counsel Cassio to this parallel course, Directly to his good? Divinity of hell! When devils will the blackest sins put on, They do suggest at first with heavenly shows, As I do now: for whiles this honest fool Plies Desdemona to repair his fortunes And she for him pleads strongly to the Moor, I'll pour this pestilence into his ear, That she repeats him for her body's lust; And by how much she strives to do him good, She shall undo her credit with the Moor. So will I turn her virtue into pitch, And out of her own goodness make the net That shall enmesh them all.

Re-enter RODERIGO.

How now, Roderigo!

Rod. I do follow here in the chase, not like a hound that hunts, but one that fills up the cry. My money is almost spent; I have been to-night exceedingly well juggled; and I think the issue will be, I shall have so much experience for my pains, and, so, with no money at all and a little more wit, return again to Venice.

Iago. How poor are they that have not patience!

What wound did ever heal but by degrees? Thou know'st we work by wit, and not by witchcraft;

And wit depends on dilatory time. Does't not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee, And thou, by that small hurt, hast cashier'd Cassio.

Though other things grow fair against the sun, Yet fruits that blossom first will first be ripe: Content thyself awhile. By the mass, tis morning;

Pleasure and action make the hours seem short. Retire thee; go where thou art billeted:

Away, I say; thou shalt know more hereafter: Nay, get thee gone. [Exit Roderigo.] Two things are to be done:

My wife must move for Cassio to her mistress; I'll set her on;

Myself the while to draw the Moor apart, Cassio shall

ACT III

SCENE I. Before the castle.

Enter CASSIO and some Mutes.

Cas. Mistress, play here; I will contain your pains; Something that's brief; and bid 'Good morning, general.'

Enter Clown.

Clo. Why, masters, have your instruments been in Naples, that they speak i' the nose thus?
First Mus. How, sir, how!

Clo. Are these, I pray you, wind-instruments!

First Mus. Ay, marry, are they, sir.

Clo. O, thereby hangs a tale.

First Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, sir?

Clo. Marry, sir, by many a wind-instrument that I know. But, masters, here's money for you; and the general so likes your music, that he desires you, for love's sake, to make no more noise with it.

First Mus. Well, sir, we will not.

Clo. If you have any music that may not be heard, to't again; but, as they say, to hear music the general does not greatly care.

First Mus. We have none such, sir.

Clo. Then put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away; go; vanish into air; away!

[Exit Musicians.]

Cas. Dost thou hear, my honest friend?

Clo. No, I hear not your honest friend; I hear you.

Cas. Prithee, keep up thy quilllets. There's a poor piece of gold for thee: if the gentlewoman that attends the general's wife be stirring, tell her there's one Cassio entreats her a little favour of speech: wilt thou do this?

Clo. She is stirring, sir; if she will stir hither, I shall seem to notify unto her.

Cas. Do, good my friend. [Exit Clown.]

Enter IAGO.

In happy time, Iago.

Iago. You have not been a-bed, then?

Cas. Why, no; the day had broke before we parted. I have made bold, Iago, to send in to your wife: my suit to her is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona procure me some access.

Iago. I'll send her to you presently; And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor out of the way, that your converse and business may be more free.

Cas. I humbly thank you for't. [Exit Iago.]

I never knew

A Florentine more kind and honest.

Enter EMILIA.

Emil. Good morrow, good lieutenant: I am sorry

For your displeasure; but all will sure be well. The general and his wife are talking of it; And she speaks for you stoutly: the Moor

That he you hurt is of great fame in Cyprus And great affinity and that in wholesome wisdom

He might not but refuse you, but he protests he loves you

And sends no other suitor but his likings To seek the safest opportunity by the front To speak you in again.

Yet, I beseech you, If you think fit, or that it may be done,

Give me advantage of some brief discourse With Desdemona alone.

Emil. Pray you, come in: I will bestow you where you shall have time To speak your bosom freely.

Cas. I am much bound to you. [Exit.]

SCENE II. A room in the castle.

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and Gentlemen.

Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the pilot; And by him do my duties to the senate: That done, I will be walking on the works; Repair there to me.

Iago. Well, my good lord, I'll do't.
Oth. This fortification, gentlemen, shall we see?

Gent. We'll wait upon your lordship. [Exit.]

SCENE III. The garden of the castle.

Enter DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and EMILIA.

Des. Be thou assured, good Cassio, I will do All my abilities in thy behalf.

Emil. Good madam, do: I warrant it grieves my husband, As if the case were his.

Des. O, that's an honest fellow. Do not doubt, Cassio, But I will have my lord and you again As friendly as you were.

Cas. Bounteous madam, Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio, He's never any thing but your true servant.

Des. I know't; I thank you. You do love my lord: You have known him long; and be you well assured

He shall in strangeness stand no further off Than in a politic distance.

Cas. Ay, but, lady, That policy may either last so long, Or feed upon such nice and waterish diet, Or breed itself so out of circumstance, That, I being absent and my place supplied, My general will forget my love and service.

Des. Do not doubt that; before Emilia here I give thee warrant of thy place: assure thee, so If I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it To the last article: my lord shall never rest; I'll watch him tame and talk him out of patience;

His lads shall seem a school, his board a shrift; I'll intermingle every thing he does With Cassio's suit: therefore be merry, Cassio; For thy solicitor shall rather die Than give thy cause away.

Emil. Madam, here comes my lord.

Cas. Madam, I'll take my leave.

Des. Why, stay, and hear me speak.

Cas. Madam, not now: I am very ill at ease, Unfit for mine own purposes.

Des. Well, do your discretion. [Exit Cassio.]

Enter OTHELLO and IAGO.

Ha! I like not that.

What dost thou say?

Iago. Nothing, my lord: or if—I know not ^{what};
Oth. Was not that Cassio parted from my wife?
Iago. Cassio, my lord! No, sure, I cannot think it.
 That he would steal away so guilty-like, Seeing you coming.
Oth. I do believe 'twas he. 40
Des. How now, my lord!
 I have been talking with a suitor here, A man that languishes in your displeasure.
Oth. Who is't you mean?
Des. Why, your lieutenant, Cassio. Good my lord,
 If I have any grace or power to move you, His present reconciliation take;
 For if he be not one that truly loves you, That errs in ignorance and not in cunning, I have no judgement in an honest face: 50
I prithee, call him back.
Oth. Went he hence now?
Des. Ay, sooth; so humbled That he hath left part of his grief with me, To suffer with him. Good love, call him back.
Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemona; some other time.
Des. But shall't be shortly?
Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you.
Des. Shall't be to-night at supper?
Oth. No, not to-night.
Des. To-morrow dinner, then?
Oth. I shall not dine at home;
 I meet the captains at the citadel.
Des. Why, then, to-morrow night; or Tuesday morn; 60
 On Tuesday noon, or night; on Wednesday morn:
 I prithee, name the time, but let it not Exceed three days: in faith, he's penitent;
 And yet his trespass, in our common reason— Save that, they say, the wars must make examples
 Out of their best—is not almost a fault To incur a private check. When shall he come?
 Tell me, Othello: I wonder in my soul, What you would ask me, that I should deny, Or stand so mammering on. What! Michael Cassio, 70
 That came a-wooing with you, and so many a time,
 When I have spoke of you dispraisingly, Hath ta'en your part; to have so much to do To bring him in! Trust me, I could do much,— Oth. Prithee, no more: let him come when he will;
 I will deny thee nothing.
Des. Why, this is not a boon 'Tis as I should entreat you wear your gloves, Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you warm,
 Or sue to you to do a peculiar profit To your own person: nay, when I have a suit Wherin I mean to touch your love indeed, 80
 It shall be full of poise and difficult weight And fearful to be granted.
Oth. I will deny thee nothing Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this,
 To leave me but a little to myself.
Des. Shall I deny you? no: farewell, my lord.
Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona: I'll come to thee straight.
Des. Emilia, come. Be as your fancies teach you;
 Whate'er you be, I am obedient.
[Exeunt Desdemona and Emilia.]
Oth. Excellent wretch! Perdition catch my soul,
 But I do love thee! and when I love thee not, Chaos is come again.
Iago. My noble lord,—
Oth. What dost thou say, Iago?
Iago. Did Michael Cassio, when you woo'd my lady, Know of your love?
Oth. He did, from first to last: why dost thou ask?
Iago. But for a satisfaction of my thought; No further harm.
Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago?
Iago. I did not think he had been acquainted with her.
Oth. O, yes; and went between us very oft.
Iago. Indeed! 100
Oth. Indeed! ay, indeed: discern'st thou aught in that?
 Is he not honest?
Iago. Honest, my lord!
Oth. Honest! ay, honest.
Iago. My lord, for aught I know.
Oth. What dost thou think?
Iago. Think, my lord!
Oth. Think, my lord!
 By heaven, he echoes me. As if there were some monster in his thought Too hideous to be shown. Thou dost mean something:
 I heard thee say even now, thou liked'st not that,
 When Cassio left my wife: what didst not like? 100
 And when I told thee he was of my counsel in my whole course of wooing, thou cried'st 'Indeed!'
 And didst contract and purse thy brow together, As if thou then hadst shut up in thy brain Some horrible conceit: if thou dost love me, Show me thy thought.
Iago. My lord, you know I love you.
Oth. I think thou dost;
 And, for I know thou'rt full of love and And weigh'st thy words before thou givest them breath,
 Therefore these stops of thine fright me the more:
 For such things in a false disloyal knave Are tricks of custom, but in a man that's just They are close delations, working from the heart
 That passion cannot rule.
Iago. For Michael Cassio, I dare be sworn I think that he is honest.
Oth. I think so too.
Iago. Men should be what they seem; Or those that be not, would they might seem none!

Oth. Certain, men should be what they seem.

Iago. Why, then, I think Cassio's an honest man.

Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this; 130
I prithee, speak to me as to thy thinkings.

As thou dost ruminate, and give thy worst of thoughts

The worst of words.

Iago. Good my lord, pardon me: Though I am bound to every act of duty,

I am not bound to that all slaves are free to. Utter my thoughts? Why, say they are vile and false;

As where's that palace whereinto foul things Sometimes intrude not? who has a breast so pure,

But some uncleanly apprehensions Keep leets and law-days and in session sit 140

With meditations lawful?

Oth. Thou dost conspire against thy friend, Iago.

If thou but think'st him wrong'd and makest his ear

A stranger to thy thoughts.

Iago. I do beseech you— Though I perchance am vicious in my guess,

As, I confess, it is my nature's plague To spy into abuses, and oft my jealousy

Shapes faults that are not—that your wisdom yet,

From one that so imperfectly conceits, Would take no notice, nor build yourself a trouble 150

Out of his scattering and unsure observance. It were not for your quiet nor your good,

Nor for my manhood, honesty, or wisdom, To let you know my thoughts.

Oth. What dost thou mean? Iago. Good name in man and woman, dear

my lord,

Is the immediate jewel of their souls: Who steals my purse steals trash; 'tis something, nothing;

'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;

But he that filches from me my good name Robs me of that which not enriches him 160

And makes me poor indeed.

Oth. By heaven, I'll know thy thoughts. Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand;

Nor shall not, whilst 'tis in my custody.

Oth. Ha!

Iago. O, beware, my lord, of jealousy; It is the green-eyed monster which doth mock

The meat it feeds on: that cuckold lives in bliss

Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger; But, O, what damned minutes tells he o'er

Who dotes, yet doubts, suspects, yet strongly loves! 170

Oth. O misery!

Iago. Poor and content is rich and rich enough.

But richer than all else is as poor as winter.

Good heaven, the souls of all my tribe defend

From jealousy!

Oth. Why, why is this? Think'st thou I'd make a life of jealousy,

To follow still the changes of the moon With fresh suspicions? No; to be once in doubt

Is once to be resolved: exchange me for a goat. When I shall turn the business of my soul 180

To such exsufficate and blown surmises, Matching thy inference. 'Tis not to make me

jealous

To say my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,

Is free of speech, sings, plays and dances well; Where virtue is, these are more virtuous:

Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw The smallest fear or doubt of her revolt;

For she had eyes, and chose me. No, Iago; I'll see before I doubt; when I doubt, prove;

And on the proof, there is no more but this,— Away at once with love or jealousy!

Iago. I am glad of it; for now I shall have reason

To show the love and duty that I bear you With franker spirit: therefore, as I am bound.

Receive it from me. I speak not yet of proof. Look to your wife; observe her well with Cassio;

Wear your eye thus, not jealous nor secure: I would not have your free and noble nature,

Out of self-bounty, be abused; look to't: 200 I know our country disposition well;

In Venice they do let heaven see the pranks They dare not show their husbands; their best conscience

Is not to leave't undone, but keep't unknown. Oth. Dost thou say so?

Iago. She did deceive her father, marrying you;

And when she seem'd to shake and fear your looks, She loved them most.

Oth. And so she did. Iago. Why, go to then;

She that, so young, could give out such a seeming,

To seal her father's eyes up close as oak— 210 He thought 'twas witchcraft—but I am sure to blame;

I humbly do beseech you of your pardon For too much loving you.

Oth. I am bound to thee for ever. Iago. I see this hath a little dash'd your spirits.

Oth. Not a jot, not a jot. Iago. I faith, I fear it has.

I hope you will consider what is spoke Comes from my love. But I do see you're moved:

I am to pray you not to strain my speech To grosser issues nor to larger reach

Than to suspicion. 220 Oth. I will not.

Iago. Should you do so, my lord, My speech should fall into such vile success

As my thoughts aim not at. Cassio's my worthy friend—

My lord, I see you're moved. Oth. No, not much moved:

I do not think but Desdemona's honest.

Iago. Long live she so! and long live you to think so!

Oth. And yet, how nature erring from itself,—

Iago. Ay, there's the point: as—to be bold with you—

Not to select many proposed matches
Of her own clime, complexion, and degree, 230

Whereto we see in all things nature tends—
Foh! one may smell in such a will most rank,

Foul disproportion, thoughts unnatural.
But pardon me; I do not in position

Distinctly speak of her; though I may fear
Her will, recoiling to her better judgement,

May fall to match you with her country forms
And happily repent.

Oth. Farewell, farewell:
If more thou dost perceive, let me know more;

Set on thy wife to observe: leave me, Iago. 240

Iago. [Going.] My lord, I take my leave.

Oth. Why did I marry? This honest creature doubtless

Sees and knows more, much more, than he unfolds.

Iago. [Returning.] My lord, I would I might entreat your honour

To scan this thing no further; leave it to time:
Though it be fit that Cassio have his place,

For, sure, he fills it up with great ability,
Yet, if you please to hold him off awhile,

You shall by that perceive him and his means:
Note, if your lady strain his entertainment; 250

With any strong or vehement importunity;
Much will be seen in that. In the mean time,

Let me be thought too busy in my fears—
As worthy cause I have to fear I am—

And hold her free, I do beseech your honour.

Oth. Fear not my government.

Iago. I once more take my leave. [Exit.]

Oth. This fellow's of exceeding honesty,
And knows all qualities, with a learned spirit,

Of human dealings. If I do prove her haggard,
Though that her jeases were my dear heart-strings, 261

I'll whistle her off and let her down the wind,
To prey at fortune. Haply, for I am black

And have not those soft parts of conversation
That chamberers have, or for I am declined

Into the vale of years,—yet that's not much—
She's gone. I am abused; and my relief

Must be to loathe her. O curse of marriage,
That we can call these delicate creatures ours,

And not their appetites! I had rather be a toad, 270

And live upon the vapour of a dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love

For others' uses. Yet, 'tis the plague of great ones;

Prerogatives are they less than the base;
'Tis destiny unshunnable, like death:

Even then this forked plague is fated to us
When we do quicken. Desdemona comes:

Re-enter DESDEMONA and EMILIA.

If she be false, O, then heaven mocks itself!
I'll not believe's.

Des. How now, my dear Othello!

Your dinner, and the generous islanders 280
By you invited, do attend your presence.

Oth. I am to blame.

Des. Why do you speak so faintly?
Are you not well?

Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here.

Des. Faith, that's with watching; 'twill away again:

Let me but bind it hard, within this hour
It will be well.

Oth. Your napkin is too little:
[He puts the handkerchief from him; and it drops.]

Let it alone. Come, I'll go in with you.

Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.
[Exeunt Othello and Desdemona.]

Emil. I am glad I have found this napkin:
This was her first remembrance from the Moor:

My wayward husband hath a hundred times
Woo'd me to steal it; but she so loves the token,

For he conjured her she should ever keep it,
That she reserves it evermore about her

To kiss and talk to. I'll have the work t'en
out,

And give't Iago: what he will do with it
Heaven knows, not I;

I nothing but to please his fantasy.

Re-enter IAGO.

Iago. How now! what do you here alone?

Emil. Do not you chide; I have a thing for
you. 301

Iago. A thing for me! it is a common thing—

Emil. Ha!

Iago. To have a foolish wife.

Emil. O, is that all! What will you give me now

For that same handkerchief?

Iago. What handkerchief?

Emil. What handkerchief?

Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona;
That which so often you did bid me steal.

Iago. Hast stol'n it from her?

Emil. No, 'faith; she let it drop by negliggence, 310

nd, to the advantage, I, being here, took't up.

Look, here it is.

Iago. A good wench; give it me.

Emil. What will you do with't, that you have been so earnest

To have me fetch it?

Iago. [Snatching it.] Why, what's that to
you?

Emil. If it be not for some purpose of import,

Give't me again: poor lady, she'll run mad
When she shall lack it.

Iago. Be not acknown on't; I have use for it. [Exit Emilia.]

Go, leave me. I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin,
And let him find it. Trifles light as air
Are to the jealous confirmations strong
As proofs of holy writ: this may do something.
The Moor already changes with my poison:
Dangerous conceits are, in their natures,

Which at the first are scarce found to distaste,
But with a little act upon the blood,
Burn like the mines of sulphur. I did say so:
Look, where he comes!

Re-enter OTHELLO.

Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world,
Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep
Which thou owedst yesterday.

Oth. Ha! ha! false to me!
Iago. Why, how now, general! no more of that.

Oth. Avaunt! be gone! thou hast set me on the rack:

I swear 'tis better to be much abused
Than to know 't a little.

Iago. How now, my lord!

Oth. What sense had I of her stol'n hours of lust?

I saw 't not, thought it not, it harm'd not me:
I slept the next night well, was free and merry;
I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips:

He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stol'n,
Let him not know 't, and he's not robb'd at all.

Iago. I am sorry to hear this.

Oth. I had been happy, if the general camp,
Pioners and all, had tasted her sweet body,
So I had nothing known. O, now, for ever
Farewell the tranquil mind! farewell content!
Farewell the plumed troop, and the big wars,
That make ambition virtue! O, farewell! 350
Farewell the neighing steed, and the shrill trump,

The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fife,
The royal banner, and all quality,
Pride, pomp and circumstance of glorious war!
And, O you mortal engines, whose rude throats
The immortal Jove's dread clamours counterfeit,

Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone!

Iago. Is 't possible, my lord?

Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my love a whore,

Be sure of it; give me the ocular proof; 360
Or, by the worth of man's eternal soul,
Thou hadst been better have been born a dog
Than answer my waked wrath!

Iago. Is 't come to this?

Oth. Make me to see 't; or, at the least, so prove it,

That the probation bear no hinge nor loop
To hang a doubt on; or we upon thy life!

Iago. My noble lord,—

Oth. If thou dost slander her and torture me,
Never pray more; abandon all remorse;
On horror's head horrors accumulate; 370
Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth amazed;

For nothing canst thou to damnation add
Greater than that.

Iago. O grace! O heaven forgive me!
Are you a man! have you a soul or sense?
God be wi' you; take mine office. O wretched fool,

That livest to make things honesty a vice!
O monstrous world! Take note, take note, O world,

To be direct and honest is not safe.
I thank you for this profit; and from hence
I'll love no friend, with love breeds such offence.

Oth. Nay, stay; thou shouldst be honest.

Iago. I should be wise, for honesty's a fool
And loses that it works for.

Oth. By the world,
I think my wife be honest and think she is not;
I think that thou art just and think thou art not.

I'll have some proof. Her name, that was as fresh

As Dian's visage, is now begrimed and black
As mine own face. If there be swords, or knives,
Poison, or fire, or suffocating steams,

I'll not endure it. Would I were satisfied! 390
Iago. I see, sir, you are eaten up with passion:
I do repent me that I put it to you.

You would be satisfied!

Oth. Would I nay, I will.
Iago. And may: but, how! how satisfied, my lord?

Would you, the supervisor, grossly gape on—Behold her topp'd!

Oth. Death and damnation! O!

Iago. It were a tedious difficulty, I think,
To bring them to that prospect: damn them then,

If ever mortal eyes do see them bolster
More than their own! What then? how then!
What shall I say? Where's satisfaction! 400
It is impossible you should see this,
Were they as prime as goats, as hot as monkeys,
As salt as wolves in pride, and fools as gross
As ignorance made drunk. But yet, I say,
If imputation and strong circumstances,
Which lead directly to the door of truth,
Will give you satisfaction, you may have 't.

Oth. Give me a living reason she's disloyal.

Iago. I do not like the office: 410
But, with I am enter'd in this cause so far,

Prick'd to 't by foolish honesty and love,
I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately;

And, being troubled with a raging tooth,
I could not sleep.

There are a kind of men so loose of soul,
That in their sleeps will mutter their affairs:
One of this kind is Cassio:

In sleep I heard him say 'Sweet Desdemona,
Let us be wary, let us hide our loves'; 420

And then, sir, would he gripe and wring my hand,

Cry 'O sweet creature!' and then kiss me hard,

As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots
That grew upon my lips: then laid his leg

Over my thigh, and sigh'd, and kiss'd; and then Cried 'Curst fate that gave thee to the Moor!'

Oth. O monstrous! monstrous!

Iago. Nay, this was but his dream.
Oth. But this denoted a foregone conclusion:

'Tis a shrewd doubt, though it be but a dream.

Iago. And this may help to thicken other proofs 430

That do demonstrate thinly.
Oth. I'll tear her all to pieces.

Iago. Nay, but be wise: yet we see nothing done;

She may be honest yet. Tell me but this,
Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief
Spotted with strawberries in your wife's hand?

Oth. I gave her such a one; 'twas my first gift.

Iago. I know not that: but such a handkerchief—

I am sure it was your wife's—did I to-day
See Cassio wipe his beard with.

Oth. If it be that, or any that was hers, 440

It speaks against her with the other proofs.

Oth. O, that the slave had forty thousand lives!

One is too poor, too weak for my revenge.
Now do I see 'tis true. Look here, Iago;

All my fond love thus do I blow to heaven.
'Tis gone.

Arise, black vengeance, from thy hollow cell!
Yield up, O love, thy crown and hearted throne
To tyrannous hate! Swell, bosom, with thy fraught,

For 'tis of aspics' tongues!

Iago. Yet be content. 450

Oth. O, blood, blood, blood!

Iago. Patience, I say; your mind perhaps may change.

Oth. Never, Iago. Like to the Pontic sea,
Whose icy current and compulsive course
Ne'er feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on
To the Propontic and the Hellespont,
Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace,
Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble love,
Till that a capable and wide revenge Swallow them up. Now, by yond marble
heaven, 460

[Kneels] In the due reverence of a sacred vow
I here engage my words.

Iago. Do not rise yet.

[Kneels] Witness, you ever-burning lights above,

You elements that clip us round about,
Witness that here Iago doth give up
The execution of his wit, hands, heart,
To wrong'd Othello's service! Let him command,

And to obey shall be in me remorse.

What bloody business ever. [They rise.]

Oth. I greet thy love,

Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance
bounteous, 470

And will upon the instant put thee to 't:

Within these three days let me hear thee say
That Cassio's not alive.

Iago. My friend is dead; 'tis done at your request;

But let her live.

Oth. Damn her, lewd minx! O, damn her!

Come, go with me apart; I will withdraw.
To furnish me with some swift means of death
For the fair devil. Now art thou my lieutenant.

Iago. I am your own for ever. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Before the castle.

Enter DESEMONA, EMILIA, and Clown.

Des. Do you know, sirrah, where Lieutenant Cassio lies?

Oth. I dare not say he lies any where.

Des. Why, man?

Oth. He's a soldier, and for one to say a soldier lies, is stabbing.

Des. Go to: where lodges he?

Oth. To tell you where he lodges, is to tell you where I lie.

Des. Can any thing be made of this?

Oth. I know not where he lodges, and for me to devise a lodging and say he lies here or he lies there, were to lie in mine own throat.

Des. Can you inquire him out, and be edified by report?

Oth. I will catechize the world for him; that is, make questions, and by them answer.

Des. Seek him, bid him come hither: tell him I have moved my lord on his behalf, and hope all will be well.

Oth. To do this is within the compass of man's wit; and therefore I will attempt the doing it. [Exit.]

Des. Where should I lose that handkerchief,
Emilia?

Emil. I know not, madam.

Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse

Full of cruadoes: and, but my noble Moor is true of mind and made of no such baseness
As jealous creatures are, it were enough
To put him to ill thinking.

Emil. Is he not jealous?

Des. Who, he? I think the sun where he was born 30

Drew all such humours from him.

Emil. Look, where he comes.

Des. I will not leave him now till Cassio
Be call'd to him.

Enter OTHELLO.

How is't with you, my lord?

Oth. Well, my good lady. [Aside] O, hardness to dissemble!—

How do you, Desdemona?

Des. Well, my good lord.

Oth. Give me your hand: this hand is moist,
my lady.

Des. It yet hath felt no age nor known no
sorrow.

Oth. This argues fruitfulness and liberal
heart:

Hot, hot, and moist: this hand of yours requires
A sequester from liberty, fasting and prayer, 30

Much castigation, exercise devout;
For here's a young and sweating devil here,
That commonly rebels. 'Tis a good hand,
A frank one.

Des. You may, indeed, say so;

For 'twas that hand that gave away my heart.

Oth. A liberal hand: the hearts of old gave hands;

But our new heraldry is hands, not hearts.

Des. I cannot speak of this. Come now, your promise.

Oth. What promise, check?

Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak with you.

Oth. I have a salt and sorry business to do
with me;

Lead me thy handkerchief.

Des. Here, my lord.

Oth. That which I gave you.

Des. I have it not about me.

Oth. Not?

Des. No, indeed, my lord.

Oth. That is a fault.

That handkerchief

Did an Egyptian to my mother give;

She was a charmer, and could almost read

The thoughts of people: she told her, while she kept it,

'Twould make her amiable and subdue my father

Entirely to her love, but if she lost it

Or made a gift of it, my father's eye

Should hold her loathed and his spirits should hunt

After new fancies: she, dying, gave it me;

And bid me, when my fate would have me wive,

To give it her: I did so: and take heed on't;

Make it a darling like your precious eye;

To lose't or give't away were such perdition

As nothing else could match.

Des. Is't possible?

Oth. 'Tis true: there's magic in the web of it:

A sibyl, that had number'd in the world

The sun to course two hundred compasses,

In her prophetic fury sew'd the work;

The worms were hallow'd that did breed the silk;

And it was dyed in mummy which the skilful

Conserved of maidens' hearts.

Des. Indeed! is't true?

Oth. Most veritable; therefore look to't well.

Des. Then would to God that I had never seen't!

Oth. Ha! wherefore?

Des. Why do you speak so startlingly and rash!

Oth. Is't lost? is't gone? speak, is it out o' the way?

Des. Heaven bless us!

Oth. Say you?

Des. It is not lost; but what an if it were?

Oth. How!

Des. I say, it is not lost.

Oth. Fetch't, let me see't.

Des. Why, so I can, sir, but I will not now.

This is a trick to put me from my suit:

Pray you, let Cassio be received again.

Oth. Fetch me the handkerchief: my mind misgives.

Des. Come, come;

You'll never meet a more sufficient man.

Oth. The handkerchief!

Des. I pray, talk me of Cassio.

Oth. The handkerchief!

Des. A man that all his time

Hath founded his good fortunes on your love,

Shared dangers with you,—

Oth. The handkerchief!

Des. In sooth, you are to blame.

Oth. A way!

Des. Is not this man jealous?

Oth. A mermaid's son.

Is there a spite wonder in this handkerchief:

I am most unhappy in the loss of it.

Emil. 'Tis not a year or two shows us a man:

They eat us but stomachs, and we all but food;

They eat us hungry, and when they are full,

They belch us. Look you, Cassio and my husband!

Enter CASSIO and IAGO.

There is no other way; 'tis she must

And, lo, the happiness! go, and importune her.

Des. How now, good Cassio! what's the news with you?

Cas. Madam, my former suit: I do beseech

you

That by your virtuous means I may again

Exist, and be a member of his love

Whom I with all the office of my heart

Entirely honour: I would not be delay'd.

If my offence be of such mortal kind

That nor my service past, nor present sorrows,

Nor purposed merit in futurity,

Can ransom me into his love again,

But to know so must be my benefit;

So shall I clothe me in a forced content,

And shut myself up in some other course,

To fortune's aims.

Des. Alas, thrice-gentle Cassio!

My advocacy is not now in tune;

My lord is not my lord; nor should I know him,

Were he in favour as in honour alter'd.

So help me every spirit sanctified,

As I have spoken for you all my best

And stood within the blank of his displeasure

For my free speech! you must awhile be patient:

What I can do I will; and more I will

Than for myself I dare: let that suffice you.

Iago. Is my lord angry?

Emil. He went hence but now,

And certainly in strange unquietness.

Iago. Can he be angry? I have seen the cannon,

When it hath blown his ranks into the air,

And, like the devil, from his very arm

Puff'd his own brother:—and can he be angry?

Something of moment then: I will go meet him:

There's matter in't indeed, if he be angry.

Des. I prithee, do so.

[Exit Iago.]

Something, sure, of state,

Either from Venice, or some unwatch'd practice

Made demonstrable here in Cyprus to him,

Hath puddled his clear spirit; and in such cases

Men's natures wrangle with inferior things,

Though great ones are their object. 'Tis even

so;

For let our finger ache, and it induceth

Our other healthful members even to that sense

Of pain: nay, we must think men are not gods,

Nor of them look for such observances

As fit the bridal. Beshrew me much, Emilia,

I was, unhandsome warrior as I am,

Arraigning his unkindness with my soul;

But now I find I had suborn'd the witness,

And he's indicted falsely.

Emil. Pray heaven it be state-matters, as you think,

And no conception nor no jealous toy.

Observing you.

Des. Alas the day! I never gave him cause.

Emil. But jealous souls will not be answered so;

They are not ever jealous for the cause,
But jealous for they are jealous: 'tis a monster
Begot upon itself, born on itself.

Des. Heaven keep that monster from Othello's mind!

Emil. Lady, amen.

Des. I will go seek him. Cassio, walk here about:

If I do find him fit, I'll move your suit
And seek to effect it to my uttermost.

Cas. I humbly thank your ladyship.

[Exeunt Desdemona and Emilia.]

Enter BIANCA.

Bian. Save you, friend Cassio!

Cas. What make you from home?
How is it with you, my most fair Bianca? 170
I faith, sweet love, I was coming to your house.

Bian. And I was going to your lodging,
Cassio.

What, keep a week away! seven days and nights!

Eight score eight hours! and lovers' absent
hours.

More tedious than the dial eight score times!
O weary reckoning!

Cas. Pardon me, Bianca:

I have this while with leaden thoughts been press'd:

But I shall, in a more continuant time,
Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Bianca,

[Giving her Desdemona's handkerchief.]

Take me this work out.

Bian. (O Cassio, whence came this! 180

This is some token from a newer friend:

To the felt absence now I feel a cause:

Is't come to this! Well, well.

Cas. Go to, woman!

Throw your vile guesses in the devil's teeth,
From whence you have them. You are jealous

now

That this is from some mistress, some remembrance:

No, in good troth, Bianca.

Bian. Why, whose is it!

Cas. I know not, sweet: I found it in my chamber.

I like the work well: ere it be demanded—

As like enough it will—I'd have it copied: 190
Take it, and do't; and leave me for this time.

Bian. Leave you! wherefore!

Cas. I do attend here on the general;

And think it no addition, nor my wish,

To have him see the woman'd.

Bian. Why, I pray you!

Cas. Not that I love you not.

Bian. But that you do not love me.

I pray you, bring me on the way a little,

And say if I shall see you soon at night.

Cas. 'Tis but a little way that I can bring
you.

For I cannot leave; but I'll see you soon.

Bian. The very good; I must be circumstanced.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I. Cyprus. Before the castle.

Enter OTHELLO and IAGO.

Iago. Will you think so?

Oth. Think so, Iago!

Iago. What?

To kiss in private?

Oth. An unauthorized kiss.

Iago. Or to be naked with her friend in bed

An hour or more, not meaning any harm?

Oth. Naked in bed, Iago, and not mean harm!

It is hypocrisy against the devil:

They that mean virtuously, and yet do so;

The devil their virtue tempts, and they tempt

heaven.

Iago. So they do nothing, 'tis a vetted slip:

But if I give my wife a handkerchief,— 10

Oth. What then?

Iago. Why, then, 'tis hers, my lord; and,

being hers,

She may, I think, bestow't on any man.

Oth. She is protectress of her honour too:

May she give that?

Iago. Her honour is an essence that's not seen;

They have it very oft that have it not:

But, for the handkerchief,—

Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it.

Thou said'st—O, it comes o'er my memory, 20

As doth the raven over the infected place,

Boding to all—he had my handkerchief.

Iago. Ay, what of that?

Oth. That's not so good now.

Iago. What?

If I had said I had seen him do you wrong!

Or heard him say,—as knaves be such abroad,

Who having, by their own importunate suit,

Or voluntary dotage of some mistress,

Convinced or supplied them, cannot choose

But they must blab—

Oth. Hath he said any thing?

Iago. He hath, my lord; but he you well assured,

No more than he'll unsware.

Oth. What hath he said?

Iago. Faith, that he did—I know not what he did.

Oth. What! what?

Iago. Lie—

Oth. With her!

Iago. With her, on her; what you will.

Oth. Lie with her! lie on her! We say lie on her, when they belie her. Lie with her,

that's falsehood.—Handkerchief—confessions—handkerchief!—To confess, and to deny, his labour!—From to be hanged, and confess!—A tremble at it. Nature invest herself in such shadow out some instruction. It is strange to me thus. Pish! Nones!

Is't possible?—Confess!—

Iago. Work on,

My medicine, work! Thus credulous fools are caught;
And many worthy and chaste dames even thus,
All guiltless, meet reproach. What, ho! my lord!
My lord, I say! Othello!

Enter CASSIO.

How now, Cassio!

Cas. What's the matter? 50

Iago. My lord is fall'n into an epilepsy:
This is his second fit; he had one yesterday.

Cas. Rub him about the temples.
Iago. No, forbear;

The lethargy must have his quiet course:
If not, he foams at mouth and by and by Breaks out to savage madness. Look, he stirs:
Do you withdraw yourself a little while,
He will recover straight: when he is gone,
I would on great occasion speak with you.

[Exit Cassio.]

How is it, general? have you not hurt your head? 60

Oth. Dost thou mock me?

Iago. I mock you! no, by heaven.
Would you would bear your fortune like a man!

Oth. A horned man's a monster and a beast.

Iago. There's many a beast then in a populous city,
And many a civil monster.

Oth. Did he confess it?

Iago. Good sir, be a man;
Think every bearded fellow that's but yoked
May draw with you: there's millions now alive
That nightly lie in those unproper beds
Which they dare swear peculiar: your case is better. 70

O. 'Tis the spite of hell, the fiend's arch-mock,
To lip a wanton in a secure couch,
And to suppose her chaste! No, let me know;
And knowing what I am, I know what she
shall be.

Oth. O, thou art wise; 'tis certain.

Iago. Stand you awhile apart;
Confine yourself but in a patient list.
Whilst you were here o'erwhelmed with your grief—

A passion most unsuited such a man—
Cassio came hither: I shifted him away,
And laid good 'scuse upon your ecstasy, 80
Bade him anon return and here speak with me;
The which he promised. Do but encave yourself.

And mark the fleers, the gibes, and notable scorns.

That dwell in every region of his face;
For I will make him tell the tale anew,
Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when
He hath, and is again to cope your wife:

I say, but mark his gesture. Marry, patience;
Or I shall say you are all in all in spleen,
And nothing of a man.

Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago? 90
I shall be found most cunning in my patience;
Iago, dost thou hear!—most bloody.

That's not smiles;

But yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw?
[Othello retires.]

Now will I question Cassio of Bianca,
A housewife that by selling her desires
Buys herself bread and clothes: it is a creature
That dotes on Cassio; as 'tis the strumpet's plague

To beguile many and be beguiled by one:
He, when he hears of her, cannot refrain
From the excess of laughter. Here he comes:

Re-enter CASSIO.

As he shall smile, Othello shall go mad; 100
And his unbookish jealousy must construe

Poor Cassio's smiles, gestures and light behaviour,
Quite in the wrong. How do you now, lieutenant?

Cas. The worse that you give me the addition

Whose want even kills me.

Iago. Ply Desdemona well, and you are sure on't.

[Speaking lower] Now, if this suit lay in Bianca's power

How quickly should you speed!

Cas. Alas, poor caitiff!

Oth. Look, how he laughs already! 110

Iago. I never knew woman love man so.

Cas. Alas, poor rogue! I think, I faith, she loves me.

Oth. Now he denies it faintly, and laughs it
out.

Iago. Do you hear, Cassio?

Oth. Now he importunes him

To tell it o'er: go to; well said, well said.

Iago. She gives it out that you shall marry
her:

Do you intend it?

Cas. Ha, ha, ha! 120

Oth. Do you triumph, Roman? do you triumph?

Cas. I marry her! what? a customer! Pri-thee, bear some charity to my wit; do not think it so unwholesome. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. So, so, so: they laugh that win.

Iago. 'Faith, the cry goes that you shall marry her.

Cas. Prithee, say true.

Iago. I am a very villain else.

Oth. Have you scored me? Well. 130

Cas. This is the monkey's own giving out:
she is persuaded I will marry her, out of her own love and flattery, not out of my promise.

Oth. Iago beckons me; now he begins the story.

Cas. She was here even now; she haunts me in every place. I was the other day talking on the sea-bank with certain Venetians; and thither comes the bauble, and, by this hand, she falls me thus about my neck— 140

Oth. Crying 'O dear Cassio!' as it were:
his gesture imports it.

Cas. So hangs, and lolls, and weeps upon me; so halves, and pulls me: ha, ha, ha!

Oth. Now he tells how she plucked him to my chamber. O, I see that nose of yours, but not that dog I shall throw it to.

Cas. Well, I must leave her company.

Jago. Before me! look, where she comes.

Cas. 'Tis such another fitchew! marry, a perfumed one. 152

Enter BIANCA.

What do you mean by this haunting of me?

Bian. Let the devil and his dam haunt you! What did you mean by that same handkerchief you gave me even now? I was a fine fool to take it. I must take out the work!—A likely piece of work, that you should find it in your chamber, and not know who left it there! This is some minx's token, and I must take out the work! There; give it your hobby-horse: whosoever you had it, I'll take out no work on't. 161

Cas. How now, my sweet Bianca! how now! how now!

Oth. By heaven, that should be my handkerchief!

Bian. An you'll come to supper to-night, you may; an you will not, come when you are next prepared for. [Exit.]

Jago. After her, after her.

Cas. Faith, I must; she'll rail in the street else. 171

Jago. Will you sup there?

Cas. Faith, I intend so.

Jago. Well, I may chance to see you; for I would very fain speak with you.

Cas. Prithce, come; will you?

Jago. Go to; say no more. [Exit Cassio.]
Oth. [Advancing.] How shall I murder him, Iago?

Jago. Did you perceive how he laughed at his vice? 181

Oth. O Iago!

Jago. And did you see the handkerchief?

Oth. Was that mine?

Jago. Yours, by this hand: and to see how he prizes the foolish woman your wife! she gave it him, and he hath given it his whore.

Oth. I would have him nine years a-killing. A fine woman! a fair woman! a sweet woman!

Jago. Nay, you must forget that. 190

Oth. Ay, let her rot, and perish, and be damned to-night; for she shall not live: no, my heart is turned to stone; I strike it, and it hurts my hand. O, the world hath not a sweeter creature: she might lie by an emperor's side and command him tasks.

Jago. Nay, that's not your way.

Oth. Hang her! I do but say what she is: so delicate with her needle: an admirable musician: O! she will sing the savageness out of a bear: of so high and plenteous wit and invention—

Jago. She's the worse for all this.

Oth. O, a thousand thousand times: and then, of so gentle a condition!

Jago. Ay, too gentle.

Oth. Nay, that's certain: but yet the pity of it, Iago! O Iago, the pity of it, Iago!

Jago. If you are so fond over her iniquity, give her patent to offend; for, if it touch not you, it comes near nobody.

Oth. I will chop her into messes: smother me!

Jago. O, 'tis foul in her.

Oth. With mine officer!

Jago. That's fouler.

Oth. Get me some poison, Iago: this night: I'll not expostulate with her, lest her body and beauty unprovide my mind again: this night, Iago. 219

Jago. Do it not with poison, strangle her in her bed, even the bed she hath contaminated.

Oth. Good, good: the justice of it pleases: very good.

Jago. And for Cassio, let me be his undertaker: you shall hear more by midnight.

Oth. Excellent good. [A trumpet within.]

What trumpet is that same?

Jago. Something from Venice, sure. 'Tis Lodovico.
Come from the duke: and, see, your wife is with him.

Enter LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, and Attendants.

Lod. Save you, worthy general!

Oth. With all my heart, sir.

Lod. The duke and senators of Venice greet you. [Gives him a letter.]

Oth. I kiss the instrument of their pleasures. [Opens the letter, and reads.]

Des. And what's the news, good cousin Lodovico?

Jago. I am very glad to see you, signior;

Welcome to Cyprus.

Lod. I thank you. How does Lieutenant Cassio?

Jago. Lives, sir.

Des. Cousin, there's fall'n between him and my lord.
An unkind breach: but you shall make all well.

Oth. Are you sure of that?

Des. My lord!

Oth. [Reads.] 'This fall you not to do, as you will—' 240

Lod. He did not call; he's busy in the paper.

Is there division 'twixt my lord and Cassio?

Des. A most unhappy one: I would do much to atone them, for the love I bear to Cassio.

tears,
Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile.

Out of my sight!

Des. I will not stay to offend you. [Going.]

Oth. Truly, an obedient lady:

I do beseech your lordship, call her back. 260

Oth. Mistress!

Des. My lord!

Oth. What would you with her, sir?

Des. Who, I, my lord?

Oth. Ay; you did wish that I would make her turn:

Sir, she can turn, and turn, and yet go on,

And turn again; and she can weep, sir, weep;

And she's obedient, as you say, obedient,

Very obedient. Proceed you in your tears.

Concerning this, sir,—O well-painted passion!—

I am commanded home. (let you away;

I'll send for you anon. Sir, I obey the mandate, 270

And will return to Venice. Hence, avaunt!

[Exit Desdemona.]

Cassio shall have my place. And, sir, to-night,

I do entreat that we may sup together:

You are welcome, sir, to Cyprus.—Goats and monkeys! [Exit.]

Des. Is this the noble Moor whom our full senate

Call all in all sufficient? Is this the nature

Whom passion could not shake? whose solid

virtue

The shot of accident, nor dart of chance,

Could neither graze nor pierce!

Iago. He is much changed.

Des. Are his wits safe? is he not light of

brain? 280

Iago. He's that he is: I may not breathe say censure

What he might be; if what he might be is not,

I would to heaven he were!

Des. What, strike his wife!

Iago. 'Faith, that was not so well; yet would I knew

That stroke would prove the worst!

Des. Is it his use?

Or did the letters work upon his blood,

And new-create this fault?

Iago. Alas, alas!

It is not honesty in me to speak

What I have seen and known. You shall observe him,

And his own courses will denote him so 290

That I may save my speech: do but go after,

And speak how he continues.

Des. I am sorry that I am deceived in him.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. A room in the castle.

Enter OTHELLO and EMILIA.

Oth. You have seen nothing then?

Emil. Nor ever heard, nor ever did suspect.

Oth. Yes, you have seen Cassio and she together.

Emil. But then I saw no harm, and then

I heard

Each syllable that breath made up between them.

Oth. What, did they never whisper?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. Nor send you out o' the way?

Emil. Never.

Oth. To fetch her fan, her gloves, her mask, nor nothing?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. That's strange.

Emil. I durst, my lord, to wager she is honest,

Lay down my soul at stake: if you think other,

Remove your thought; it doth abuse your bosom.

If any wretch have put this in your head,

Let heaven requite it with the serpent's curse!

For, if she be not honest, chaste, and true,

There's no man happy; the purest of their wives

Is foul as slander.

Oth. Bid her come hither: go.

[Exit Emilia.]

She says enough; yet she's a simple bawd 30

That cannot say as much. This is a subtle whore.

A closet lock and key of villanous secrets:

And yet she'll kneel and pray; I have seen her do't.

Enter DESDEMONA with EMILIA.

Des. My lord, what is your will?

Oth. Pray, chuck, come hither.

Des. What is your pleasure?

Oth. Let me see your eyes;

Look in my face.

Des. What horrible fancy's this?

Oth. [To Emilia] Some of your function,

mistress;

Leave procreants alone and shut the door;

Cough, or cry 'hem,' if any body come:

Your mystery, your mystery: nay, dispatch. 30

[Exit Emilia.]

Des. Upon my knees, what doth your speech import?

I understand a fury in your words,

But not the words.

Oth. Why, what art thou?

Des. Your wife, my lord; your true

And loyal wife.

Oth. Come, swear it, damn thyself;

Best, being like one of heaven, the devils themselves

Should fear to seize thee: therefore be double

damnd;

Swear thou art honest.

Des. Heaven doth truly know it.

Oth. Heaven truly knows that thou art false as hell.

Des. To whom, my lord? with whom? how am I false?

Oth. O Desdemona! away! away! away! 30

Des. Alas, the heavy day! Why do you weep?

Am I the motive of these tears, my lord?

If haply you my father do suspect

An instrument of this your calling back,

Lay not your blame on me: if you have lost
him,

Why, I have lost him too.

Oth. Had it pleased heaven
To try me with affliction; had they rain'd
All kinds of sores and shames on my bare head,
Steep'd me in poverty to the very lips,
Given to captivity me and my unborn hopes,
I should have found in some place of my soul
A drop of patience: but, alas, to make me
A fixed figure for the time of scorn
To point his slow unmoving finger at!
Yet could I bear that too; well, very well:

But there, where I have garner'd up my heart,
Where either I must live, or bear no life;
The fountain from the which my current runs,
Or else dries up; to be discarded thence!
Or keep it as a cistern for foul toads
To knot and gender in! Turn thy complexion
there,

Patience, thou young and rose-lipp'd cherubin,—
Ay, there, look grim as hell!

Des. I hope my noble lord esteems me honest.

Oth. O, ay; as summer flies are in the shambles,

That quicken even with blowing. O thou weed,
Who art so lovely fair and smell'st so sweet
That the sense aches at thee, would thou hadst ne'er been born!

Des. Alas, what ignorant sin have I committed!

Oth. Was this fair paper, this most goodly book,
Made to write 'whore' upon! What committed!

Committed! O thou public commoner!
I should make very forges of my cheeks,
That would to cinders burn up modesty,
Did I but speak thy deeds. What committed!
Heaven stops the nose at it and the moon
winks,

The bawdy wind that kisses all it meets
Is hush'd within the hollow mine of earth,
And will not hear it. What committed! 80
Impudent strumpet!

Des. By heaven, you do me wrong.
Oth. Are not you a strumpet!

Des. No, as I am a Christian:
If to preserve this vessel for my lord
From any other foul unlawful touch
Be not to be a strumpet, I am none.

Oth. What, not a whore!

Des. No, as I shall be saved.

Oth. Is't possible!

Des. O, heaven forgive us!

Oth. I cry you mercy, then:
I took you for that cunning whore of Venice
That married with Othello. [Raising his voice]
You, mistress,

That have the office opposite to Saint Peter,
And keep the gate of hell!

Re-enter EMILIA.

You, you, ay, you!
We have done our course; there's money for your pains:

I pray you, turn the key and keep our counsel.
[Exit.]

Emil. Alas, what does this gentleman conceive!

How do you, madam! how do you, my good

Des. Faith, half asleep.

Emil. Good madam, what's the matter with my lord!

Des. With who!

Emil. Why, with my lord, madam. 100

Des. Who is thy lord!

Emil. He that is yours, sweet lady.

Des. I have none: do not talk to me,
Emilia;

I cannot weep; nor answer have I none.
But what should go by water. Prithee, to-night
Lay on my bed my wedding sheets: remember;
And call thy husband hither.

Emil. Here's a change indeed! [Exit.]

Des. 'Tis meet I should be used so, very meet.

How have I been behav'd, that he might stick
The small'st opinion on my least misuse!

Re-enter EMILIA with IAGO.

Iago. What is your pleasure, madam! How is't with you! 110

Des. I cannot tell. Those that do teach young babes

Do it with gentle means and easy tasks;
He might have chid me so; for, in good faith,
I am a child to chiding.

Iago. What's the matter, lady!

Emil. Alas, Iago, my lord hath so bewhor'd
her,
Thrown such despite and heavy terms upon her,
As true hearts cannot bear.

Des. Am I that name, Iago!

Iago. What name, fair lady!

Des. Such as she says my lord did say I was.

Emil. He call'd her whore: a beggar in his drink

Could not have laid such terms upon his call'd.
Iago. Why did he so!

Des. I do not know; I am sure I am none such.

Iago. Do not weep, do not weep. Alas the day!

Emil. Hath she foresook so many noble matches,

Her father and her country and her friends,
To be call'd whore! would it not make one
weep!

Des. It is my wretched fortune.

Iago. Beware him for't!
How comes this trick upon him!

Des. Nay, heaven doth know.

Emil. I will be hang'd, if some clerk
villain,

Some busy and insinuating rogue,
Some cogging, cozening slave, to get some office,

Have not devis'd this slander; I'll be hang'd else.

Iago. Fie, there is no such man; it is impossible.

Des. If any such there be, heaven pardon
him!

Emil. A halter pardon him! and hell gnaw his bones!
 Why should he call her whore! who keeps her company!

What place! what time! what form! what likelihood!

The Moor's abused by some most villainous knave.

Some base notorious knave, some scurvy fellow.
 O heaven, that such companions thou 'dst unfold.

And put in every honest hand a whip
 To lash the rascals naked through the world
 Even from the east to the west!

Iago. Speak within door.
Emil. O, fie upon them! Some such squire he was

That turn'd your wit the seamy side without.
 And made you to suspect me with the Moor.

Iago. You are a fool; go to.
Des. O good Iago,

What shall I do to win my lord again?
 Good friend, go to him; for, by this light of heaven,

I know not how I lost him. Here I kneel:
 If e'er my will did trespass 'gainst his love,
 Either in discourse of thought or actual deed,

And ever will—though he do shake me off
 To beggary divorcement—love him dearly,
 Comfort forswear me! Unkindness may do much;

And his unkindness may defeat my life,
 But never taint my love. I cannot say 'whore':
 It doth abhor me now I speak the word;
 To do the act that might the addition earn
 Not the world's mass of vanity could make me.

Iago. I pray you, be content; 'tis but his humour:

The business of the state does him offence,
 And he does chide with you.

Des. If 'twere no other,—
Iago. 'Tis but so, I warrant.

[Trumpets within.]
 Hark, how these instruments summon to supper!

The messengers of Venice stay the meat: 170
 Go in, and weep not; all things shall be well.
 [Exeunt Desdemona and Emilia.]

Enter RODRIGO.

How now, Rodrigo!
Rod. I do not find that thou dealest justly with me.

Iago. What in the contrary?
Rod. Every day thou dost me with some device, Iago; and rather, as it seems to me now, suspect from me all conveniency than suspect me with the least advantage of hope. I will indeed no longer endure it, nor am I yet asked to put up in peace what already I have patiently suffered.

Will you hear me, Rodrigo?
Iago. Faith, I have heard too much, for your words and performances are no kin to—Iago. You charge me most unjustly.

Rod. With nought but truth. I have wasted myself out of my means. The jewels you have had from me to deliver to Desdemona would half have corrupted a votarist: you have told me she hath received them and returned me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquaintance; but I find none.

Iago. Well; go to; very well.

Rod. Very well! go to! I cannot go to, man; nor 'tis not very well; nay, I think it is scurvy, and begin to find myself fopp'd in it.

Iago. Very well.

Rod. I tell you 'tis not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona: if she will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit and repent my unlawful solicitation; if not, assure yourself I will seek satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have said now.

Rod. Ay, and said nothing but what I protest intendment of doing.

Iago. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee, and even from this instant do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Rodrigo: thou hast taken against me a most just exception; but yet, I protest, I have dealt most directly in thy affair.

Rod. It hath not appeared.

Iago. I grant indeed it hath not appeared, and your suspicion is not without wit and judgement. But, Rodrigo, if thou hast that in thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever, I mean purpose, courage and valour, this night show it: if thou the next night following enjoy not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery and device engines for my life.

Rod. Well, what is it? is it within reason and compass?

Iago. Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice to depute Cassio in Othello's place.

Rod. Is that true? why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.

Iago. O, no; he goes into Mauritania and takes away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be lingered here by some accident: wherein none can be so determinate as the removing of Cassio.

Rod. How do you mean, removing of him?
Iago. Why, by making him incapable of Othello's place; knocking out his brains.

Rod. And that you would have me to do!

Iago. Ay, if you dare do yourself a profit and a right. He sups to-night with a harlotry, and thither will I go to him: he knows not yet of his honourable fortune. If you will watch his going thence, which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one, you may take him at your pleasure: I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amazed at it, but go along with me; I will show you such a necessity in his death that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste: about it.

Rod. I will hear further reason for this.

Iago. And you shall be satisfied. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Another room in the castle.

Enter OTHELLO, LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, EMILIA, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself no further.

Oth. O, pardon me; 'twill dome good to walk.

Lod. Madam, good night; I humbly thank your ladyship.

Des. Your honour is most welcome.

Oth. Will you walk, sir?

O.—Desdemona.—

Des. My lord?

Oth. Get you to bed on the instant; I will be returned forthwith: dismiss your attendant there: look it be done.

Des. I will, my lord.

[Exit Desdemona, Lodovico, and Attendants.]
Emil. How goes it now? he looks gentler than he did.

Des. He says he will return incontinent:

He hath commanded me to go to bed,

And bade me to dismiss you.

Emil. Dismiss me!

Des. It was his bidding; therefore, good

Emilia,

Give me my nightly wearing, and adieu:

We must not now displease him.

Emil. I would you had never seen him!

Des. So would not I: my love doth so approve him,

That even his stubbornness, his checks, his frowns,—

Prithee, unpun me,—have grace and favour in them.

Emil. I have laid those sheets you bade me on the bed.

Des. All's one. Good faith, how foolish are our minds!

If I do die before thee, prithee, shroud me in one of those same sheets.

Emil. Come, come, you talk.

Des. My mother had a maid call'd Barbara: She was in love, and he she loved proved mad And did forsake her: she had a song of 'willow':

An old thing 'twas, but it express'd her fortune,

And she died singing it: that song to-night

Will not go from my mind; I have much to do,

But to go hang my head all at one side,

And sing it like poor Barbara. Prithee, dispatch.

Emil. Shall I go fetch your night-gown?

Des. No, unpun me here.

This Lodovico is a proper man.

Emil. A very handsome man.

Des. He speaks well.

Emil. I know a lady in Venice would have walk'd barefoot to Palestine for a touch of his nether lip.

Des. [Singing] The poor soul sat sighing by a sycamore tree,

Sing all a green willow;

Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee,

Sing willow, willow, willow:

The fresh streams ran by her, and murmured her moans;

Sing willow, willow, willow;

Sing willow, willow, willow;

Sing willow, willow, willow;

Sing willow, willow, willow;

Sing willow, willow, willow;

Sing willow, willow, willow;

Sing willow, willow, willow;

Sing willow, willow, willow;

Sing willow, willow, willow;

Sing willow, willow, willow;

Sing willow, willow, willow;

Sing willow, willow, willow;

Sing willow, willow, willow;

Sing willow, willow, willow;

Her salt tears fell from her, and soften'd the stones:—

Lay by these:—

[Singing] Sing willow, willow, willow;

Prithee, hie thee: he'll come anon:—

[Singing] Sing all a green willow must be my garland.

Let nobody blame him; his scorn I approve.—

Nay, that's not next.—Hark! who is't that knocks?

Emil. It's the wind.

Des. [Singing] I call'd my love false love; but what said he then?

Sing willow, willow, willow:

If I court me women, you'll couch with me men.—

So, get thee gone; good night. Mine eyes do itch;

Doth that bode weeping?

Emil. 'Tis neither here nor there.

Des. I have heard it said so. O, these men, these men!

Dost thou in conscience think,—tell me,

Emilia,—

That there be women do abuse their husbands in such gross kind?

Emil. There be some such, no question.

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil. Why, would not you?

Des. No, by this heavenly light!

Emil. Nor I neither by this heavenly light; I might do't as well i' the dark.

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil. The world's a huge thing: it is a great price

For a small vice.

Des. In troth, I think thou wouldst not.

Emil. In troth, I think I should; and undo't when I had done. Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joint-ring, nor for measures of lawn, nor for gowns, petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibition; but, for the whole world,— why, who would not make her husband a cuckold to make him a monarch? I should venture purgatory for't.

Des. Beahrew me, if I would do such a wrong

For the whole world.

Emil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong i' the world; and having the world for your labour,

'tis a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right.

Des. I do not think there is any such woman.

Emil. Yes, a dozen; and so many to the vantag as would store the world they purged it.

But I do think it is their husbands' fault. If wives do fall: say that they slack their duties,

And pour our treasures into foreign laps, Or else break out in peevish jealousies,

Throwing restraint upon us; or say they strike us,

Or scant our former having in despite;

Why, we have galls, and though we have some grace,

Yet have we some revenge. Let husbands know

Their wives have senses like them : they see and smell

And have their palates both for sweet and sour,
As husbands have. What is it that they do
When they change us for others? Is it sport?
I think it is : and doth affection breed it?
I think it doth : is't frailty that thus errs?
It is so too : and have not we affections,
Desires for sport and frailty, as men have?
Then let them use us well : else let them know,
The ill we do, their ill instruct us so.

Des. Good night, good night : heaven me such uses send,
Not to pick bad from bad, but by bad mend!
[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I. Cyprus. A street.

Enter IAGO and RODRIGO.

Iago. Here, stand behind this bulk ; straight will he come :
Wear thy good rapier bare, and put it home :
Quick, quick ; fear nothing ; I'll be at thy elbow :

It makes us, or it mars us ; think on that,
And fix most firm thy resolution.

Rod. Be near at hand ; I may miscarry in't.
Iago. Here, at thy hand : be bold, and take thy stand. [Retires.]

Rod. I have no great devotion to the deed ;
And yet he hath given me satisfying reasons :
'Tis but a man gone. Forth, my sword : he
dies. 10

Iago. I have rubb'd this young quat almost to the sense,
And he grows angry. Now, whether he kill
Cassio,

Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other,
Every way makes my gain : live Rodrigo,
He calls me to a restitution large
Of gold and jewels that I bobb'd from him,
As gifts to Desdemona ;
It must not be : if Cassio do remain,
He hath a daily beauty in his life
That makes me ugly ; and, besides, the Moor
May unfold me to him ; there stand I in much peril : 27

No, he must die. But so : I hear him coming.

Enter CASSIO.

Rod. I know his gait, 'tis he.—Villain, thou dost! [Makes a pass at Cassio.]

Cas. That thrust had been mine enemy indeed,
But that my coat is better than thou know'st :
I will make proof of thine.

[Draws, and wounds Rodrigo.]
Rod. O, I am slain!

[Iago from behind wounds Cassio in the leg, and exits.]

Cas. I am maim'd for ever. Help, ho!
murder! murder! [Falls.]

Enter OTHELLO.

Oth. The voice of Cassio ; Iago keeps his O, villain that I am!

Oth. It is even so.

Cas. O, help, ho! light! a surgeon!
Oth. 'Tis he :—O brave Iago, honest and just,
That hast such noble sense of thy friend's wrong!

Thou teachest me. Minion, your dear lie
dead,

And your unblest fate hies : strumpet, I come Forth of my heart those charms, thine eyes, are blotted ;

Thy bed, lust-stain'd, shall with lust's blood be spotted. [Exit]

Enter LODOVICO and GRATIANO.

Cas. What, ho! no watch! no passage murder! murder!

Gra. 'Tis some mischance ; the cry is very dreadful.

Cas. O, help!

Lod. Hark!

Rod. O wretched villain!

Lod. Two or three groan : it is a heavy
night :

These may be counterfeits : let's think 't unsafe
To come in to the cry without more help.

Rod. Nobody come! then shall I bleed to death.

Lod. Hark!

Re-enter IAGO, with a light.

Gra. Here's one comes in his shirt, with light and weapons.

Iago. Who's there! whose noise is this that cries on murder!

Lod. We do not know.

Iago. Did not you hear a cry

Cas. Here, here! for heaven's sake, help me

Iago. What's the matter?

Gra. This is Othello's ancient, as I take it.

Lod. The same indeed ; a very valiant fellow

Iago. What are you here that cry so grievously!

Cas. Iago! O, I am spoil'd, undone by villains!

Give me some help.

Iago. O me, lieutenant! what villains have done this!

Cas. I think that one of them is hereabout
And cannot make away.

Iago. O treacherous villains
What are you there? come in, and give some help. [To Lodovico and Gratiano]

Rod. O, help me here!

Cas. That's one of them.

Iago. O murderous slave! O villain
[Stabs Rodrigo]

Rod. O damn'd Iago! O inhuman dog!

Iago. Kill men in the dark!—Where be these bloody thieves!

How silent is this town!—Ho! murder! murder!

What may you be? are you of good or evil?

Lod. As you shall prove us, praise us.

Iago. Signior Lodovico!

Lod. He, sir.

Iago. I cry you mercy. Here's Cassio hurt
by villains.

Gra. Cassio!

Iago. How is't, brother!

Cas. My leg is cut in two.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!
Light, gentlemen! I'll bind it with my shirt.

Enter BIANCA.

Bian. What is the matter, ho! who is't that cried!

Iago. Who is't that cried!

Bian. O my dear Cassio! my sweet Cassio!
O Cassio, Cassio, Cassio!

Iago. O notable strumpet! Cassio, may you suspect
Who they should be that have thus mangled your!

Cas. No.

Gra. I am sorry to find you thus: I have been to seek you.

Iago. Lend me a garter. So. O, for a chair,
To bear him easily hence!

Bian. Alas, he faints! O Cassio, Cassio,
Cassio!

Iago. Gentlemen all, I do suspect this trash
To be a party in this injury.

Patience awhile, good Cassio. Come, come;
Lend me a light. Know we this face or no?

Alas, my friend and my dear countryman
Roderigo! no;—yes, sure!—O heaven! Roderigo.

Gra. What, of Venice?

Iago. Even he, sir: did you know him?

Gra. Know him! ay.

Iago. Signior Gratiano! I cry you gentle
pardon;

These bloody accidents must excuse my manners,

That so neglected you.

Gra. I am glad to see you.

Iago. How do you, Cassio! O, a chair, a chair!

Gra. Roderigo!

Iago. He, he, 'tis he. [A chair brought in.]

O, that's well said; the chair.

Some good man bear him carefully from hence
I'll fetch the general's surgeon. [To Bianca]

For you, mistress,

Save you your labour. He that lies slain here,

Was my dear friend: what malice was between
you?

Cas. None in the world; nor do I know the man.

Iago. [To Bianca.] What, look you pale! O, bear him out o' the air.

[Cassio and Roderigo are borne off.]
Stay you, good gentlemen. Look you pale,
mistress!

Do you perceive the greatness of her eye?
Nay, if you stare, we shall hear more anon.

Behold her well; I pray you, look upon her:
Do you see, gentlemen! nay, guiltiness will
speak.

Though tongues were out of use.

Enter EMILIA.

Emil. 'Tis she, what's the matter! what's the matter, husband!

Iago. Cassio hath here been set on in the dark

By Roderigo and fellows that are scaped:

He's almost slain, and Roderigo dead.

Emil. Alas, good gentleman! alas, good Cassio!

Iago. This is the fruit of whoring. Prishas,
Emilia,

Go know of Cassio where he sup'd to-night.

[To Bianca.] What, do you shake at that?

Bian. He sup'd at my house; but I therefore shake not.

Iago. O, did he so! I charge you, go with
me.

Emil. Fie, fie upon thee, strumpet!

Bian. I am no strumpet; but of life as honest

As you that thus abuse me.

Emil. As I foh! fie upon thee!

Iago. Kind gentlemen, let's go see poor
Cassio dress'd.

Come, mistress, you must tell's another tale.

Emilia, run you to the citadel,
And tell my lord and lady what hath happ'd.

Will you go on? I pray. [Aside.] This is the
night

That either makes me or fordoes me quite.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. A bedchamber in the castle: DES-DEMONA in bed asleep; a light burning.

Enter OTHELLO.

Oth. It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul,—

Let me not name it to you, you chaste stars!—
It is the cause. Yet I'll not shed her blood;

Nor scar that whiter skin of hers than snow,
And smooth as monumental alabaster.

Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men.
Put out the light, and then put out the lights!

If I quench thee, thou flaming minister,
I can again thy former light restore.

Should I repent me: but once put out thy light,
Thou cunning'st pattern of excelling nature,

I know not where is that Promethean heat
That can thy light relume. When I have pluck'd the rose,

I cannot give it vital growth again,

It must needs wither: I'll smell it on the tree.

[Looking for.]
Ah, balmy breath, that dost almost persuade Justice to break her sword! One more, one

more.

Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kiss
thee,

And love thee after. One more, and this the last:

So sweet was ne'er so fatal. I must weep.

But they are cruel tears: this sorrow's heavenly;
It strikes where it doth love. She wakes.

Des. Who's there? Othello!

Oth. Ay, Desdemona.

Des. Will you come to bed, my lord?

Oth. Have you pray'd to-night, Desdemona?

Des. Ay, my lord.

Oth. If you bethink yourself of any sin,
Unprovidential as yet to heaven and grace,
Solicit for it straight.

Des. Alas, my lord, what do you mean by that?

Oth. Well, do it, and be brief; I will walk by: 30

I would not kill thy unprepared spirit; No; heaven forbid! I would not kill thy soul.

Des. Talk you of killing!

Oth. Ay, I do.

Des. Then heaven

Have mercy on me!

Oth. Amen, with all my heart!

Des. If you say so, I hope you will not kill me.

Oth. Hum!

Des. And yet I fear you; for you are fatal

then

When your eyes roll so: why I should fear

I know not,

Since guiltiness I know not; but yet I feel

I fear.

Oth. Think on thy sins.

Des. They are loves I bear to you. 40

Oth. Ay, and for that thou diest.

Des. That death's unnatural that kills for loving.

Alas, why gnaw you so your nether lip?

Some bloody passion shakes your very frame:

These are portents; but yet I hope, I hope,

They do not point on me.

Oth. Peace, and be still!

Des. I will so. What's the matter?

Oth. That handkerchief which I so loved and gave thee

Thou gavest to Cassio.

Des. No, by my life and soul!

Send for the man, and ask him.

Oth. Sweet soul, take heed, 50

Take heed of perjury: thou art on thy death-bed.

Des. Ay, but not yet to die.

Oth. Yes, presently:

Therefore confess thee freely of thy sin;

For to deny each article with oath

Cannot remove nor choke the strong conception

That I do groan withal. Thou art to die.

Des. Then Lord have mercy on me!

Oth. I say, amen.

Des. And have you mercy too! I never did

Offend you in my life; never loved Cassio

But with such general warranty of heaven 60

As I might love; I never gave him token.

Oth. By heaven, I saw my handkerchief in's

hand.

O perjured woman! thou dost stone my heart,

And makest me call what I intend to do

A murder, which I thought a sacrifice:

I saw the handkerchief.

Des. He found it then;

I never gave it him: send for him hither;

Let him confess a truth.

Oth. He hath confess'd.

Des. What, my lord!

Oth. That he hath used thee.

Des. How! unlawfully?

Oth. Ay. 70

Des. He will not say so.

Oth. No, his mouth is stopp'd;

His tongue hath taken order for't.

Des. O! my fear interprets: what, is he

dead!

Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great revenge

Had stomach for them all.

Des. Alas! he is betray'd and I undone.

Oth. Out, strumpet! weep'st thou for him to my face!

Des. O, banish me, my lord, but kill me not!

Oth. Down, strumpet!

Des. Kill me to-morrow: let me live to-

night! 80

Oth. Nay, if you strive,—

Des. But half an hour!

Oth. Being done, there is no pause.

Des. But while I say one prayer!

Oth. It is too late.

Emil. [Within] My lord, my lord! what,

ho! my lord, my lord!

Oth. What noise is this! Not dead! not yet quite dead?

I that am cruel am yet merciful;

I would not have thee linger in thy pain:

So, so.

Emil. [Within] What, ho! my lord, my lord!

Oth. Who's there?

Emil. [Within] O, good my lord, I would speak a word with you! 90

Oth. Yes: 'tis Emilia. By and by. She's

dead.

'Tis like she comes to speak of Cassio's death.—

The noise was here. Ha! no more moving!

Still as the grave. Shall she come in? were't good!—

I think she stirs again:—no. What's best to do!

If she come in, she'll sure speak to my wife:

My wife! my wife! what wife! I have no wife.

O, insupportable! O heavy hour!

Methinks it should be now a huge eclipse

Of sun and moon, and that the affrighted globe

Should yawn at alteration.

Emil. [Within] I do beseech you 100

That I may speak with you, O, good my lord!

Oth. I had forgot thee: O, come in, Emilia:

Soft; by and by. Let me the curtains draw.

Where art thou? [Unlocks the door.

Enter EMILIA.

What's the matter with thee now!

Emil. O, my good lord, yonder's foul murders done!

Oth. What, now?

Emil. But now, my lord.

Oth. It is the very error of the moon;

She comes more nearer earth than she was wont.

And makes men mad. 110

Emil. Cassio, my lord, hath kill'd a young

Venetian

Call'd Roderigo.

Oth. Roderigo kill'd!

And Cassio kill'd!

Emil. No, Cassio is not kill'd.

Oth. Not Cassio kill'd! then murder's out of tune.

And sweet revenge grows harsh.

Des. O, falsely, falsely murder'd!

Emil. Alas, what cry is that!

Oth. That! what!

Emil. Out, and alas! that was my lady's voice.

Help! help, ho! help! O lady, speak again! Sweet Desdemona! O sweet mistress, speak!

Des. A guiltless death I die.

Emil. O, who hath done this deed!

Des. Nobody; I myself. Farewell!

Commend me to my kind lord: O, farewell!

[Dies.]
Oth. Why, how should she be murder'd!

Emil. Alas, who knows!

Oth. You heard her say herself, it was not I.
Emil. She said so: I must needs report the truth.

Oth. She's, like a liar, gone to burning hell:
'Twas I that kill'd her.

Emil. O, the more angel she, 130
And you the blacker devil!

Oth. She turn'd to folly, and she was a whore.

Emil. Thou dost belie her, and thou art a devil.

Oth. She was false as water.

Emil. Thou art rash as fire, to say
That she was false: O, she was heavenly true!

Oth. Cassio did top her; ask thy husband else.

O, I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell,
But that I did proceed upon just grounds
To this extremity. Thy husband knew it all.

Emil. My husband! 140

Oth. Thy husband.

Emil. That she was false to wedlock!

Oth. Ay, with Cassio. Nay, had she been true,

If heaven would make me such another world
Of one entire and perfect chrysolite,
I'd not have sold her for it.

Emil. My husband!

Oth. Ay, 'twas he that told me first:
An honest man he is, and hates the slime
That sticks on filthy deeds.

Emil. My husband!

Oth. What needs this iteration, woman! I say thy husband. 150

Emil. O mistress, villany hath made mocks with love!

My husband say that she was false!

Oth. He, woman:
I say thy husband: dost understand the word?
My friend, thy husband, honest, honest Iago.

Emil. If he say so, may his pernicious soul
Rot half a grain a day! he lies to the heart:
She was too fond of her most filthy bargain.

Oth. Ha!

Emil. Do thy worst:
This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven 160
Than thou wast worthy her.

Oth. Peace, you were best.

Emil. Thou hast not half that power to do me harm

As I have to be hurt. O gull! O dolt!
As ignorant as dirt! thou hast done a deed—
I care not for thy sword; I'll make thee known,
Though I lost twenty lives.—Help! help, ho!

help!
The Moor hath kill'd my mistress! Murder!

murder!

*Enter MONTANO, GRATIANO, IAGO,
and others.*

Mon. What is the matter! How now,
general!

Emil. O, are you come, Iago! you have done well,

That men must lay their murders on your neck.

Gra. What is the matter! 171

Emil. Disprove this villain, if thou be'st a
man:

He says thou told'st him that his wife was false:
I know thou didst not, thou'rt not such a
villain:

Speak, for my heart is full.

Iago. I told him what I thought, and told
no more

Than what he found himself was apt and true.

Emil. But did you ever tell him she was false!

Iago. I did.

Emil. You told a lie; an odious, damned lie; 180

Upon my soul, a lie, a wicked lie.

She false with Cassio!—did you say with Cassio!

Iago. With Cassio, mistress. Go to, charm your tongue.

Emil. I will not charm my tongue; I am bound to speak:

My mistress here lies murder'd in her bed,—

All. O heavens forfend!

Emil. And your reports have set the murder
on.

Oth. Nay, stare not, masters: it is true, indeed.

Gra. 'Tis a strange truth.

Mon. O monstrous act!

Emil. Villany, villany, villany! 190
I think upon't. I think: I smell't: O villany!

I thought so then:—I'll kill myself for grief:—
O villany, villany!

Iago. What, are you mad! I charge you, get you home.

Emil. Good gentlemen, let me have leave to speak:

'Tis proper I obey him, but not now.

Perchance, Iago, I will ne'er go home.

Oth. O! O! O! [He falls on the bed.]

Emil. Nay, lay thee down and rest:
For thou hast kill'd the sweetest innocent

That e'er did lift up eyes.

Oth. [Rising.] O, she was foul! 200
I scarce did know you, uncle: there lies your niece,

Whose breath, indeed, those hands have newly stopp'd:

I know this act shows horrible and grim.

Gra. Poor Desdemona! I am glad thy father's
dead:

Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief
Shore his old thread in twain: did he live now,

This sight would make him do a desperate turn.

Yes, curse his better angel from his side,
And fall to reprobation.

Oth. 'Tis pitiful; but yet Iago knows
That she with Cassio hath the act of shame

A thousand times committed; Cassio confess'd it;

And she did gratify his amorous works
With that recognisance and pledge of love
Which I first gave her; I saw it in his hand:
It was a handkerchief, an antique token
My father gave my mother.

Emil. O heaven! O heavenly powers!

Iago. Come, hold your peace.

Emil. 'Twill out, 'twill out; I peace!
No, I will speak as liberal as the north:

Let heaven and men and devils, let them all,
All, all, cry shame against me, yet I'll speak.

Iago. Be wise, and get you home.

Emil.

I will not.

[Iago offers to stab Emilia.
Emil. Fie!

Gra.

Your sword upon a woman!

Emil. O thou dull Moor! that handkerchief thou speak'st of

I found by fortune and did give my husband;
For often, with a solemn earnestness,
More than indeed belong'd to such a trifle,
He begg'd of me to steal it.

Iago. Villanous whore!

Emil. She give it Cassio! no, alas! I found it

And I did give 't my husband.

Iago. Filth, thou liest!

Emil. By heaven, I do not, I do not, gentlemen.

O murderous coxcomb! what should such a fool
Do with so good a woman!

Oth. Are there no stones in heaven

But what serve for the thunder?—Precious
villain!

[He runs at Iago: Iago, from behind, stabs Emilia, and exit.

Gra. The woman falls; sure, he hath kill'd his wife.

Emil. Ay, ay: O, lay me by my mistress'
side.

Gra. He's gone, but his wife's kill'd.

Mon. 'Tis a notorious villain. Take you this weapon,

Which I have here recover'd from the Moor:
Come, guard the door without; let him not pass.

But kill him rather. I'll after that same
villain.

For 'tis a damned slave.

[Exeunt Montano and Gratiano.

Oth. I am not valiant neither,
But every puny whipster gets my sword;

But why should honour outlive honesty?
Let it go all.

Emil. What did thy song bode, lady?
Hark, 'twill thee hear me! I will play the swan,
And die in music. [Singing] Willow, willow, willow.

Moor, she was chaste; she loved thee, cruel
Moor!

So come my soul to bliss, as I speak true;
So comes it as I think, I die, I die.

[Exit.

Oth. Give me another weapon in this chamber;
I will use 't. O God, the ice-breaker's temper!—
O, heaven!

Oth. I cannot come forth.

Gra. [Within] If thou attempt it, it will cost thee dear:

Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.

Oth. Look in upon me then and speak with
me,

Or, naked as I am, I will assault thee.

Re-enter GRATIANO.

Gra. What is the matter?

Oth. Behold, I have a weapon;
A better never did itself sustain

Upon a soldier's thigh: I have seen the day,
That, with this little arm and this good sword,

I have made my way through more impediments

Than twenty times your stop: but, O vain
boast!

Who can control his fate! 'tis not so now.
Be not afraid, though you do see me weapon'd;

Here is my journey's end, here is my butt,
And very sea-mark of my utmost sail.

Do you go back dismay'd? 'tis a lost fear;
Man but a rush against Othello's breast;

And he retires. Where should Othello go?
Now, how dost thou look now? O ill-star'd wench!

Pale as thy smock! when we shall meet at compt,

This look of thine will hurl my soul from
heaven,

And fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my girl!

Even like thy chastity. O cursed slave!
Whip me, ye devils,

From the possession of this heavenly sight!
Blow me about in winds! roast me in sulphur!

Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire! O Desdemona! Desdemona! dead!

Oh! Oh! Oh!

Enter LODOVICO, MONTANO, CASSIO, carried in a chair, and Officers with IAGO, prisoner.

Lod. Where is this rash and most unfortunate man?

Oth. That's he that was Othello: here I am.

Lod. Where is that viper? bring the villain
forth.

Oth. I look down towards his feet; but that's a fable.

If that thou be'st a devil, I cannot kill thee.

[Wounds Iago.

Lod. Wrench his sword from him.

Iago. I bleed, sir; but not kill'd.

Oth. I am not sorry neither: I 'ld have thee
live;

For, in my sense, 'tis happiness to die.

Lod. O thou Othello, that wast once so
good,

Fall'n in the practice of a damned slave,
What shall be said to thee?

Oth. Why, any thing:
An honourable murderer, if you will;

For nought I did in hate, but all in honour.

Lod. This wretch hath justly confess'd his villany:

Did you and he consent in Cassio's death?

Oth. Ay.

Cas. Dear general, I never gave you cause.

Oth. I do believe it, and I ask you pardon.
Will you, I pray, demand that demi-devil 301
Why he hath thus ensnared my soul and body!
Iago. Demand me nothing: what you know,
you know:

From this time forth I never will speak word.

Lod. What, not to pray!

Gra. Torments will ope your lips.

Oth. Well, thou dost best.

Lod. Sir, you shall understand what hath befall'n.

Which, as I think, you know not. Here is a letter

Found in the pocket of the slain Roderigo;
And here another: the one of them imports 310
The death of Cassio to be undertook
By Roderigo.

Oth. O villain!

Cas. Most heathenish and most gross!

Lod. Now here's another discontented paper,
Found in his pocket too; and this, it seems,
Roderigo meant to have sent this damned
villain:

But that belike Iago in the interim
Came in and satisfied him.

Oth. O the pernicious catiff!
How came you, Cassio, by that handkerchief
That was my wife's?

Cas. I found it in my chamber: 320
And he himself confess'd but even now
That there he dropp'd it for a special purpose
Which wrought to his desire.

Oth. O fool! fool! fool!

Cas. There is besides in Roderigo's letter,
How he upbraids Iago, that he made him
Brave me upon the watch; whereon it came
That I was cast: and even but now he spake,
After long seeming dead, Iago hurt him,
Iago set him on.

Lod. You must forsake this room, and go
with us: 330

Your power and your command is taken off,
And Cassio rules in Cyprus. For this slave,
If there be any cunning cruelty
That can torment him much and hold him long,
It shall be his. You shall close prisoner rest,

Till that the nature of your fault be known
To the Venetian state. Come, bring him away.

Oth. Soft you; a word or two before you go.
I have done the state some service, and they know't. 339

No more of that. I pray you, in your letters,
When you shall these unlucky deeds relate,
Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate,
Nor set down aught in malice: then must you
speak

Of one that loved not wisely but too well;
Of one not easily jealous, but being wrought
Perplex'd in the extreme; of one whose hand,
Like the base Indian, threw a pearl away Richer than all his tribe; of one whose subdued
eyes,

Albeit unused to the melting mood,
Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees
Their medicinal gum. Set you down this; 350

And say besides, that in Aleppo once,
Where a malignant and a turban'd Turk
Beat a Venetian and traduced the state,
I took by the throat the circumcised dog,
And smote him, thus. [Stabs himself.]

Lod. O bloody period!

Gra. All that's spoke is marr'd.

Oth. I kiss'd thee ere I kill'd thee: no way but this;

Killing myself, to die upon a kiss.

[Falls on the bed, and dies.]
Cas. This did I fear, but thought he had no
weapon; 360

For he was great of heart.

Lod. [To Iago] O Spartan dog,
More fell than anguish, hunger, or the sea!
Look on the tragic loading of this bed;
This is thy work: the object poisons sight;
Let it be hid. Gratiano, keep the house,
And seize upon the fortunes of the Moor,
For they succeed on you. To you, lord governor,
Remains the censure of this hellish villain;
The time, the place, the torture: O, enforce
it!

Myself will straight aboard; and to the state
This heavy act with heavy heart relate. 375

[Exeunt.]

SCENE: In several parts of the Roman empire.

ACT I.

SCENE I. Alexandria. A room in Cleopatra's palace.

Enter DEMETRIUS and PHILLO.

Phi. Nay, but this dotage of our general's O'erflows the measure: those his goodly eyes,
That o'er the files and musters of the war
Have glow'd like plated Mars, now bend, now turn,

The office and devotion of their view
Upon a tawny front: his captain's heart,
Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst
The buckles on his breast, reneges all temper,
And is become the bellows and the fan
To cool a gipsy's lust.

Flourish. Enter ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, her Ladies, the Train, with Eunuchs fanning her.

Look, where they come: so
Take but good note, and you shall see in him
The triple pillar of the world transform'd
Into a strumpet's fool: behold and see.

Cleo. If it be love indeed, tell me how much.
Ant. There's beggary in the love that can be reckon'd.

Cleo. I'll set a bourn how far to be beloved.

Ant. Then must thou needs find out new heaven, new earth.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. News, my good lord, from Rome.

Ant. Grates me: the sum.

Cleo. Nay, hear them, Antony:
Fulvia perchance is angry; or, who knows so
If the scarce-bearded Cæsar have not sent
His powerful mandate to you, 'Do this, or this;
Take in that kingdom, and enfranchise that;
Perform't, or else we damn thee.'

Ant. How, my love!

Cleo. Perchance! nay, and most like:
You must not stay here longer, your diemission
Is come from Cæsar; therefore hear it, Antony.
Where's Fulvia's process? Cæsar's I would say!
both!

Call in the messengers. As I am Egypt's queen,
Thou bluest, Antony; and that blood of thine

Is Cæsar's homager: else so thy cheek pays shame

When shrill-tongued Fulvia scolds. The messengers!

Ant. Let Rome in Tiber melt, and the wide arch

Of the ranged empire fall! Here is my space.
Kingdoms are clay: our dungy earth alike
Feeds beast as man: the nobleness of life
Is to do thus; when such a mutual pair

And such a twain can do't, in which I bind, Embracing.

On pain of punishment, the world to weep
We stand up peerless.

Cleo. Excellent falsehood! 40
Why did he marry Fulvia, and not love her?
I'll seem the fool I am not; Antony
Will be himself.

Ant. But stir'd by Cleopatra.
Now, for the love of Love and her soft hours,
Let's not confound the time with conference harsh:

There's not a minute of our lives should stretch Without some pleasure now. What sport tonight!

Cleo. Hear the ambassadors.

Ant. Fie, wrangling queen!
Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh,
To weep; whose every passion fully strives 50
To make itself, in thee, fair and admired!
No messenger, but thine; and all alone
To-night we'll wander through the streets and note

The qualities of people. Come, my queen;
Last night you did desire it: speak not to us.

[Exeunt Ant. and Cleo. with their train.]

Dem. Is Caesar with Antonius prized so slight!

Phil. Sir, sometimes, when he is not Antony,
He comes too short of that great property
Which still should go with Antony.

Dem. I am full sorry
That he approves the common liar, who 60
Thus speaks of him at Rome; but I will hope
Of better deeds to-morrow. Rest you happy!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. The same. Another room.

Enter CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and a Soothsayer.

Char. Lord Alexas, sweet Alexas, most any thing Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where's the soothsayer that you praised so to the queen? O, that I knew this husband, which, you say, must charge his horns with garlands!

Alex. Soothsayer!

Sooth. Your will?

Char. Is this the man? Is't you, sir, that know things?

Sooth. In nature's infinite book of secrecy
A little I can read.

Alex. Show him your hand.

Enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. Bring in the banquet quickly; wine enough
Cleopatra's health to drink.

Char. Good sir, give me good fortune.

Sooth. I make not, but foresee.

Char. Pray, then, foresee me one.

Sooth. You shall be yet far fairer than you are.

Char. He means in flesh.

Ir. No, you shall paint when you are old.

Char. Wrinkles forbid!

Alex. Vex not his prescience; be attentive.

Char. Hush!

Sooth. You shall be more beloved than beloved.

Char. I had rather heat my liver with drinking.

Alex. Nay, hear him.

Char. Good now, some excellent fortune!
Let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all: let me have a child at fifty, to whom Herod of Jewry may do homage; find me to marry me with Octavius Caesar, and companion me with my mistress. 30

Sooth. You shall outlive the lady whom you serve.

Char. O excellent! I love long life better than figs.

Sooth. You have seen and proved a false former fortune
Than that which is to approach.

Char. Then belike my children shall have no names: prithee, how many boys and wenches must I have?

Sooth. If every of your wishes had a womb,
And fertile every wish, a million. 30

Char. Out, fool! I forgive thee for a witch.
Alex. You think none but your sheets are pry to your wishes.

Char. Nay, come, tell Iras here.

Alex. We'll know all our fortunes.

Eno. Mine, and most of our fortunes, tonight, shall be—drunk to bed.

Ir. There's a palm presages chastity, if nothing else.

Char. 'E'en as the o'erflowing Nile presageth famine. 30

Ir. Go, you wild bedfellow, you cannot soothsay.

Char. Nay, if an oily palm be not a fruitful prognostication, I cannot scratch mine ear.
Prithee, tell her but a worky-day fortune.

Sooth. Your fortunes are alike.

Ir. But how, but how! give me particulars.

Sooth. I have said.

Ir. Am I not an inch of fortune better than she? 60

Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better than I, where would you choose it?

Ir. Not in my husband's nose.

Char. Our worse thoughts heavens mend!
Alexas,—come, his fortune, his fortune! O, let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis,
I beseech thee! and let her die too, and give him a worse! and let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fifty-fold a cuckold! Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight; good Isis, I beseech thee!

Ir. Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people! for, as it is a heart-breaking to see a handsome man loose-wived, so it is a deadly sorrow to behold a foul knave uncuckolded; therefore, dear Isis, keep chaste, and fortune him accordingly!

Char. Amen. 70

Alex. Lo, now, if it lay in their hands to make me a cuckold, they would make themselves wretched, but they'll do't!

Eno. Hush! here comes Antony.

Char.

Not he; the queen.

Enter CLEOPATRA.

Cleo. Saw you my lord?

Eno. No, lady.

Cleo. Was he not here?

Char. No, madam.

Cleo. He was disposed to mirth; but on the sudden
A Roman thought hath struck him. Enobarbus!

Eno. Madam!

Cleo. Seek him, and bring him hither.

Where's Alexas?

Alex. Here, at your service. My lord approaches.

Cleo. We will not look upon him: go with us. [Exit]

Enter ANTONY with a Messenger and Attendants.

Mess. Fulvia thy wife first came into the field.

Ant. Against my brother Lucius?

Mess. Ay:

But soon that war had end, and the time's state
Made friends of them, joining their force 'gainst

Whose better issue in the war, from Italy,
Upon the first encounter, drave them.

Ant. Well, what worst?

Mess. The nature of bad news infects the teller.

Ant. When it concerns the fool or coward.

On:
Things that are past are done with me. 'Tis thus:

Who tells me true, though in his tale lie death,
I hear him as he flatter'd.

Mess. Labienus—

This is stiff news—hath, with his Parthian force,
Extended Asia from Euphrates;
His conquering banner shook from Syria
To Lydia and to Ionia;

Whilst—

Ant. Antony, thou wouldst say,—

Mess. O, my lord!

Ant. Speak to me home, mince not the general tongue:

Name Cleopatra as she is call'd in Rome; 'tis Half thou in Fulvia's phrase; and taunt my faults

With such full license as both truth and malice
Have power to utter. O, then we bring forth words,

When our quick minds lie still; and our lips
Sold us

Is as our earing. Fare thee well awhile.

Mess. At your noble pleasure. [Exit]

Ant. From Sicily, ho, the news! Speak there!

First Att. The man from Sicily,—is there such an one?

Sec. Att. He stays upon your will.

Ant. Let him appear.

These strong Egyptian fetters I must break; 'tis
Or lose myself in dotage.

Enter another Messenger.

What are you?

Sec. Mess. Fulvia thy wife is dead.

Ant. Where died she?

Sec. Mess. In Sicily:

Her length of sickness, with what else more serious
Importeth thee to know, this bears.

Ant. [Gives a letter.]
Forbear me.

[Exit Sec. Messenger.]
There's a great spirit gone! Thus did I desire it:

What our contempt doth often hurl from us,
We wish it ours again; the present pleasure,
By revolution lowering, does become
The opposite of itself: she's good, being gone;
The hand could pluck her back that shov'd her on.

I must from this enchanting queen break off:
Ten thousand harms, more than the ill I know,

My idleness doth hatch. How now! Enobarbus!

Re-enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. What's your pleasure, sir?

Ant. I must with haste from hence.

Eno. Why, then, we kill all our women: we see how mortal an unkindness is to them; if they suffer our departure, death's the word.

Ant. I must be gone. 140

Eno. Under a compelling occasion, let women die: it were pity to cast them away for nothing; though, between them and a great cause, they should be esteem'd nothing. Cleopatra, catching but the least noise of this, dies instantly; I have seen her die twenty times upon far poorer moment: I do think there is mettle in death, which commits some loving act upon her; she hath such a celerity in dying.

Ant. She is cunning past man's thought. 150

Eno. Alack, sir, no; her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure love: we cannot call her winds and waters sighs and tears; they are greater storms and tempests than almanacs can report: this cannot be cunning in her; if it be, she makes a shower of rain as well as Jove.

Ant. Would I had never seen her!

Eno. O, sir, you had then left unseen a wonderful piece of work; which not to have been blest withal would have discredit'd your travel.

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Sir!

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Fulvia!

Ant. Dead.

Eno. Why, sir, give the gods a thankful sacrifice. When it pleaseth their deities to take the wife of a man from him, it shows to man the tailors of the earth; comforting therein, that when old robes are worn out, there are members to make new. If there were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the case to be lamented; this grief is crown'd with consolation; your old smock brings forth a new petition: and indeed the tears live in an onion that should water this sorrow.

Ant. The business she hath broached in the state
Cannot endure my absence. 170

Ene. And the business you have broached here cannot be without you; especially that of which wholly depends on your

Ant. No more light answers. Let our officers

Have notice what we purpose. I shall break The cause of our expedience to the queen, And get her leave to part. For not alone The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches, Do strongly speak to us; but the letters too of many our contriving friends in Rome Petition us at home: Sextus Pompeius 190 Hath given the dare to Caesar, and commands The empire of the sea: our slippery people, Whose love is never link'd to the deserer Till his deserts are past, begin to throw Pompey the Great and all his dignities Upon his son; who, high in name and power, Higher than both in blood and life, stands up For the main soldier: whose quality, going on, The sides o' the world may danger: much is breeding, 199

Which, like the courser's hair, hath yet but life, And not a serpent's poison. Say, our pleasure, To such whose place is under us, requires Our quick remove from hence.

Ene. I shall do't.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. The same. Another room.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Where is he?

Char. I did not see him since.

Cleo. See where he is, who's with him, what he does:

I did not send you: if you find him sad, Say I am dancing; if in mirth, report That I am sudden sick: quick, and return.

[Exit Alexas.]

Char. Madam, methinks, if you did love him dearly,
You do not hold the method to enforce The like from him.

Cleo. What should I do, I do not?

Char. In each thing give him way, cross him in nothing.

Cleo. Thou teachest like a fool; the way to lose him.

Char. Tempt him not so too far; I wish, forbear:

In time we hate that which we often fear:
But here comes Antony.

Enter ANTONY.

Cleo. I am sick and sullen.

Ant. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose.

Cleo. Help me away, dear Charmian; I shall fall:
It cannot be thus long, the sides of nature

Will not sustain it.

Ant. Now, my dearest queen,

Cleo. Pray you, stand farther from me.

Ant. What's the matter?

Cleo. I know, by that same eye, there's some good news.

What says the married woman? You may go: Would she had never given you leave to come! Let her not say 'tis I that keep you here: I have no power upon you; here you are.

Ant. The gods best know,—

Cleo. O, never was there queen So mightily betray'd! yet at the first I saw the treasons planted.

Ant. Cleopatra,—

Cleo. Why should I think you can be mine and true,

Though you in swearing shake the throned gods,

Who have been false to Fulvia? Rhetoric's madness,

To be entangled with those mouth-made vows, Which break themselves in swearing!

Ant. Most sweet queen,—

Cleo. Nay, pray you, seek no colour for your going,

But bid farewell, and go: when you stand staying,

Then was the time for words: no going then; Eternity was in our lips and eyes,

Bliss in our brows' bent; none our parts so poor,

But was a race of heaven: they are so still, Or thou, the greatest soldier of the world, Art turn'd the greatest liar.

Ant. How now, lady?

Cleo. I would I had thy inches; thou shouldst know

There were a heart in Egypt.

Ant. Hear me, queen:

The strong necessity of time commands Our services awhile; but my full heart Remains in use with you. Our Italy

Shines o'er with civil swords: Sextus Pompeius Makes his approaches to the port of Rome; Equality of two domestic powers

Breed scrupulous faction: the hatred, grown to strength,

Are newly grown to love: the condoned Pompey,

Rich in his father's honour, creeps again Into the hearts of such as have not served him:

Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten; And quietness, grown sick of rest, would purge

By any desperate change: my more particular, And that which most with you should stay, my going,

Is Fulvia's death.

Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me freedom,

It does from childishness: can Fulvia die?

Ant. She's dead, my queen:

Look here, and at thy sorrowing takest note: The garb she swam'd at; at the last, her

See when and where she died.

Cleo. O must I tell you Where to the sacred vault they should be laid?

With sorrowful water! Now I see, I see,

In Fulvia's death, how mine received shall be.

Ant. Quarrel no more, but be prepared to know

The purposes I bear; which are, or cease,
As you shall give the advice. By the fire
That quickens Nilus' alime, I go from hence
Thy soldier, servant; making peace or war 70
As thou affect'st.

Cleo. Out my lace, Charmian, come;
But let it be: I am quickly ill, and well,
So Antony loves.

Ant. My precious queen, forbear;
And give true evidence to his love, which stands
An honourable trial.

Cleo. So Fulvia told me.
I prithee, turn aside and weep for her;
Then bid adieu to me, and say the tears
Belong to Egypt: good now, play one scene
Of excellent dissembling; and let it look Like perfect honour.

Ant. You'll heat my blood: no more. So Cleo. You can do better yet; but this is meetly.

Ant. Now, by my sword,—
Cleo. And target. Still he mends;
But this is not the best. Look, prithee, Char-mian,

How this Herculean Roman does become
The carriage of his chafe.

Ant. I'll leave you, lady.

Cleo. Courteous lord, one word.
Sir, you and I must part, but that's not it;
Sir, you and I have loved, but there's not it;
That you know well: something it is I would,—
O, my oblivion is a very Antony, 90
And I am all forgotten.

Ant. But that your royalty
Holds idleness your subject, I should take you
For idleness itself.

Cleo. 'Tis sweating labour
To bear such idleness so near the heart
As Cleopatra this. But, sir, forgive me;
Since my becoming kills me, when they do not
Eye well to you: your honour calls you hence;
Therefore be deaf to my unpitied folly,
And all the gods go with you! upon your sword
Sit laurel victory! and smooth success 100
Be strew'd before your feet!

Ant. Let us go. Come;
Our separation so abides, and flies,
That thou, residing here, go'st yet with me,
And I, hence fleeing, here remain with thee.
Away! [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Rome. Caesar's house.

Enter OCTAVIUS CAESAR, reading a letter,
LEPIDUS, and their Train.

Oct. You may see, Lepidus, and henceforth
know
It is not Caesar's natural vice to hate
Our great competitor: from Alexandria
This is the news: he fishes, drinks, and wastes
The hours of night in revel; is not more man-like

Than Cleopatra; nor the queen of Ptolemy
More womanly than he; hardly gave audience, or

Vouchsafed to think he had partners: you shall find these

A man who is the abstract of all faults
That all men follow.

Lep. I must not think there are 20
Evils enow to darken all his goodness;
His faults in him seem as the spots of heaven,
More fiery by night's blackness; hereditary,
Rather than purchased; what he cannot change,
Than what he chooses.

Oct. You are too indulgent. Let us grant, it is not

Amis to tumble on the bed of Ptolemy;
To give a kingdom for a mirth; to sit
And keep the turn of tippling with a slave;
To reel the streets at noon, and stand the buffet
With knaves that smell of sweat: say this becomes him,— 31

As his composure must be rare indeed
Whom these things cannot blemish,—yet must
Antony

No way excuse his soils, when we do bear
So great weight in his lightness. If he fill'd
His vacancy with his voluptuousness,
Full surfeits, and the dryness of his bones,
Call on him for't; but to confound such time,
That drums him from his sport, and speaks as loud
As his own state and ours,—'tis to be chid 30
As we rate boys, who, being mature in knowledge,
Pawn their experience to their present pleasure,
And so rebel to judgement.

Enter a Messenger.

Lep. Here's more news.
Oct. Thy biddings have been done; and every hour,

Most noble Caesar, shalt thou have report
How 'tis abroad. Pompey is strong at sea;
And it appears he is beloved of those
That only have fear'd Caesar: to the ports
The discontents repair, and men's reports
Give him much wrong'd.

Oct. I should have known no less.
It hath been taught us from the primal state, 41
That he which is was wish'd until he were;
And the ebb'd man, ne'er loved till ne'er worth
love,

Comes dear'd by being lack'd. This common
body,
Like to a vagabond flag upon the stream,
Goes to and back, lackeying the varying tide,
To rot itself with motion.

Oct. Caesar, I bring thee word,
Menecrates and Menas, famous pirates,
Make the sea serve them, which they ear and wound

With keels of every kind: many hot incursions 50
They make in Italy; the borders maritime Lack blood to think on't, and flush youth revolt:

No vessel can peep forth, but 'tis as soon
Taken as seen; for Pompey's name strikes
more

Than could his war resisted.

Oct. Antony,
Leave thy lascivious wassails. When thou once

Wast beaten from Modena, where thou slew'st
Hirtius and Pansa, consuls, at thy heel
Did famine follow; whom thou fought'st against,

Though daintily brought up, with patience more
Than savages could suffer: thou didst drink
The stale of horses, and the gilded puddle
Which beasts would cough at: thy palate then did deign

The roughest berry on the rudest hedge;
Yes, like the stag, when snow the pasture sheets,

The barks of trees thou browsed'st; on the Alps

It is reported thou didst eat strange flesh,
Which some did die to look on: and all this—
It wounds thine honour that I speak it now—
Was borne so like a soldier, that thy cheek
So much as lank'd not.

Lep. 'Tis pity of him.

Cas. Let his shames quickly
Drive him to Rome: 'tis time we twain
Did show ourselves in the field; and to that end Assemble we immediate council: Pompey
Thrives in our idleness.

Lep. To-morrow, Cæsar,
I shall be furnish'd to inform you rightly Both what by sea and land I can be able
To touch this present time.

Cas. Till which encounter,
It is my business too. Farewell. So

Lep. Farewell, my lord: what you shall know meantime
Of suits abroad, I shall beseech you, sir,
To let me be partaker.

Cas. Doubt not, sir;
I knew it for my bond. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARNIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN.

Cleo. Charnian!

Char. Madam!

Cleo. Ha, ha!

Give me to drink mandragora.

Char. Why, madam!

Cleo. That I might sleep out this great gap of time

My Antony is away.

Char. You think of him too much.

Cleo. O, 'tis treason!

Char. Madam, I trust, not so.

Cleo. Thou, eunuch Mardian!

Mar. What's your highness' pleasure!

Cleo. Not now to hear thee sing; I take no
pleasure

In aught an eunuch has: 'tis well for thee,
That, being unseminar'd, thy freer thoughts
May not fly forth of Egypt. Hast thou affections!

Mar. Yes, gracious madam.

Cleo. Indeed!

Mar. Not in deed, madam; for I can do nothing

But what indeed is honest to be done:
Yet have I fierce affections, and think
What Venus did with Mars.

Cleo. O Charnian,
Where think'st thou he is now! Stands he,
or sits he!

Or does he walk? or is he on his horse?
Jolly horse, to bear the weight of Antony!
Do bravely, horse! for wot'st thou whom thou movest?

The demi-Atlas of this earth, the arm
And burgonet of men. He's speaking now,
Or murmuring 'Where's my serpent of old Nile!'

For so he calls me: now I feed myself
With most delicious poison. Think on me,
That am with Phœbus' amorous pinches black,
And wrinkled deep in time! Broad-fronted

Cæsar,
When thou wast here above the ground, I was
A morsel for a monarch: and great Pompey
Would stand and make his eyes grow in my brow;

There would he anchor his aspect and die
With looking on his life.

Enter ALEXAS.

Alex.

Cleo. How much unlike art

Antony!

Yet, coming from him, that great medicine hath

With his tinct gilded thee.

How goes it with my brave Mark Antony!

Alex. Last thing he did, dear queen.

He kiss'd,—the last of many doubled kisses,—
This orient pearl. His speech sticks in my heart.

Cleo. Mine ear must pluck it thence. 41

Alex. 'Good friend,' quoth he,

'Say, the firm Roman to great Egypt sends

This treasure of an oyster; at whose foot,

To mend the petty present, I will place

Her opulent throne with kingdoms; all the cast,

Say thou, shall call her mistress.' So he nodded,

And soberly did mount an arm-gaunt steed.

Who neigh'd so high, that what I would have

spoke

Was beastly dumb'd by him.

Cleo. What was he sad or merry?

Alex. Like to the time of the year between the extremes

Of hot and cold, he was nor sad nor merry.

Cleo. O well-divided disposition! Noting,

Note him, good Charnian, 'tis the many, not

note him:

He was not sad, for he would shine on those

That make their looks by his; he was not merry,

Which seem'd to tell them his remembrance

lay

In Egypt with his joy: but between both

O heavenly mingle! Be't thou sad or merry,

The violence of either thee becomes,

So does it no man else. Met'st thou my guest?

Alex. Ay, madam, twenty several messengers.

Why do you send so thick?

Cleo. Who's been that day

When I forgot to send to Antony,

Shall die a beggar. Ink and paper, Charmian.
Welcome, my good Alconna. Did I, Charmian,
Ever love Caesar so?

Char. O that brave Caesar!
Cle. Be checked with such another emphasis!
Say, the brave Antony.

Char. The valiant Caesar!
Cle. By Isis, I will give thee bloody teeth,
If thou with Caesar paragon again
My man of men.

Char. By your most gracious pardon,
I sing but after you.

Cle. My salad days,
When I was green in judgement: cold in blood,
To say as I said then! But, come, away;
Get me ink and paper:
He shall have every day a several greeting.
Or I'll unpeople Egypt. [Exit.

ACT II

SCENE I. Messina. Pompey's house.

Enter POMPEY, MENTORATES, and MENAS, in warlike manner.

Pom. If the great gods be just, they shall assist
The deeds of justest men.

Mene. Know, worthy Pompey,
That what they do delay, they not deny.

Pom. Whiles we are suitors to their throne, deceays
The thing we sue for.

Mene. We, ignorant of ourselves,
Beg often our own harms, which the wise powers
Deny us for our good; so find we profit
By losing of our payment.

Pom. I shall do well:
The people love me, and the sea is mine;
My powers are crescent, and my auguring hope Says it will come to the full. Mark Antony is in Egypt sits at dinner, and will make No wars without doors: Caesar gets money whence

He loses hearts: Lepidus flatters both,
Of both is flatter'd; but he neither loves,
Nor either cares for him.

Mene. Caesar and Lepidus
Are in the field; a mighty strength they carry.

Pom. Where have you this? 'tis false.

Mene. From Silvius, sir.

Pom. He dreams: I know they are in Rome

Antony. But all the charms of
love

Sell Cleopatra, soften thy waned lip!
Let witchcraft join with beauty, lust with modesty

Tie up the libertine in a field of feasts,
Keep his brain fuming; Epicurean cooks

Shout with oily sauces his appetite;
And sleep and feeding may prorogue his honour

Even till a lustre's darkness!

Enter VARIUS.

How now, Varius!

How is it more certain that I shall de-

Mark Antony is Expected: since he went from
A space for farther travel.

Pom. I could have given less matter
A better ear. Menas, I did not think This amorous surfeiter would have down'd his helm

For such a petty war: his soldiiership
Is twice the other twain; but let us rear
The higher our opinion, that our stirring
Can from the lap of Egypt pluck
The ne'er-lust-weari'd Antony.

Mene. I cannot hope
Caesar and Antony shall well greet together:
His wife that's dead did trespass to Caesar;
His brother war'd upon him; although, I think,
Not moved by Antony.

Pom. I know not, Menas.
How lesser enmities may give way to greater.
Were't not that we stand up against them all,
'Twere pregnant they should square between themselves;

For they have entertained cause enough
To draw their swords: but how the fear of us
May cement their divisions and bind up
The petty difference, we yet not know.
Be't as our gods will have't! It only stands so (our lives upon to use our strongest hands,
Come, Menas. [Exit.

SCENE II. Roma. The house of Lepidus.

Enter ENOBARBUS and LEPIDUS.

Lep. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed,
And shall become you well, to entreat your captain
To soft and gentle speech.

Eno. I shall entreat him
To answer like himself: if Caesar move him,
Let Antony look over Caesar's head
And speak as loud as Mars. By Jupiter,
Were I the wearer of Antonius' beard,
I would not shave 't to-day.

Lep. 'Tis not a time
For private stomaching.

Eno. Every time
Serves for the matter that is then born in't.

Lep. But small to greater matters must give way.

Eno. Not if the small come first.

Lep. Your speech is passion:
But, pray you, stir no embers up. Here comes
The noble Antony.

Enter ANTONY and VENTIDIUS.

Eno. And yonder, Caesar.

Enter CAESAR, MENEAS, and AGRIPPA.

Ant. If we compose well here, to Parthia:
Mark, Ventidius.

Caes. I do not know,
Mecenas; ask Agrippa.

Lep. Noble friends,
That which combined us was most great, and let not

A lesser action send us. What's to come,
May it be gently heard: when we debate
Our trivial differences loud, we do conspire

Murder in healing wounds: then, noble partners,
The rather, for I earnestly beseech Touch you the sourest points with sweetest terms,
Nor curtness grow to the matter.

Ant. 'Tis spoken well.
Were we before our armies, and to fight,
I should do thus. [Flourish.]

Ces. Welcome to Rome.

Ant. Thank you.

Ces. Sit.

Ant. Sit, sir.

Ces. Nay, then.

Ant. I learn, you take things ill which are not so,
Or being, concern you not.

Ces. I must be laugh'd at, 30
If, or for nothing or a little, I Should say myself offended, and with you Chiefly I the world; more laugh'd at, that I should

Once name you derogately, when to sound your name
It not concern'd me.

Ant. My being in Egypt, Caesar,
What was't to you?

Ces. No more than my residing here at
Rome

Might be to you in Egypt: yet, if you there
Did practise on my state, your being in Egypt
Might be my question.

Ant. How intend you, practis'd? 40
Ces. You may be pleased to catch at mine intent

By what did here befall me. Your wife and brother

Made wars upon me; and their contestation
Was theme for you, you were the word of war.

Ant. You do mistake your business; my brother never

Did urge me in his act: I did inquire it;
And have my learning from some true reports,
That drew their swords with you. Did he not rather

Discredit my authority with yours; 49
And make the wars alike against my stomach,
Having alike your cause? Of this my letters Before did satisfy you. If you'll patch a quarrel,

As matter whole you have not to make it with,
It must not be with this.

Ces. You praise yourself
By laying defects of judgement to me; but
You patch'd up your excuses.

Ant. Not so, not so;
I know you could not lack, I am certain on't,
Very necessity of this thought, that I,
Your partner in the cause 'gainst which he fought,

Could not with graceful eyes attend those wars Which fronted mine own peace. As for my wife, 52

I would you had her spirit in such another:
The third o' the world is yours; which with a maule

You may pace easy, but not such a wife.
Ces. Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to wars with the women!

Ant. So much uncourteous, her garbolla,
Ces.

Made out of her impatience, which not wanted
Shrewdness of policy too, I grieving grant
Did you too much disquiet: for that you must
But say, I could not help it.

Ces. I wrote to you 71
When rioting in Alexandria; you
Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts
Did gibe my misive out of audience.

Ant. Sir,
He fell upon me ere admitted; then
Three kings I had newly feasted, and did want

Of what I was i' the morning: but next day
I told him of myself; which was as much
As to have ask'd him pardon. Let this fellow
Be nothing of our strife; if we contend, 80
Out of our question wipe him.

Ces. You have broken
The article of your oath; which you shall never

Have tongue to charge me with.
Lep. Soft, Caesar!

Ant. No,

Lepidus, let him speak:
The honour is sacred which he talks on now,
Supposing that I lack'd it. But, on, Caesar;
The article of my oath.

Ces. To lend me arms and aid when I required them;

The which you both denied.
Ant. Neglected, rather;

And then when poison'd hours had bound me
up 82

From mine own knowledge. As nearly as I may,

I'll play the penitent to you: but mine honesty Shall not make poor my greatness, nor my
power

Work without it. Truth is, that Fulvia,
To have me out of Egypt, made wars here;
For which myself, the ignorant motive, do
So far ask pardon as betis mine honour
To stoop in such a case.

Lep. 'Tis noble spoken.
Mec. If it might please you, to enforce us further

The griefs between ye: to forget them quite
Were to remember that the present need 84
Speaks to stone you.

Lep. Worthily spoken, Messala.

Eno. Or, if you borrow one another's love for the instant, you may, when you hear the more words of Pompey, return it again: you shall have time to wrangle in when you have nothing else to do.

Ant. Thou art a soldier only: speak no
more.

Eno. That truth should be almost I had almost forgot.

Ant. You wrong this presence; therefore speak no more.

Eno. Go to, then; your constant shame.

Ces. I do not much dislike the matter; but
The manner of his speech; for I cannot be
We shall remain in friendship, my condition
So differing in their acts. I do, I do have

What hoop should hold us stanch, from edge to edge
O' the world I would pursue it.

Agg. Give me leave, Caesar,—

Ces. Speak, Agrippa.

Agg. Thou hast a sister by the mother's side.

Admired Octavia: great Mark Antony

Is now a widower.

Ces. Say not so, Agrippa:

If Cleopatra heard you, your reproof

Were well deserved of rashness.

Ant. I am not married, Caesar: let me hear Agrippa further speak.

Agg. To hold you in perpetual amity,
To make you brothers, and to knit your hearts

With an unslipping knot, take Antony

Octavia to his wife: whose beauty claims

No worse a husband than the best of men;

Whose virtue and whose general graces speak

That which none else can utter. By this marriage,

All little jealousies, which now seem great,

And all great fears, which now import their

Would then be nothing: truths would be tales,
Where now half tales be truths: her love to both

Would, each to other and all loves to both,
Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke;

For 'tis a studied, not a present thought,

By duty ruminated.

Ant. Will Caesar speak?

Ces. Not till he hears how Antony is touch'd

With what is spoke already.

Ant. What power is in Agrippa,

If I would say, 'Agrippa, be it so,'

To make this good?

Ces. The power of Caesar, and

His power unto Octavia.

Ant. May I never

To this good purpose, that so fairly shows,

Dream of impediment! Let me have thy

hand:

Further this act of grace; and from this hour

The heart of brothers govern in our loves

And sway our great designs!

Ces. There is my hand.

A sister I bequeath you, whom no brother

Did ever love so dearly: let her live

To join our kingdoms and our hearts; and

never

Fly off our loves again!

Lep. Happily, amen!

Ant. I did not think to draw my sword

'gainst Pompey;

For he hath laid strange courtesies and great

Of late upon me: I must thank him only,

Let my remembrance suffer ill report;

At least of that, defy him.

Lep. Time calls upon's:

Of us must Pompey presently be sought,

Or else he seeks out us.

Ant. Where lies he?

Ces. About the mount Misenum.

Ant. What is his strength by land?

Ces. Great and increasing: but by sea

He is an absolute master.

Ant. So is the fame.

Would we had spoke together! Haste we for

it:

Yet, ere we put ourselves in arms, dispatch we

The business we have talk'd of.

Ces. With most gladness;

And do invite you to my sister's view,

Whither straight I'll lead you.

Ant. Let us, Lepidus,

Not lack your company.

Lep. Noble Antony,

Not sickness should detain me.

[Flourish. Exeunt Caesar, Antony, and Lepidus.

Mec. Welcome from Egypt, sir.

Eno. Half the heart of Caesar, worthy Mecenas! My honourable friend, Agrippa!

Agg. Good Enobarbus!

Mec. We have cause to be glad that matters are so well digested. You stayed well by 't in Egypt.

Eno. Ay, sir: we did sleep day out of countenance, and made the night light with drinking.

Mec. Eight wild-boars roasted whole at a breakfast, and but twelve persons there; is this true?

Eno. This was but as a fly by an eagle: we had much more monstrous matter of feast, which worthily deserved noting.

Mec. She's a most triumphant lady, if report be square to her.

Eno. When she first met Mark Antony, she pursed up his heart, upon the river of Cydnus.

Agg. There she appeared indeed; or my reporter devised well for her.

Eno. I will tell you.

The barge she sat in, like a burnish'd throne,

Burn'd on the water: the poop was beaten

gold;

Purple the sails, and so perfumed that

The winds were love-sick with them; the oars

were silver,

Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and made

The water which they beat to follow faster,

As amorous of their strokes. For her own person,

It beggar'd all description: she did lie

In her pavilion—cloth-of-gold of tissue—

O'er-picturing that Venus where we see

The fancy outwork nature: on each side her

Stood pretty dimpled boys, like smiling Cupids,

With divers-colour'd fans, whose wind did seem

To glow the delicate cheeks which they did cool,

And what they undid did.

Agg. O, rare for Antony!

Eno. Her gentlewomen, like the Nereides,

So many mermaids, tended her i' the eyes.

And made their bends adornings: at the helm

A seeming mermaid steers: the silken tackle

Swell with the touches of those flower-soft

hands.

That rarely frame the office. From the barge

A strange invisible perfume hits the sense

Of the adjacent wharfs. The city cast

Her people out upon her; and Antony,

Enthroned I' the market-place, did sit alone,
Whistling to the air; which, but for vacancy,
Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too
And made a gap in nature.

Ant. Rare Egyptian!

Eno. Upon her landing, Antony sent to her,
Invited her to supper: she replied,
It should be better he became her guest;
Which she entreated: our courteous Antony,
Whom ne'er the word of 'No' woman heard

Being harber'd ten times o'er, goes to the feast,
And for his ordinary pays his heart 230
For what his eyes eat only.

Ant. Royal wench!

She made great Caesar lay his sword to bed:
He plough'd her, and she cropp'd.

Eno. I saw her once
Hop forty paces through the public street;
And having lost her breath, she spoke, and panted,

That she did make defect perfection,
And, breathless, power breathe forth.

Mec. Now Antony must leave her utterly.

Eno. Never; he will not:

Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale 240
Her infinite variety: other women cloy
The appetites they feed; but she makes hungry
Where most she satisfies: for vilest things
Become themselves in her; that the holy priests
Bless her when she is riggish.

Mec. If beauty, wisdom, modesty, can settle
The heart of Antony, Octavia is
A blessed lottery to him.

Ant. Let us go.

Good Enobarbus, make yourself my guest 249
Whilst you abide here.

Eno. Humbly, sir, I thank you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. The same. Caesar's house.

Enter ANTONY, CESAR, OCTAVIA between them, and Attendants.

Ant. The world and my great office will sometimes
Divide me from your bosom.

Octa. All which time
Before the gods my knee shall bow my prayers
To them for you.

Ant. Good night, sir. My Octavia,
Read not my blemishes in the world's report:
I have not kept my square; but that to come Shall all be done by the rule. Good night, dear lady.

Good night, sir.

Octa. Good night.
[Exeunt Caesar and Octavia.]

Enter Soothsayer.

Ant. Now, sirrah; you do wish yourself in
me! 250
Would I had never come from thence,

nor you
Thither!

Ant. If you can, your reason!

Sooth. I see it in My motion, have it not in my tongue; but yet
Hie you to Egypt again.

Ant. Say!
Whose fortunes shall rise I mine? Caesar's or

Sooth. Therefore, O Antony, stay not by his side:
Thy demon, that's thy spirit which keeps thee, is Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable, 250
Where Caesar's is not; but, near him, thy angel Becomes a fear, as being o'erpower'd: therefore Make space enough between you.

Ant. Speak this no more.
Sooth. To none but thee; no more, but when to thee.

If thou dost play with him at any game,
Thou art sure to lose; and, of that natural luck,
He beats thee 'gainst the odds: thy lustre
thickens,
When he shines by: I say again, thy spirit
Is all afraid to govern thee near him;
But, he away, 'tis noble.

Ant. Get thee gone: 30
Say to Ventidius I would speak with him:
[Exit Soothsayer.]

He shall to Parthia. Be it art or hap,
He hath spoken true: the very dice obey him;
And in our sports my better cunning faints
Under his chance: if we draw lots, he speeds;
His cocks do win the battle still of mine,
When it is all to nought; and his quails ever
Beat mine, inhoop'd, at odds. I will to Egypt:
And though I make this marriage for my peace,
I' the east my pleasure lies.

Enter VENTIDIUS.

O, come, Ventidius, 40
You must to Parthia: your commission's ready;
Follow me, and receive 't. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. The same. A street.

Enter LEPIDUS, MECENAS, and AGRIPPA.

Lep. Trouble yourselves no further: pray you, hasten
Your generals after.

Ant. Sir, Mark Antony
Will e'en but kiss Octavia, and we'll follow.
Lep. Till I shall see you in your soldier's

Which will become you both, farewell.

Mec. We shall,
As I conceive the journey, be at the Mount
Before you, Lepidus.

Lep. Your way is shorter;
My purposes do draw me much about:
You'll win two days upon me.

Mec. Sir, good success!
Ant. Farewell. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Give me some music; music, sweetly
food
Of us that trade in love.
Alexas. The music, ho!

Enter MARDIAN the Eunuch.

Cleo. Let it alone; let's to billiards: come, Charmian.

Char. My arm is sore; best play with Mardian.

Cleo. As well a woman with an eunuch play'd

As with a woman. Come, you'll play with me, sir!

Mess. As well as I can, madam.

Cleo. And when good will is show'd, though't come too short.

The actor may plead pardon. I'll none now: Give me mine angle; we'll to the river: there,

My music playing far off, I will betray

Tawny-fin'd fishes; my bended hook shall pierce

Their slimy jaws; and, as I draw them up,

I'll think them every one an Antony.

And say 'Ah, ha! you're caught.'

Char. 'Twas merry when

You wagger'd on your angling; when your diver

Did hang a salt-fish on his hook, which he

With fervency drew up.

Cleo. That time,—O times!—

I laugh'd him out of patience; and that night

I laugh'd him into patience: and next morn,

Ere the ninth hour, I drunk him to his bed;

Then put my tires and mantles on him, whilst

I wore his sword Philippan.

Enter a Messenger.

O, from Italy!

Ram thou thy fruitful tidings in mine ears,

That long time have been barren.

Mess. Madam, madam,—

Cleo. Antonius dead!—If thou say so, villain,

Thou kill'st thy mistress: but well and free,

If thou so yield him, there is gold, and here

My blindest veins to kiss; a hand that kings

Have lip'd, and trembled kissing.

Mess. First, madam, he is well.

Cleo. Why, there's more gold.

But, sirrah, mark, we use

To say the dead are well: bring it to that,

The gold I give thee will I melt and pour

Down thy ill-uttering throat.

Mess. Good madam, hear me.

Cleo. Well, go to, I will;

But there's no goodness in thy face: if

Be free and healthful,—so tart a favour

To trumpet such good tidings! If not well,

Thou shouldst come like a Fury crown'd with snakes.

Not like a formal man.

Mess. Will't please you hear me?

Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee ere thou speak'st.

Yet, if thou say Antony lives, is well,

Or friends with Caesar, or not captive to him,

I'll reward thee with a shower of gold, and hail

Rich shall I upon thee.

Mess. Madam, he's well.

Cleo. Well said.

Mess. And friends with Caesar.

Cleo. Thou'rt an honest man.

Mess. Caesar and he are greater friends than ever.

Cleo. Make thee a fortune from me.

Mess. But yet, madam,—

Cleo. I do not like 'But yet'; it does allay

The good precedence; sit upon 'But yet'!

Mess. 'But yet' is as a gaoler to bring forth

Some monstrous malcontent. Prithee, friend,

Pour out the pack of matters to mine ear.

The good and bad together; he's friends with

Caesar;

In state of health thou say'st; and thou say'st free.

Mess. Free, madam! no; I made no such report:

He's bound unto Octavia.

Cleo. For what good turn?

Mess. For the best turn i' the bed.

Cleo. I am pale, Charmian.

Mess. Madam, he's married to Octavia.

Cleo. The most infectious pestilence upon thee! [Strikes him down.]

Mess. Good madam, patience.

Cleo. What say you? Hence,

[Strikes him again.]

Horrible villain! or I'll spurn thine eyes

Like balls before me; I'll unhair thy head:

[She hurls him up and down.]

Thou shalt be whipp'd with wire, and stew'd in brine,

Smarting in lingering pickle.

Mess. Gracious madam,

I that do bring the news made not the match.

Cleo. Say tis not so, a province I will give

thee.

And make thy fortunes proud: the blow thou hast

Shall make thy peace for moving me to rage;

And I will boot thee with what gift beside:

Thy modesty can beg.

Mess. He's married, madam.

Cleo. Rogue, thou hast lived too long.

[Draws a knife.]

Mess. Nay, then I'll run.

What mean you, madam! I have made no fault.

[Exit.]

Char. Good madam, keep yourself within yourself:

The man is innocent.

Cleo. Some innocents 'scape not the thunderbolt.

Melt Egypt into Nile! and kindly creatures

Turn all to serpents! Call the slave again: 79

Though I am mad, I will not bite him: call.

Char. He is afraid to come.

Cleo. I will not hurt him.

[Exit Charmian.]

These hands do lack nobility, that they strike

A meaner than myself; since I myself

Have given myself the cause.

Re-enter CHARMIAN and Messenger.

Come hither, sir.

Though it be honest, it is never good

To bring bad news: give to a gracious message

An host of tongues; but let ill tidings tell

Themselves when they be told.

Mess. I have done my duty.

Cleo. Is he married?

I cannot hate thee worse than I do, 90
If thou again say 'Yea.'

Mess. He's married, madam.

Cleo. The gods confound thee! dost thou hold there still?

Mess. Should I lie, madam?

Cleo. O, I would thou didst, So half my Egypt were submerged and made A cistern for scaled snakes! Go, get thee hence:

Hast thou Narcissus in thy face, to me Thou wouldst appear most ugly. He is married!

Mess. I crave your highness' pardon.

Cleo. He is married!

Mess. Take no offence that I would not offend you:

To punish me for what you make me do 100 Seems much unequal: he's married to Octavia.

Cleo. O, that his fault should make a knave of thee,

That art not what thou'rt sure of! Get thee hence:

The merchandise which thou hast brought from Rome

Are all too dear for me: lie they upon thy hand,

And be undone by 'em! [Exit Messenger.]

Char. Good your highness, patience.

Cleo. In praising Antony, I have dispraised Caesar.

Char. Many times, madam.

Cleo. I am paid for't now.

Lead me from hence; I faint: O Iras, Charmian! 'tis no matter. 110

Go to the fellow, good Alexas; bid him Report the feature of Octavia, her years,

Her inclination, let him not leave out The colour of her hair: bring me word quickly. [Exit Alexas.]

Let him for ever go:—let him not—Charmian, Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon,

The other way 's a Mars. Bid you Alexas [To Mardian.]

Bring me word how tall she is. Pity me, Charmian,

But do not speak to me. Lead me to my chamber. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. Near Misenum.

Flourish. Enter POMPEY and MENAS at one side, with drum and trumpet: at another, CEASAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, ENOBARBUS, MECENAS, with Soldiers marching.

Pom. Your hostages I have, so have you mine;

And we shall talk before we fight.

Ces. Most meet That first we come to words; and therefore have we

Our written purposes before us sent:

Which, if thou hast consider'd, let us know If 'twill tie up thy discontented sword,

And carry back to Sicily much tall youth That else must perish here.

Pom. To you all three, The senators alone of this great world,

Chief factors for the gods, I do not know

Wherefore my father should revengers want, Having a son and friends: since Julius Caesar,

Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted,

There saw you labouring for him. What was't That moved pale Cassius to conspire; and what

Made the all-honour'd, honest Roman, Brutus, With the arm'd rest, couriers of beauteous freedom,

To drench the Capitol; but that they would Have one man but a man? And that is it '39

Hath made me rig my navy; at whose burthen The anger'd ocean foams; with which I meant

To scourge the ingratitude that spiteful Rome Cast on my noble father.

Ces. Take your time. Thou canst not fear us, Pompey, with thy sails;

We'll speak with thee at sea: at land, thou know'st

How much we do o'er-count thee.

Pom. At land, indeed, Thou dost o'er-count me of my father's house:

But, since the cuckoo builds not for himself, Remain in't as thou mayst.

Lep. Be pleased to tell us— For this is from the present—how you take 30

The offers we have sent you.

Ces. There's the point.

Ant. Which do not be entreated to, but weigh

What it is worth embraced.

Ces. And what may follow, To try a larger fortune.

Pom. You have made me offer Of Sicily, Sardinia; and I must Rid all the sea of pirates; then, to send Measures of wheat to Rome; this 'greed upon,

To part with unback'd edges, and bear back Our targes undinted.

Ces. Ant. Lep. That's our offer.

Pom. Know, then, 40 I came before you here a man prepared To take this offer: but Mark Antony

Put me to some impatience: though I lose The praises of it by telling, you must know

When Caesar and your brother were at blows, Your mother came to Sicily and did find

Her welcome friendly.

Ant. I have heard it, Pompey; And am well studied for a liberal thanks

Which I do owe you.

Pom. Let me have your hand:

I did not think, sir, to have met you here. 50

Ant. The beds 's the east are soft; and thanks to you,

That call'd me timelier than my purpose hither; For I have gain'd by't.

Ces. Since I saw your last, There is a change upon you.

Pom. Well, I know it. What counts harsh fortune casts upon my state;

But in my bosom shall she never come. To make my heart her vessel.

Lep. Well met here.

Pom. I hope so, Lepidus. That we are agreed: I crave oursall'd between us.

Ces. That's the next to do. 60
Pom. We'll feast each other ere we part;
 and let's
 Draw lots who shall begin.

Ant. That will I, Pompey.
Pom. No, Antony, take the lot: but, first
 Or last, your fine Egyptian cookery Shall have the fame. I have heard that Julius

Cesar
 Grew fat with feasting there.

Ant. You have heard much.
Pom. I have fair meanings, sir.

Ant. And fair words to them.
Pom. Then so much have I heard:

And I have heard, Apollodorus carried—
Eno. No more of that: he did so.

Pom. What, I pray you? 70
Eno. A certain queen to Caesar in a mat-

Pom. I know thee now: how farest thou, soldier?

Eno. Well;
 And well am like to do; for, I perceive,
 Four feasts are toward.

Pom. Let me shake thy hand;
 I never hated thee: I have seen thee fight,
 When I have envied thy behaviour.

Eno. Sir,
 I never loved you much; but I ha' praised ye,
 When you have well deserved ten times as much

 As I have said you did.

Pom. Enjoy thy plainness, so
 It nothing ill becomes thee.

Aboard my galley I invite you all:
 Will you lead, lords?

Ces. Ant. Lep. Show us the way, sir.

Pom. Come.
 [Exeunt all but Menas and Enobarbus.]

Menas. [Aside] Thy father, Pompey, would ne'er have made this treaty.—You and I have known, sir.

Eno. At sea, I think.
Menas. We have, sir.

Eno. You have done well by water.
Menas. And you by land. 80

Eno. I will praise any man that will praise me; though it cannot be denied what I have done by land.

Menas. Nor what I have done by water.
Eno. Yes, something you can deny for your own safety: you have been a great thief by sea.

Menas. And you by land.

Eno. There I deny my land service. But my hand, Menas; if our eyes had here they might take two thieves 80

Menas. All men's faces are true, whate'er their hands are.

Eno. But there is never a fair woman has a true face.

Menas. No slander: they steal hearts.
Eno. We came hither to fight with you.

Menas. For my part, I am sorry it is turned to a drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh at his fortune. 110

Eno. If he do, sure, he cannot weep 't back

Menas. You've said, sir. We looked not for Mark Antony here: pray you, is he married to Cleopatra?

Eno. Caesar's sister is called Octavia.
Menas. True, sir; she was the wife of Caius

Marcellus.
Eno. But she is now the wife of Marcus

Antonius.
Menas. Pray ye, sir!

Eno. 'Tis true.
Menas. Then is Caesar and he for ever knit together.

Eno. If I were bound to divine of this unity,

I would not prophesy so.
Menas. I think the policy of that purpose made more in the marriage than the love of the parties.

Eno. I think so too. But you shall find,
 the band that seems to tie their friendship together will be the very stranger of their amity: Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation. 131

Menas. Who would not have his wife so?
Eno. Not he that himself is not so; which is Mark Antony. He will to his Egyptian dish again: then shall the sighs of Octavia blow the fire up in Caesar; and, as I said before, that which is the strength of their amity shall prove the immediate author of their variance. Antony will use his affection where it is: he married

but his occasion here. 140

Menas. And thus it may be. Come, sir, will you aboard? I have a health for you.

Eno. I shall take it, sir: we have used our throats in Egypt.

Menas. Come, let's away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. On board Pompey's galley, off Misenum.

Music plays. Enter two or three Servants with a banquet.

First Serv. Here they'll be, man. Some o' their plants are ill-rooted already; the least wind'll the world will blow them down.

Sec. Serv. Lepidus is high-coloured.

First Serv. They have made him drink alms-drink.

Sec. Serv. As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out 'No more;' reconciles them to his entreaty, and himself to the drink.

First Serv. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion. 11

Sec. Serv. Why, this it is to have a name in great men's fellowship: I had as lief have a reed that will do me no service as a partizan

 I could not heave.

First Serv. To be called into a huge sphere, and not to be seen to move in't, are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster the cheeks.

A sennet sounded. Enter CESAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, POMPEY, AGRIPPA, MICHENAS,

ENOBARBUS, MENAS, with other captains.

Ant. [To Cesar] Thus do they, sir: they take the flow o' the Nile

By certain scales i' the pyramid; they know,

By the height, the lowness, or the mean, if dearth

Or foison follow: the higher Nilus swells,
The more it promises: as it ebbs, the seedman
Upon the slime and ooze scatters his grain,
And shortly comes to harvest.

Lep. You've strange serpents there.

Ant. Ay, Lepidus.

Lep. Your serpent of Egypt is bred now of your mud by the operation of your sun: so is your crocodile.

Ant. They are so.

Pom. Sit,—and some wine! A health to Lepidus!

Lep. I am not so well as I should be, but I'll ne'er out.

Eno. Not till you have slept; I fear me you'll be in till then.

Lep. Nay, certainly, I have heard the Ptolemy's pyramids are very goodly things; without contradiction, I have heard that.

Men. [Aside to Pom.] Pompey, a word.

Pom. [Aside to Men.] Say in mine ear: what is't?

Men. [Aside to Pom.] Forsake thy seat, I do beseech thee, captain,

And hear me speak a word.

Pom. [Aside to Men.] Forbear me till anon.
This wine for Lepidus!

Lep. What manner o' thing is your crocodile?

Ant. It is shaped, sir, like itself; and it is as broad as it hath breadth: it is just so high as it is, and moves with its own organs: it lives by that which nourisheth it; and the elements
once out of it, it transmuteth.

Lep. What colour is it of?

Ant. Of its own colour too.

Lep. 'Tis a strange serpent.

Ant. 'Tis so. And the tears of it are wet.

Ces. Will this description satisfy him?

Ant. With the health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very epicure.

Pom. [Aside to Men.] Go hang, sir, hang!

Tell me of that! away!

Do as I bid you. Where's this cup I call'd for?

Men. [Aside to Pom.] If for the sake of merit thou wilt hear me,

Rise from thy stool.

Pom. [Aside to Men.] I think thou'rt mad.

The matter? [Rises, and walks aside.]

Men. I have ever held my cap off to thy fortunes.

Pom. Thou hast served me with much faith.

What's else to say?

Be jolly, lords.

Ant. These quick-sands, Lepidus,
Keep off them, for you sink.

Men. Wilt thou be lord of all the world?

Pom. What say'st thou?

Men. Wilt thou be lord of the whole world?

That's twice.

Pom. How should that be?

Men. But entertain it,

And though thou think me poor, I am the man
Will give thee all the world.

Pom. Hast thou drunk well?

Men. No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup.

Thou art, if thou dar'st be, the earthly Jove:
Whate'er the ocean pales, or sky inclips,
Thine, if thou wilt ha't.

Pom. Show me which way.
These three world-shares, these competitors,

Are in thy vessel: let me cut the cable;
And, when we are put off, fall to their throats:
All there is thine.

Pom. Ah, this thou should'st have done,
And not have spoke on't! In me 'tis villany;
In thee 't had been good service. Thou must
know,

'Tis not my profit that does lead mine honour;
Mine honour, it. Repent that e'er thy tongue Hath so betray'd thine act: being done unknown,

I should have found it afterwards well done;
But must condemn it now. Desist, and drink.

Men. [Aside] For this,
I'll never follow thy pall'd fortunes more.

Who seeks, and will not take when once 'tis offer'd,

Shall never find it more.

Pom. This health to Lepidus! go Ant. Bear him ashore. I'll pledge it for him, Pompey.

Eno. Here's to thee, Menas!

Men. Enobarbus, welcome!

Pom. Fill till the cup be hid.

Eno. There's a strong fellow, Menas.

[Pointing to the Attendant who carries of Lepidus.]

Men. Why!

Eno. A' bears the third part of the world, man; see't not!

Men. The third part, then, is drunk: would it were all,

That it might go on wheels!

Eno. Drink thou; increase the reels.

Men. Come.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian feast.

Ant. It ripens towards it. Strike the vessels,
ho!

Here is to Caesar!

Ces. I could well forbear't.
It's monstrous labour, when I wash my brain,
And it grows fouler.

Ant. Be a child o' the time.

Ces. Possess it, I'll make answer:

But I had rather fast from all four days
Than drink so much in one.

Eno. Ha, my brave emperor! [To Antony.]
Shall we dance now the Egyptian Bacchanal,
And celebrate our drink?

Pom. Let's ha't, good soldiers.

Ant. Come, let's all take hands,
Till that the conquering wine hath steep'd our sense

In soft and delicate Letha.

Eno. All take hands.
Make battery to our ears with the loud music:

The while I'll place you: then the boy shall sing;

The holding every man shall bear as loud
As his strong sides can volley.

[Music plays. Enobarbus places them hand to hand.]

THE SONG.

Come, thou monarch of the vine,
Plump Bacchus with pink eye!
In thy haze our cares be drown'd,
With thy grapes our hairs be crown'd
Oup us, till the world go round,
Oup us, till the world go round!

Eno. What would you more? Pompey, good night. Good brother.
Let me request you off: our graver business frowns at this levity. Gentle lords, let's part; You see we have burnt our cheeks: strong Enobarb

Is weaker than the wine; and mine own tongue Splits what it speaks: the wild disguise hath almost Antick'd us all. What needs more words?
Good night.

Good Antony, your hand.

Pom. I'll try you on the shore.

Ant. And shall, sir: give's your hand.

Pom. O Antony, You have my father's house,—But, what! we are friends.

Come, down into the boat.

Eno. Take heed you fall not.

[Exit all but Enobarbus and Menas.]
Menas, I'll not on shore.

Men. No, to my cabin. These drums! these trumpets, flutes! what! Let Neptune hear we bid a loud farewell To these great fellows: sound and be hang'd, sound out! [Sound a flourish with drums.]

Eno. Ho! says a'. There's my cap. [Exit.]

Men. Ho! Noble captain, come. [Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I. A plain in Syria.

Enter VENTIDIUS as it were in triumph, with SILLIUS, and other Romans, Officers, and Soldiers; the dead body of PACCORUS borne before him.

Ven. Now, darling Parthia, art thou struck; and now

Pleas'd fortune does of Marcus Crassus' death Make me revenger. Bear the king's son's body Before our army. Thy Pacorus, Ordes, Pays this for Marcus Crassus.

Sil. Noble Ventidius, Whilst yet with Parthian blood thy sword is warm,

The fugitive Parthians follow; spur through Media,

Mesopotamia, and the shewers whither The fated fly: so thy grand captain Antony Shall not thee on triumphant chariots and 10 Put garlands on thy head.

Ven. O Silius, Silius, I have done enough; a lower place, note well, May make too great an act: for learn this,

Sil. Better by these quacks, than by our deed

Antony, and his, to learn what him we serve's

Antony have ever won

More in their officer than person: Besides, One of my plots in Syria, his lieutenant, For quick accumulation of renown, Which he achiev'd by the minute, lost his favour.

Who does it the wate more than his captain can Become his captain's captain: and ambition, The soldier's virtue, rather makes choice of loss, Than gain which darkens him. I could do more to do Antonius' good. But 'twould offend him; and in his offence Should my performance perish.

Sil. Thou hast, Ventidius, that Without the which a soldier, and his sword, Grants scarce distinction. Thou wilt write to Antony!

Ven. I'll humbly signify what in his name, That magical word of war, we have effected; 32 How, with his banners and his well-paid ranks, The ne'er-yet-beaten horse of Parthia We have jaded out of the field.

Sil. Where is he now?
Ven. He purposeth to Athens: whither, with what haste

The weight we must convey with's will permit, We shall appear before him. On, then; pass along! [Exit.]

SCENE II. Rome. An ante-chamber in Caesar's house.

Enter AGRIPPA at one door, ENOBARBUS at another.

Agr. What, are the brothers parted?

Eno. They have dispatch'd with Pompey, he is gone;

The other three are sealing. Octavia weeps To part from Rome; Caesar is sad; and Lepidus Since Pompey's feast, as Menas says, is troubled With the green sickness.

Agr. 'Tis a noble Lepidus.

Eno. A very fine one: O, how he loves Caesar!

Agr. Nay, but how dearly he adores Mark Antony!

Eno. Caesar! Why, he's the Jupiter of men.

Agr. What's Antony? The god of Jupiter.

Eno. Speaks you of Caesar! How! the nonpareil!

Agr. O Antony! O thou Arabian bird! 11

Eno. Would you praise Caesar, say 'Caesar;' go no further.

Agr. Indeed, he plied them both with excellent praises.

Eno. But he loves Caesar best; yet he loves Antony:

Ho! hearts, tongues, figures, scribes, heads, poets, cannot Think, speak, cast, write, sing, number, his! His love to Antony. But as for Caesar, Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder.

Agr. Both he loves. [Both bow.]

Eno. They are his slaves; and he their beetle. [Trumpets within.] So!

This is to hurry. Adieu, noble A.

Agr. Good fortune, worthy farewell.

SCENE II]

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA

Enter CÆSAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, and OCTAVIA.

Ant. No further, sir.

Cæs. You take from me a great part of myself;

Use me well in't. Sister, prove such a wife As my thoughts make thee, and as my farthest band Shall pass on thy approval. Most noble Antony, Let not the piece of virtue, which is set Betwixt us as the cement of our love, To keep it builded, be the ram to batter 30 The fortress of it; for better might we Have loved without this mean, if on both parts This be not cherish'd.

Ant. Make me not offended

In your distrust.

Cæs. I have said.

Ant. You shall not find, Though you be therein curious, the least cause For what you seem to fear: so, the gods keep you,

And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends!

We will here part.

Cæs. Farewell, my dearest sister, fare thee well:

The elements be kind to thee, and make 40 Thy spirits all of comfort! fare thee well.

Oct. My noble brother!

Ant. The April's in her eyes: it is love's spring,

And these the showers to bring it on. Be cheerful.

Oct. Sir, look well to my husband's house; and—

Cæs. What,

Octavia!

Oct. I'll tell you in your ear.

Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can

Her heart inform her tongue,—the swan's down-feather,

That stands upon the swell at full of tide, And neither way inclines. 50

Eno. [Aside to Agr.] Will Cæsar weep?

Agr. [Aside to Eno.] He has a cloud in's face.

Eno. [Aside to Agr.] He were the worse for that were he a horse;

So is he, being a man.

Agr. [Aside to Eno.] Why, Enocharbus, When Antony found Julius Cæsar dead,

He cried almost to roaring; and he wept When at Philippi he found Brutus slain.

Eno. [Aside to Agr.] That year, indeed, he was troubled with a rheum;

What will 't do, he did confound his wall'd, Believe 't, till I wept too.

Cæs. No, sweet Octavia, You shall hear from me still; the time shall not

Out-go my thinking on you.

Ant. Come, sir, come; 60 I'll wrestle with you in my strength of love: Look, here I have you; thus I let you go, And give you to the gods.

Cæs. Adieu; be happy! Let all the number of the stars give light To thy fair way!

Cæs. Farewell, farewell! [Kisses Octavia.]

Ant. Farewell! [Trumpets sound. Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Where is the fellow?

Alex. Half afraid to come.

Cleo. Go to, go to.

Enter the Messenger as before.

Come hither, sir.

Alex. Good majesty, Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you But when you are well pleased.

Cleo. That Herod's head I'll have; but how, when Antony is gone Through whom I might command it! Come thou near.

Mess. Most gracious majesty,—

Cleo. Didst thou behold Octavia?

Mess. Ay, dread queen.

Cleo. Where? 20

Mess. Madam, in Rome;

I look'd her in the face, and saw her led Between her brother and Mark Antony.

Cleo. Is she as tall as me?

Mess. She is not, madam.

Cleo. Didst hear her speak? is she skilful-tongued or low?

Mess. Madam, I heard her speak; she is low-voiced.

Cleo. That's not so good; he cannot like her long.

Char. Like her! O Isis! 'tis impossible.

Cleo. I think so, Charmian: dull of tongue, and dwarfish!

What majesty is in her gait? Remember, so If e'er thou look'dst on majesty.

Mess. She creeps: Her motion and her station are as one; She shows a body rather than a life, A statue than a breather.

Cleo. Is this certain?

Mess. Or I have no observance.

Char. Three in Egypt Cannot make better note.

Cleo. He's very knowing; I do perceive 't: there's nothing in her yet!

The fellow has good judgement.

Char. Kneel down.

Cleo. Guess at her years, I prithee.

Mess. She was a widow,—

Cleo. Widow! Charmian, hark!

Mess. And I do think she's thirty.

Cleo. Bear'st thou her face in mind? is't long or round?

Mess. Round even to faultiness.

Cleo. For the most part, too, they are foolish that are so.

Her hair, what colour!

Mess. Brown, madam: and her forehead
As low as she would wish it.

Cleo. There's gold for thee.
Thou must not take my former sharpness ill:
I will employ thee back again; I find thee
Most fit for business: go make thee ready; 40
Our letters are prepared. [Exit Messenger.]

Char. A proper man.
Cleo. Indeed, he is so: I repent me much That so I harried him. Why, methinks, by
him,
This creature's no such thing.

Char. Nothing, madam.
Cleo. The man hath seen some majesty, and should know.

Char. Hath he seen majesty? Isis else defend,

And serving you so long!

Cleo. I have one thing more to ask him yet,
good Charmian:

But 'tis no matter; thou shalt bring him to me
Where I will write. All may be well enough. 50

Char. I warrant you, madam. [Exit.]

SCENE IV. Athena. A room in Antony's house.

Enter ANTONY AND OCTAVIA.

Ant. Nay, nay, Octavia, not only that,—
That were excusable, that, and thousands more
Of semblable import,—but he hath waged
New wars 'gainst Pompey; made his will, and read it

To public ear:
Spoke scantly of me: when perforce he could not

But pay me terms of honour, cold and sickly
He vented them; most narrow measure lent
me:

When the best hint was given him, he not took't,
Or did it from his teeth.

Oct. O my good lord, 10
Believe not all; or, if you must believe,
Stomach not all. A more unhappy lady,
If this division chance, ne'er stood between,
Praying for both parts:

The good gods will mock me presently,
When I shall pray, 'O, bless my lord and
husband!'

Undo that prayer, by crying out as loud,
'O, bless my brother!' Husband win, win
brother.

Prays, and destroys the prayer; no midway
'Twixt these extremes at all.

Ant. Gentle Octavia, 20
Let your best love draw to that point, which needs

Best to preserve it: if I lose mine honour,
I lose myself: better I were not yours
Than yours so branchless. But, as you requested,

Yourself shall go between's: the mean time,
I'll make the preparation of a war

Shall show your brother: make your soonest leave.

So your desires are yours.

Oct. Thanks to my lord.
The Jove of power make me most weak, most weak.

Your reconciler! Wars 'twixt you twain would be 30
As if the world should cleave, and that slain
men

Should solder up the rift.

Ant. When it appears to you where this begins,

Turn your displeasure that way; for our faults
Can never be so equal, that your love

Can equally move with them. [Provide your going;]

Choose your own company, and command what cost

Your heart has mind to. [Exit.]

SCENE V. The same. Another room.

Enter ENOBARBUS AND EROS, meeting.

Ero. How now, friend Eros!

Eros. There's strange news come, sir.

Ero. What, man!

Eros. Caesar and Lepidus have made wars upon Pompey.

Ero. This is old; what is the success?

Eros. Caesar, having made use of him in the wars 'gainst Pompey, presently denied him rivalry; would not let him partake in the glory of the action: and not resting here, accuses him of letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey; upon his own appeal, seizes him;
so the poor third is up, till death enlarge his confine.

Ero. Then, world, thou hast a pair of chaps,
no more;
And throw between them all the food thou hast,
They'll grind the one the other. Where's
Antony!

Eros. He's walking in the garden—thus;
and spurns
The rush that lies before him; cries, 'Fool
Lepidus!'

And threats the throat of that his officer 10
That murder'd Pompey.

Ero. Our great navy's rigg'd.

Eros. For Italy and Caesar. More, Domitius;
My lord desires you presently: my news
I might have told hereafter.

Ero. 'Twill be naught:
But let it be. Bring me to Antony.

Eros. Come, sir. [Exit.]

SCENE VI. Rome. Caesar's house.

Enter CAESAR, AGRIPPA, and MECENAS.

Ca. Contemning Rome, he has done all this, and more.

In Alexandria: here's the manner of't:
I the market-place, on a tribunal silver'd,
Cleopatra and herself in chairs of gold
Were publicly enthroned: at the feet sat
Caesar, whom they call my father's son,
And all the unlawful issues that their lust
Since then hath made between them. Up to her
He gave the establishment of Egypt; made her

Of lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia,

Absolute queen.

Mec. This in the public eye!

Ces. 'Tis the common show-place, where they exercise.

His sons he there proclaim'd the kings of kings :
Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia,
He gave to Alexander; to Ptolemy he assign'd Syria, Cilicia, and Phenicia; she
In the habitments of the goddess Isis
That day appear'd; and oft before gave audience,
As 'tis reported, so.

Mec. Let Rome be thus Inform'd.

Ag. Who, queasy with his insolence, so
Already, will their good thoughts call from him.

Ces. The people know it; and have now received
His accusations.

Ag. Who does he accuse?

Ces. Caesar: and that, having in Sicily
Sextus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated him
His part o' the Isle: then does he say, he lent
me

Some shipping unreturned: lastly, he frets
That Lepidus of the triumvirate
Should be deposed; and, being, that we detain
All his revenue.

Ag. Sir, this should be answer'd. 30
Ces. 'Tis done already, and the messenger
gone.

I have told him, Lepidus was grown too cruel;
That he his high authority abused,
And did deserve his change: for what I have conquer'd,

I grant him part; but then, in his Armenia,
And other of his conquer'd kingdoms, I Demand the like.

Mec. He'll never yield to that.

Ces. Nor must not then be yielded to in this.

Enter OCTAVIA with her train.

Oct. Hail, Caesar, and my lord! hail, most dear Caesar!

Ces. That ever I should call thee castaway!

Oct. You have not call'd me so, nor have you cause. 47

Ces. Why have you sto'n upon us thus?
You come not

Like Caesar's sister: the wife of Antony
Should have an army for an usher, and
The neighs of horse to tell of her approach
Long ere she did appear; the trees by the way
Should have borne men; and expectation fainted,

Longing for what it had not; nay, the dust
Should have ascended to the roof of heaven, Rais'd by your populous troops: but you are
come 50

A market-maid to Rome; and have prevented
The ostentation of our love, which, left un-shown,

Is often left unloved: we should have met you
By sea and land; supplying every stage
With an augmented greeting.

Oct. Good sir—
To come thus was I not constrain'd,

On my free will. My lord, Mark Antony,
Hearing that you prepared for war, acquainted
My griev'd ear withal; whereon, I beg'd
His pardon for return.

Ces. Which soon he granted, so
Being an obstruct 'tween his lust and him.

Oct. Do not say so, my lord.

Ces. I have eyes upon him,
And his affairs come to me on the wind.
Where is he now?

Oct. My lord, in Athens.

Ces. No, my most wronged sister; Cleopatra Hath nodded him to her. He hath given his empire

Up to a whore; who now are levying
The kings o' the earth for war: he hath assembled

Bocchus, the king of Libya; Archelaus,
Of Cappadocia; Philadelphos, king
Of Paphlagonia; the Thracian king, Adallus;
King Malchus of Arabia; King of Pont;
Herod of Jewry; Mithridates, king
Of Comagene; Polemon and Amyntas,
The kings of Medes and Lycouia,
With a more larger list of sceptres.

Oct. Ay me, most wretched,
That have my heart parted betwixt two friends
That do afflict each other!

Ces. Welcome hither:
Your letters did withhold our breaking forth;
Till we perceived, both how you were wrong led, 80

And we in negligent danger. Cheer your
heart:

Be you not troubled with the time, which drives
O'er your content these strong necessities;
But let determined things to destiny
Hold unbewall'd their way. Welcome to Rome;

Nothing more dear to me. You are abused
Beyond the mark of thought; and the high
gods,

To do you justice, make them ministers
Of us and those that love you. Best of comfort;

And ever welcome to us.

Ag. Welcome, lady. 90
Mec. Welcome, dear madam.

Each heart in Rome does love and pity you:
Only the adulterous Antony, most large
In his abominations, turns you off;
And gives his potent regiment to a trull,
That noises it against us.

Oct. Is it so, sir?

Ces. Most certain. Sister, welcome; grieve

Be ever to patience: my dear sister

SCENE VII. Near Actium. Antony's camp.

Enter CLEOPATRA and ENOBARBUS.

Cleo. I will be even with thee, doubt it not.
Eno. Why, why, why?

Cleo. Hast thou some my being in them war,

And say it is not fit.
Eno. Well, is it, is it?

Cleo. If not denounced against us, why should not we be there in person?

Eno. [Aside] Well, I could reply: If we should serve with horse and mares to—

The horse were merely lost; the mares would bear
A soldier and his horse.

Cleo. What is't you say? 10
Eno. Your presence needs must puzzle Antony;

Take from his heart, take from his brain, from 's time,

What should not then be spared. He is already Traduced for levity; and 'tis said in Rome
That Photinus an eunuch and your maids
Manage this war.

Cleo. Sink Rome, and their tongues rot
That speak against us! A charge we bear i' the war,

And, as the president of my kingdom, will Appear there for a man. Speak not against it;
I will not stay behind.

Eno. Nay, I have done. 20
Here comes the emperor.

Enter ANTONY and CANIDIUS.

Ant. Is it not strange, Canidius,
That from Tarentum and Brundisium
He could so quickly cut the Ionian sea,
And take in Tomyne? You have heard on 't, sweet!

Cleo. Celerity is never more admired
Than by the negligent.

Ant. A good rebuke,
Which might have well become the best of
men.

To taunt at slackness. Canidius, we
Will fight with him by sea.

Cleo. By sea! what else!

Can. Why will my lord do so?

Ant. For that he dares us to 't.

Eno. So hath my lord dared him to single fight. 31

Can. Ay, and to wage this battle at Pharsalis.

Where Caesar fought with Pompey: but these offices,

Which serve not for his vantage, he shakes off;
And so should you.

Eno. Your ships are not well mann'd;
Your mariners are muleteers, reapers, people
Ingras'd by swift impress; in Caesar's fleet
Are those that often have gainst Pompey
fought:

Their ships are yare; yours, heavy: no disgrace
Shall fall you for refusing him at sea, 40
Being prepared for land.

Ant. By sea, by sea,
Eno. Most worthy sir, you therein throw away

The absolute soldieriahip you have by land;
Distract your army, which doth most consist
Of war-mark'd footmen; leave unexecuted
Your own renowned knowledge; quite forego
The way which promises assurance; and Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard,

From firm security.

Ant. I'll fight at sea. 40

Cleo. I have sixty sails, Caesar none better.

Ant. Our overplus of shipping will we burn;
And, with the rest full-mann'd, from the head of Actium

Beat the approaching Caesar. But if we fall,
We then can do't at land.

Enter a Messenger.

Thy business?
Mess. The news is true, my lord; he is descried;
Caesar has taken Tomyne.

Ant. Can he be there in person? 'tis impossible;
Strange that his power should be. Canidius,

Our nineteen legions thou shalt hold by land,
And our twelve thousand horse. We'll to our ship:

Away, my Thetis!

Enter a Soldier.

How now, worthy soldier! 60
Sold. O noble emperor, do not fight by sea;
Trust not to rotten planks; do you misdoubt
This sword and these my wounds! Let the Egyptians

And the Phenicians go a-ducking; we
Have used to conquer, standing on the earth,
And fighting foot to foot.

Ant. Well, well; away!
[Exeunt Antony, Cleopatra, and Enocharius.]

Sold. By Hercules, I think I am i' the right.
Can. Soldier, thou art; but his whole action grows

Not in the power on 't; so our leader's led, 70
And we are women's men.

Sold. You keep by land
The legions and the horse whole, do you not?

Can. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Junius,
Publicola, and Caelius, are for sea;
But we keep whole by land. This speed of Caesar's

Carries beyond belief.

Sold. While he was yet in Rome,
His power went out in such distractions as Beguiled all spies.

Can. Who's his lieutenant, hear you!

Sold. They say, one Taurus.

Can. Well I know the man.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The emperor calls Canidius. 80

Can. With news the time's with labour, and throes forth,
Each minute, some. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII. A plain near Actium.

Enter CESAR, and TAURUS, with his army, marching.

Ces. Taurus!

Taur. My lord!

Ces. Strike not by land; keep whole; provoke not battle,

Till we have done at sea. Do not exceed
The prescript of this scroll: our fortune lies
Upon this jump. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IX. Another part of the plain.Enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS.

Ant. Set we our squadrons on yond side o' the hill,
In eye of Cæsar's battle; from which place
We may the number of the ships behold,
And so proceed accordingly. [Exeunt.]

SCENE X. Another part of the plain.

CANIDIUS marcheth with his land army one way over the stage; and TAURUS, the lieutenant of CÆSAR, the other way. After their going in, is heard the noise of a sea-fight.

Alarum. Enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. Naught, naught, all naught! I can behold no longer:
The Antoniad, the Egyptian admiral,
With all their sixty, fly and turn the rudder:
To see't mine eyes are blasted.

Enter SCARUS.

Scar. Gods and goddesses,
All the whole synod of them!

Eno. What's thy passion?

Scar. The greater cantle of the world is lost
With very ignorance; we have kiss'd away
Kingdoms and provinces.

Eno. How appears the fight?

Scar. On our side like the token'd pestilence,
Where death is sure. Yon ribaudred nag of Whom leprosy o'ertake!—i' the midst o' the fight,

When vantage like a pair of twins appear'd,
Both as the same, or rather ours the elder,
The breeze upon her, like a cow in June,
Hoists sails and flies.

Eno. That I beheld:

Mine eyes did sicken at the sight, and could not Endure a further view.

Scar. She once being loof'd,

The noble ruin of her magic, Antony, Claps on his sea-wing, and, like a doting
mallard,

Leaving the fight in height, flies after her:

I never saw an action of such shame;
Experience, manhood, honour, ne'er before
Did violate so itself.

Eno. Alack, alack!Enter CANIDIUS.

Can. Our fortune on the sea is out of breath,
And sinks most lamentably. Had our general
Seen what he knew himself, it had gone well:
O, he has given example for our flight,
Most grossly, by his own!

Eno. Ay, are you thereabouts?
Why, then, good night indeed.

Can. Toward Peloponnesus are they fled.

Scar. 'Tis easy to't; and there I will attend
What further comes.

Can. To Cæsar will I render
My legions and my horse: six kings already Show me the way of yielding.

Eno.

I'll yet follow

The wounded chance of Antony, though my reason

Sits in the wind against me.

*[Exeunt.]*SCENE XI. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.Enter ANTONY with Attendants.

Ant. Hark! the land bids me tread no more upon't;

It is ashamed to bear me! Friends, come hither:

I am so lated in the world, that I
Have lost my way for ever: I have a ship
Laden with gold; take that, divide it; fly,
And make your peace with Cæsar.

All.

Fly! not we,

Ant. I have fled myself; and have instructed cowards

To run and show their shoulders. Friends, be gone;

I have myself resolved upon a course

Which has no need of you; be gone: 20

My treasure's in the harbour, take it. O,

I follow'd that I blush to look upon:

My very hairs do mutiny; for the white

Reprove the brown for rashness, and they them

For fear and doting. Friends, be gone: you shall

Have letters from me to some friends that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you, look not sad,

Nor make replies of loathness: take the hint

Which my despair proclaims; let that be left

Which leaves itself: to the sea-side straightway:

I will possess you of that ship and treasure: as

Leave me, I pray, a little: pray you now:

Nay, do so; for, indeed, I have lost command,

Therefore I pray you: I'll see you by and by.

[Sits down.]Enter CLEOPATRA led by CHARMIAN and IRAS; EOS following.

Eros. Nay, gentle madam, to him, comfort
him.

Iras. Do, most dear queen.Char. Do! why: what else!Cleo. Let me sit down. O June!Ant. No, no, no, no, no.Eros. See you here, sir!Ant. O fie, fie, fie!Char. Madam!Iras. Madam, O good empress!Eros. Sir, sir,—

Ant. Yes, my lord, yes; he at Philippi kept
His sword o'en like a dancer: while I struck
The lean and wrinkled Cæsius; and 'twas I
That the mad Brutus ended: he alone
Dealt on lieutenantry, and no practice had
In the brave squares of war: yet now—No matter.

Cleo. Ah, stand by.Eros. The queen, my lord, the queen.Iras. Go to him, madam, speak to him:

He is unqualified with very shame.

Cleo. Well then, sustain me: O!

Eros. Most noble sir, arise; the queen approaches;
Her head's declined, and death will seize her, but

Your comfort makes the rescue.

Ant. I have offended reputation,
A most unmovable swerving.

Eros. Sir, the queen. 50
Ant. O, whither hast thou led me, Egypt?
See,

How I convey my shame out of thine eyes
By looking back what I have left behind
Stor'd in dishonour.

Cleo. O my lord, my lord,
Forgive my fearful sails! I little thought
You would have follow'd.

Ant. Egypt, thou knew'st too well
My heart was to thy rudder tied by the strings,
And thou shouldst tow me after: o'er my spirit

Thy full supremacy thou knew'st, and that Thy beck might from the bidding of the gods Command me.

Cleo. O, my pardon!
Ant. Now I must 61
To the young man send humble treaties, dodge
And palter in the shifts of lowliness; who With half the bulk o' the world play'd as I pleased,

Making and marring fortunes. You did know
How much you were my conqueror; and that My sword, made weak by my affection, would Obey it on all cause.

Cleo. Pardon, pardon!
Ant. Fall not a tear, I say; one of them rates

All that is won and lost: give me a kiss; 70
Even this repays me. We sent our schoolmaster;

Is he come back? Love, I am full of lead.
Some wine, within there, and our viands!
Fortune knows

We scorn her most when most she offers blows.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE XII. Egypt. Caesar's camp.

Enter CAESAR, DOLABELLA, THYREUS, with others.

Caes. Let him appear that's come from Antony.
Know you him?

Dol. Caesar, 'tis his schoolmaster:
An argument that he is pluck'd, when hither
He sends so poor a pinion of his wing,
Which had superfluous kings for messengers
Not many moons gone by.

Enter EUPHORBUS, ambassador from
Antony.

Caes. Approach, and speak.
Euph. Such as I am, I come from Antony:
I was of late as petty to his ends

As is the mign-dew on the myrtle-leaf
To his greatness.

Caes. He's so; declare thine office. 10
Euph. Of his fortunes he salutes thee,
and

Requires to live in Egypt; which not granted,
He lessens his requests; and to thee sues
To let him breathe between the heavens and
earth,

A private man in Athens: this for him.
Next, Cleopatra does confess thy greatness;
Submits her to thy might; and of thee craves
The circle of the Ptolemies for her heirs,
Now hazarded to thy grace.

Caes. For Antony,
I have no ears to his request. The queen 20
Of audience nor desire shall fail; so she
From Egypt drive her all-disgraced friend,
Or take his life there: this if she perform,
She shall not sue unheard. So to them both.

Euph. Fortune pursue thee!
Caes. Bring him through the bands.

[Exit Euphronius.]
[To Thyreus] To try thy eloquence, now 'tis time: dispatch;

From Antony win Cleopatra: promise
And in our name, what she requires; add more,
From thine invention, offers: women are not In their best fortunes strong; but want will perjure

The ne'er-touch'd vestal: try thy cunning,
Thyreus;

Make thine own edict for thy pains, which we
Will answer as a law.

Thyr. Caesar, I go.
Caes. Observe how Antony becomes his slave,
And what thou think'st his very action speaks
In every power that moves.

Thyr. Caesar, I shall. [Exeunt.]

SCENE XIII. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus?

Eno. Think, and die.

Cleo. Is Antony or we in fault for this?

Eno. Antony only, that would make his
will

Lord of his reason. What though you fled From that great face of war, whose several ranges

Frighted each other? why should he follow?
The itch of his affection should not then
Have nick'd his captainship; at such a point,
When half to half the world opposed, he being
The meered question: 'twas a shame no less 10
Than was his loss, to course your flying flags,
And leave his navy gazing.

Cleo. Prithce, peace.

Enter ANTONY with EUPHORBUS, the Ambassador.

Ant. Is that his answer?

Euph. Ay, my lord.

Ant. The queen shall then have courtesy so she
Will yield us up.

Euph. He says so.

Ant. Let her know
To the boy Caesar send this grizzled beard.
And he will fill thy wishes to the brim.

With principalities.

Cleo. That head, my lord?

Ant. To him again: tell him he wears the rose

Of youth upon him; from which the world should note

Something particular: his coin, ships, legions,
May be a coward's; whose ministers would prevail

Under the service of a child as soon
As I the command of Caesar: I dare him therefore

To lay his gay comparisons apart,
And answer me declined, sword against sword,
Ourselves alone. I'll write it: follow me.

[Exeunt Antony and Euphrontius.]

Eno. [Aside] Yea, like enough, high-battled Caesar will

Unstate his happiness, and be staged to the show,

Against a sworder! I see men's judgements
are

A parcel of their fortunes; and things outward
Do draw the inward quality after them,

To suffer all alike. That he should dream,
Knowing all measures, the full Caesar will Answer his emptiness! Caesar, thou hast subdued

His judgement too.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. A messenger from Caesar.

Cleo. What, no more ceremony! See, my women!

Against the blown rose may they stop their nose
That kneel'd unto the buds. Admit him, sir.

[Exit Attendant.]

Eno. [Aside] Mine honesty and I begin to square,

The loyalty well held to fools does make
Or faith mere folly: yet he that can endure

To follow with allegiance a fall'n lord
Does conquer him that did his master conquer,

And earns a place i' the story.

Enter THYREUS.

Cleo. Caesar's will?

Thyr. Hear it apart.

Cleo. None but friends: say boldly.

Thyr. So, haply, are they friends to Antony.

Eno. He needs as many, sir, as Caesar has;
Or needs not us. If Caesar please, our master

Will leap to be his friend: for us, you know
Whose he is we are, and that is, Caesar's.

Thyr. So.

Thus then, thou most renown'd: Caesar entreates,

Not to consider in what case thou stand'st,
Further than he is Caesar.

Cleo. Go on: right royal.

Thyr. He knows that you embrace not
Antony

As you did love, but as you fear'd him.

Cleo. O!

Thyr. The scars upon your honour, therefore, he

Does pierce, as constrained blames, he
Not as deserved.

Cleo. He is a god, and knows What is most right: mine honour was not yielded,

But conquer'd merely.

Eno. [Aside] To be sure of that,
I will ask Antony. Sir, sir, thou art so leaky,

That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for Thy dearest quit thee. [Exit.]

Thyr. Shall I say to Caesar
What you require of him? for he partly begs

To be desired to give. It much would please
him,

That of his fortunes you should make a staff
To lean upon: but it would warm his spirits,

To hear from me you had left Antony,

† And put yourself under his shroud,
The universal landlord.

Cleo. What's your name?

Thyr. My name is Thyreus.

Cleo. Most kind messenger,
Say to great Caesar this: in deputation

I kiss his conquering hand: tell him, I am prompt

To lay my crown at's feet, and there to kneel:
Tell him, from his all-obeying breath I hear

The doom of Egypt.

Thyr. 'Tis your noblest course.
Wisdom and fortune combating together,

If that the former dare but what it can, so
No chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay

My duty on your hand.

Cleo. Your Caesar's father oft,
When he hath mused of taking kingdoms in,

Bestow'd his lips on that unworthy place,
As it rain'd kisses.

Re-enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS.

Ant. Favours, by Jove that thunders!
What art thou, fellow?

Thyr. One that but performs
The bidding of the fullest man, and worthiest

To have command obey'd.

Eno. [Aside] You will be whip'd.

Ant. Approach, there! Ah, you kite! Now, gods and devils!

Authority melts from me: of late, when I cried
'Ho!'

Like boys unto a muse, kings would start forth,
And cry 'Your will!' Have you no case? I am Antony yet.

Enter Attendants.

Take hence this Jack, and whip him.

Eno. [Aside] 'Tis better playing with a lion's whelp

Than with an old one dying.

Ant. Moon and stars!
Whip him. Were't twenty of the greatest tributaries

That do acknowledge Caesar, should I find them

So saucy with the hand of the here,—what's her name,

Since she was Cleopatra? Whip him, fellows,
Till, like a boy, you see him cringe his face, too

And whine aloud for mercy: take him hence.

Thyr. Mark Antony!

Ant. Tug him away!

Bring him again: this Jack of Ours

Bear us an errand to him.

[Exeunt Attendants with Thyreus.]
 You were half blasted ere I knew you: ha!
 Have I my pillow left unpress'd in Rome,
 Forbear the getting of a lawful race,
 And by a gem of women, to be abused
 By one that looks on feeders?

Cleo. Good my lord,—
Ant. You have been a boggler ever: 110
 But when we in our viciousness grow hard—
 O misery on't!—the wise gods seal our eyes;
 In our own filth drop our clear judgements;
 make us
 Adore our errors; laugh at's, while we strut
 To our confusion.

Cleo. O, is't come to this?
Ant. I found you as a morsel cold upon Dead Caesar's trencher; nay, you were a fragment
 Of Cneius Pompey's; besides what hotter hours, Unregister'd in vulgar fame, you have
 Luxuriously pick'd out: for, I am sure, 120
 Though you can guess what temperance should
 be,
 You know not what it is.

Cleo. Wherefore is this?
Ant. To let a fellow that will take rewards
 And say 'God quit you!' be familiar with My playfellow, your hand; this kingly seal
 And plighter of high hearts! O, that I were Upon the hill of Basan, to outstar
 The horned herd! for I have cause; cause;
 And to proclaim it civilly, were like
 A halter'd neck which does the hangman thank
 For being yare about him.

Re-enter Attendants with THYREUS.

Is he whipp'd? 131
First Att. Soundly, my lord.
Ant. Cried he? and begg'd a' pardon?
First Att. He did ask favour.
Ant. If that thy father live, let him repent
 Thou wast not made his daughter; and be thou
 sorry

To follow Caesar in his triumph, since Thou hast been whipp'd for following him:
 henceforth

The white hand of a lady fever thee,
 Shake thou to look on't. Get thee back to Caesar,
 Tell him thy entertainment: look, thou say 140
 He makes me angry with him; for he seems Proud and disdainful, harping on what I am,
 Not what he knew I was: he makes me angry;
 And at this time most easy 'tis to do't,
 When my good stars, that were my former guides,

Have empty left their orbs, and shot their fires
 Into the abyss of hell. If he mislike
 My speech and what is done, tell him he has Hippasus, my entranced bondman, whom
 He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
 As he shall like, to quit me: urge it thou: 151
 Hence with thy stripes, begone! [Exit Thyreus.]

Cleo. Have you done yet?
Ant. Alack, our terrene moon
 Is now eclipsed; and it portends alone
 The fall of Antony!

Cleo. I must stay his time.

Ant. To flatter Caesar, would you mingle
 eyes
 With one that ties his points?

Cleo. Not know me yet?

Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?
Cleo. Ah, dear, if I be so,
 From my cold heart let heaven engender hail,
 And poison it in the source; and the first stone
 Drop in my neck: as it determines, so 161
 Dissolve my life! The next Caesarion smite!
 Till by degrees the memory of my womb,
 Together with my brave Egyptians all,
 By the discarding of this pelleted storm,
 Lie graveless, till the flies and gnats of Nile
 Have buried them for prey!

Ant. I am satisfied.
 Caesar sits down in Alexandria; where
 I will oppose his fate. Our force by land
 Hath nobly held; our sever'd navy too 170
 Have knit again, and fleet, threatening most sea-like.

Where hast thou been, my heart? Dost thou hear, lady?

If from the field I shall return once more
 To kiss these lips, I will appear in blood;
 I and my sword will earn our chronicle:
 There's hope in't yet.

Cleo. That's my brave lord!
Ant. I will be treble-sinew'd, hearted, breathed,

And fight maliciously: for when mine hours
 Were nice and lucky, men did ransom lives: so
 Of me for jests; but now I'll set my teeth,
 And send to darkness all that stop me. Come,
 Let's have one other gaudy night: call to me
 All my sad captains; fill our bowls once more;
 Let's mock the midnight bell.

Cleo. It is my birth-day:
 I had thought to have held it poor; but, since
 my lord

Is Antony again, I will be Cleopatra.
Ant. We will yet do well.

Cleo. Call all his noble captains to my lord.
Ant. Do so, we'll speak to them; and tonight I'll force 190

The wine peep through their scars. Come on,
 my queen;

There's sap in't yet. The next time I do fight,
 I'll make death love me; for I will contend
 Even with his pestilent scythe.

[Exeunt all but Enobarbus.] Eno. Now he'll outstare the lightning. To be furious,

Is to be frightened out of fear; and in that mood
 The dove will peck the estridge; and I see still,
 A diminution in our captain's brain
 Restores his heart: when valour preys on reason,
 It eats the sword it fights with. I will seek 200
 Some way to leave him. [Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I. Before Alexandria. Caesar's camp.
Enter CESAR, AGRIPPA, and MENENAS, with his army; CESAR reading a letter.

Ces. He calls me boy and child; as he had power

To beat me out of Egypt; my messenger
He hath whipp'd with rods; dares me to personal combat,

Cæsar to Antony: let the old ruffian know
I have many other ways to die; meantime
Laugh at his challenge.

Mec. Cæsar must think,
When one so great begins to rage, he's hunted
Even to falling. Give him no breath, but now
Make boot of his distraction: never anger
Made good guard for itself.

Clea. Let our best heads
Know, that to-morrow the last of many battles
We mean to fight: within our files there are,
Of those that served Mark Antony but late,
Enough to fetch him in. See it done:
And feast the army; we have store to do't.
And they have earn'd the waste. Poor Antony!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

Enter ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, with others.

Ant. He will not fight with me, Domitius.

Eno. No.

Ant. Why should he not?

Eno. He thinks, being twenty times of better fortune,
He is twenty men to one.

Ant. To-morrow, soldier,
By sea and land I'll fight: or I will live,
Or bathe my dying honour in the blood
Shall make it live again. Woo't thou fight well?

Eno. I'll strike, and cry 'Take all.'

Ant. Well said; come on.
Call forth my household servants: let's to-night
Be bounteous at our meal.

Enter three or four Servitors.

Give me thy hand, so
Thou hast been rightly honest;—so hast thou;—
Thou,—and thou,—and thou;—you have served me well,

And kings have been your fellows.

Clea. [Aside to Eno.] What means this?

Eno. [Aside to Clea.] 'Tis one of those odd tricks which sorrow shoots
Out of the mind.

Ant. And thou art honest too.
I wish I could be made so many men,
And all of you clapp'd up together in An Antony, that I might do you service
So good as you have done.

All. The gods forbid!

Ant. Well, my good fellows, wait on me to-
night:
Scant not my cups; and make as much of me
As when mine empire was your fellow too,
And suffer'd my command.

Clea. [Aside to Eno.] What does he mean?

Eno. [Aside to Clea.] To make his followers
weep.

Ant. Tend me to-night;
May be it is the period of your duty:
Haply you shall not see me more; or if,
A mangled shadow: perchance to-morrow

'ou'll serve another master. I look on you
As one that takes his leave. Mine honest
friends,

turn you not away; but, like a master
Married to your good service, stay till death:
Tend me to-night two hours, I ask no more,
And the gods yield you for't!

Eno. What mean you, sir,
To give them this discomfort? Look, they
weep;

And I, an ass, am onion-eyed: for shame,
Transform us not to women.

Ant. Ho, ho, ho!
Now the witch take me, if I meant it thus!
Grace grow where those drops fall! My hearty
friends,

You take me in too dolorous a sense;
For I spake to you for your comfort; did desire
you

To burn this night with torches: know, my
hearts,

I hope well of to-morrow; and will lead you
Where rather I'll expect victorious life
Than death and honour. Let's to supper,

come,
And drown consideration. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. The same. Before the palace.

Enter two Soldiers to their guard.

First Sold. Brother, good night: to-morrow is the day.

Sec. Sold. It will determine one way: fare you well.

Heard you of nothing strange about the streets?

First Sold. Nothing. What news!

Sec. Sold. Belike 'tis but a rumour. Good night to you.

First Sold. Well, sir, good night.

Enter two other Soldiers.

Sec. Sold. Soldiers, have careful watch.

Third Sold. And you. Good night, good
night.

[They place themselves in every corner of the stage.]

Fourth Sold. Here we: and if to-morrow
Our navy thrive, I have an absolute hope so
Our landmen will stand up.

Third Sold. 'Tis a brave army,

And full of purpose.

[Music of the hautboys as under the stage.]

Fourth Sold. Peace! what noise!

First Sold. List, list!

Sec. Sold. Hark!

First Sold. Music! 'tis the air.

Third Sold. Under the earth.

Fourth Sold. It signs well, does it not?

Third Sold. No.

First Sold. Peace, I say!

What should this mean?

Sec. Sold. 'Tis the god Hercules, whom

Antony loved,

Now leaves him.

First Sold. Walk; let's see if other watch-

men

Do hear what we do.

[They advance to another post.]

Sec. Sold. How now, masters!
All. [Speaking together] How now!
 How now! do you hear this!

First Sold. Ay; is't not strange! so Third Sold. Do you hear, masters! do you hear!

First Sold. Follow the noise so far as we have quarter;
 Let's see how it will give off.

All. Content. 'Tis strange. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. The same. A room in the palace.
Enter ANTONY and CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, and others attending.

Ant. Eros! mine armour, Eros!
Cleo. Sleep a little.

Ant. No, my chuck. Eros, come; mine armour, Eros!

Enter EROS with armour.

Come, good fellow, put mine iron on:
 If fortune be not ours to-day, it is Because we brave her: come.

Cleo. Nay, I'll help too.
 What's this for?

Ant. Ah, let be, let be! thou art
 The armourer of my heart: false, false; this,
 this.

Cleo. Sooth, la, I'll help: thus it must be.
Ant. Well, well;

We shall thrive now. Seest thou, my good fellow!

Go put on thy defences.

Eros. Briefly, sir.
Cleo. Is not this buckled well!

Ant. Rarely, rarely:
 He that unbuckles this, till we do please

To daff't for our repose, shall hear a storm.
 Thou fumblest, Eros; and my queen's a squire

More tight at this than thou: dispatch. O
 love,

That thou couldst see my wars to-day, and knew'st

The royal occupation! thou shouldst see
 A workman in't.

Enter an armed Soldier.

Good morrow to thee; welcome:
 Thou look'st like him that knows a warlike charge:

To business that we love we rise betime,
 And go to't with delight.

Sold. A thousand, sir,
 Early though't be, have on their riveted trim,
 And at the port expect you.

[Shout. Trumpets flourish.]

Enter Captains and Soldiers.

Capt. The morn is fair. Good morrow,
 general.

Ant. Good morrow, general.
Ant. 'Tis well blown, lads:

This morning, like the spirit of a youth
 That means to be of note, begins betimes.

So; stem, give me that: this way; well
 said.

First, my dear dame, whatever becomes of me:

This is a soldier's kiss: rebutable [Times Arr.
 And worthy shameful check it were to stand
 On more mechanic compliment: I'll leave thee
 Now, like a man of steel. You that will fight, Follow me close; I'll bring you to't. Adieu.

[Exeunt Antony, Eros, Captains, and Soldiers.]

Char. Please you, retire to your chamber.
Cleo. Lead me.

He goes forth gallantly. That he and Caesar might

Determine this great war in single fight!
 Then, Antony,—but now—Well, on. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Alexandria. Antony's camp.

Trumpets sound. Enter ANTONY and EROS; a Soldier meeting them.

Sold. The gods make this a happy day to Antony!

Ant. Would thou and those thy scars had once prevail'd

To make me fight at land!

Sold. Hadst thou done so,
 The kings that have revolted, and the soldier
 That has this morning left thee, would have still

Follow'd thy heels.

Ant. Who's gone this morning?
Sold. Who!

One ever near thee: call for Enobarbus. Who!
 He shall not hear thee; or from Caesar's camp
 Say 'I am none of thine.'

Ant. What say'st thou?
Sold. Sir,

He is with Caesar.

Eros. Sir, his chests and treasure so
 He has not with him.

Ant. Is he gone?
Sold. Most certain.

Ant. Go, Eros, send his treasure after; do it;
 Detain no jot, I charge thee: write to him—
 I will subscribe—gentle adieus and greetings;
 Say that I wish he never find more cause
 To change a master. O, my fortunes have Corrupted honest men! Dispatch.—Enobarbus!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. Alexandria. Caesar's camp.

Flourish. Enter CAESAR, AGRIPPA, with ENOBARBUS, and others.

Caes. Go forth, Agrippa, and begin the fight:
 Our will is Antony be took alive;
 Make it so known.

Ag. Caesar, I shall.

Caes. The time of universal peace is near;
 Ere this a prosperous day, the three-mock'd
 world

Shall hear the olive freely.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Antony

Is come into the field.

Caes. Go charge Agrippa
 Plant those that have revolted in the van,
 That Antony may seem to spend his fury
 Upon himself. [Exeunt all but Enobarbus.]

Eno. Alexas did revolt; and went to Jewry
on
Ant. Affairs of Antony; there did persuade Great Herod to incline himself to Caesar,
 And leave his master Antony; for this pains
 Caesar hath hang'd him. Canidius and the rest
 That fell away had entertainment, but
 No honourable trust. I have done ill;
 Of which I do accuse myself so sorely,
 That I will joy no more.

Enter a Soldier of CÆSAR'S.

Sold. Enobarbus, Antony so
 Hath after thee sent all thy treasure, with His bounty overplus: the messenger
 Came on my guard; and at thy tent is now
 Unloading of his mules.

Eno. I give it you.

Sold. Mock not, Enobarbus.
 I tell you true: by you sated the bringer
 Out of the host; I must attend mine office,
 Or would have done't myself. Your emperor Continues still a Jove. [Exit.]

Eno. I am alone the villain of the earth, 30
 And feel I am so most. O Antony, Thou mine of bounty, how wouldst thou have paid
 My better service, when my turpitude Thou dost so crown with gold! This blows my
 heart:

If swift thought break it not, a swifter mean
 Shall outstrike thought: but thought will do't,
 I feel.

I fight against thee! No: I will go seek
 Some ditch wherein to die; the foul'st best fits
 My latter part of life. [Exit.] 39

SCENE VII. Field of battle between the camps.

Alarum. Drums and trumpets. Enter AGRIPPA and others.

Agri. Retire, we have engaged ourselves too far:
 Caesar himself has work, and our oppression
 Exceeds what we expected. [Recount.]

Alarums. Enter ANTONY, and SCARUS wounded.

Scar. O my brave emperor: this is fought indeed!
 Had we done so at first, we had droven them
 home
 With clouts about their heads.

Ant. Thou bleed'st apace.

Scar. I had a wound here that was like a T,
 But now 'tis made an H.

Ant. They do retire.

Scar. We'll beat 'em into bench-holes: I have yet
 Room for six scotches more.

Enter ENO.

Eno. They are beaten, sir; and our advantage serves
 For a fair victory.

Scar. Let us score their backs,
 And smother 'em up, as we take hares, behind:

'Tis sport to maul a runner.

Ant. I will reward thee
 Once for thy spritely comfort, and ten-fold
 For thy good valour. Come thee on.
Scar. I'll halt after. [Recount.]

SCENE VIII. Under the walls of Alexandria.

Alarum. Enter ANTONY, in a march; SCARUS, with others.

Ant. We have beat him to his camp: run on before,
 And let the queen know of our gasta. Tomorrow,
 Before the sun shall see 's, we'll spill the blood
 That has to-day escaped. I thank you all;
 For doughty-handed are you, and have fought
 Not as you served the cause, but as 's had been
 Each man's like mine; you have shown all Hector's.

Enter the city, clip your wives, your friends,
 Tell them your feats; whilst they with joyful
 tears
 Wash the congealment from your wounds, and kiss
 The honour'd gashes whole. [To SCARUS] Give me thy hand;

Enter CLEOPATRA, attended.

To this great fairy I'll commend thy acts,
 Make her thanks bless thee. [To Cleo.] O thou day o' the world,
 Chain mine arm'd neck; leap thou, attire and
 all,
 Through proof of harness to my heart, and
 there
 Ride on the pants triumphing!

Cleo. Lord of lords!
 O infinite virtue, comest thou smiling from
 The world's great snare uncaught!

Ant. My nightingale,
 We have beat them to their beds. What, girl!
 though grey
 Do something mingle with our younger brows, yet ha' we 30

A brain that nourishes our nerves, and can Get goal for goal of youth. Behold this man;
 Commend unto his lips thy favouring hand:
 Kiss it, my warrior: he hath fought to-day
 As if a god, in hate of mankind, had Destroy'd in such a shape.

Cleo. I'll give thee, friend,
 An armour all of gold; it was a king's.

Ant. He has deserved it, were it encased
 Like holy Phœbus' car. Give me thy hand:

Through Alexandria make a jolly march: 30
 Bear our back'd targets like the men that owe
 them:

Had our great palace the capacity
 To camp this host, we all would sup together,
 And drink carouses to the next day's fate,
 Which promises royal peril. Trumpeters,
 With brass din blast you the city's ear:
 Make mingle with our rattling tabernacles;
 That heaven and earth may strike their sounds

our approach. [Recount.] 39

SCENE IX. Cæsar's camp.

Sentinels at their post.

First Sold. If we be not relieved within this hour,
We must return to the court of guard: the night
Is shiny; and they say we shall embattle
By the second hour i' the morn.
Sec. Sold. This last day was
A shrewd one to 's.

Enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. O, bear me witness, night,—
Third Sold. What man is this?
Sec. Sold. Stand close, and list him.
Eno. Be witness to me, O thou blessed moon,
When men revolted shall upon record
Bear hateful memory, poor Enobarbus did Before thy face repent!
First Sold. Enobarbus!
Third Sold. Peace! 10
Hark further.

Eno. O sovereign mistress of true melancholy,
The poisonous damp of night disponge upon me,
That life, a very rebel to my will,
May hang no longer on me: throw my heart
Against the flint and hardness of my fault;
Which, being dried with grief, will break to powder,
And finish all foul thoughts. O Antony,
Nobler than my revolt is infamous,
Forgive me in thine own particular;
But let the world rank me in register
A master-leaver and a fugitive:
O Antony! O Antony! 15
Sec. Sold. Let's speak
To him.

First Sold. Let's hear him, for the things he speaks
May concern Cæsar.

Third Sold. Let's do so. But he sleeps.
First Sold. Swoons rather; for so bad a prayer as his

Was never yet for sleep.
Sec. Sold. Go we to him.

Third Sold. Awake, sir, awake: speak to us.
Sec. Sold. Hear you, sir!

First Sold. The hand of death hath raught him, [Drums afar off.] Hark! the drums
Demurely wake the sleepers. Let us bear him
To the court of guard; he is of note: our hour
Is fully out.

Third Sold. Come on, then;
He may recover yet. [Exeunt with the body.]

SCENE X. Between the two camps.

Enter ANTONY and SCARUS, with their Army.

Ant. Their preparation is to-day by sea;
We please them not by land.

Scar. For both, my lord.

Ant. I would they 'ld fight i' the fire or i' the
air;

We 'ld fight there too. But this it is; our foot
Upon the hills adjoining to the city
Shall stay with us: order for sea is given;
† They have put forth the haven...
Where their appointment we may best discover,
And look on their endeavour. [Exeunt. 9]

SCENE XI. Another part of the same.

Enter CÆSAR, and his Army.

Cæs. But being charged, we will be still by
land,
Which, as I take 't, we shall: for his best force
Is forth to man his galleys. To the vales,
And hold our best advantage. [Exeunt.]

SCENE XII. Another part of the same.

Enter ANTONY and SCARUS.

Ant. Yet they are not join'd: where yond pine does stand,
I shall discover all: I'll bring thee word
Straight, how 'tis like to go. [Exit.]
Scar. Swallows have built
In Cleopatra's sails their nests: the augurers Say they know not, they cannot tell; look grimly,
And dare not speak their knowledge. Antony
Is valiant, and dejected; and, by starts,
His fretted fortunes give him hope, and fear,
Of what he has, and has not.

[Alarum afar off, as at a sea-fight.]

Re-enter ANTONY.

Ant. All is lost;
This foul Egyptian hath betrayed me: 10
My fleet hath yielded to the foe; and yonder
They cast their caps up and carouse together
Like friends long lost. Triple-turn'd whore!
'tis thou
Hast sold me to this novice; and my heart
Makes only wars on thee. Bid them all fly;
For when I am revenged upon my charm,
I have done all. Bid them all fly; begone.

[Exit Scarus.]
O sun, thy uprise shall I see no more:
Fortune and Antony part here; even here
Do we shake hands. All come to this! The hearts. 20

That spaniel'd me at heels, to whom I gave
Their wishes, do discandy, melt their sweets
On blossoming Cæsar; and this pine is bark'd,
That overtopp'd them all. Betray'd I am:
O this false soul of Egypt! this grave charm,— Whose eye beck'd forth my wars, and call'd them home;

Whose bosom was my crownnet, my chief end,—
Like a right gipsy, hath, at fast and loose,
Bequiled me to the very heart of loss.
What, Eros, Eros!

Enter CLEOPATRA.

Ah, thou spell! Avaunt! 30
Clea. Why is my lord enraged against his love?

Ant. Vanish, or I shall give thee thy deserving.

And blench Caesar's triumph. Let him take thee.

And hoist thee up to the shouting plebeians:
Follow his chariot, like the greatest spot
Of all thy sex; most monster-like, be shown
For poor diminutives, for doits; and let Patient Octavia plough thy visage up
With her prepared nails. [Exit Cleopatra.]

'Tis well thou'rt gone,

If it be well to live: but better 'twere

Thou fell'st into my fury, for one death

Might have prevented many. Eros, ho!

The shirt of Nessus is upon me: teach me,

Alcides, thou mine ancestor, thy rage:

Let me lodge Lichas on the horns o' the moon;

And with those hands, that grasp'd the heaviest club,

Subdue my worsted self. The witch shall die:

To the young Roman boy she hath sold me,

and I fall

Under this plot; she dies for't. Eros, ho!

[Exit.]

SCENE XIII. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN.

Cleo. Help me, my women! O, he is more Than Telamon for his shield; the boar of Thessaly

Was never so embosom'd.

Char. To the monument!

There lock yourself, and send him word you are

dead.

The soul and body rive not more in parting

Than greatness going off.

Cleo. To the monument!

Mardian, go tell him I have slain myself;

Say, that the last I spoke was 'Antony';

And word it, prithee, piteously: hence, Mardian,

And bring me how he takes my death. To the monument! [Exeunt.]

SCENE XIV. The same. Another room.

Enter ANTONY and EROS.

Ant. Eros, thou yet behold'st me?

Eros. Ay, noble lord.

Ant. Sometime we see a cloud that's dra-gonish;

A vapour sometime like a bear or lion,

A tower'd citadel, a pendent rock,

A forked mountain, or blue promontory

With trees upon't, that nod unto the world,

And mock our eyes with air: thou hast seen

these signs;

They are black vespers' pageants.

Eros. Ay, my lord.

Ant. That which is now a horse, even with a thought

The rack dissolves, and makes it indistinct,

As water is in water.

Eros. It does, my lord.

Ant. My good knave Eros, now thy captain is Even such a body: here I am Antony;

Yet cannot hold this visible shape, my knave.

I made these wars for Egypt; and the queen,—

Whose heart I thought I had, for she had mine;

Which whilst it was mine had annex'd unto't

A million more, now lost,—she, Eros, has Pack'd cards with Caesar, and false-play'd my glory

Unto an enemy's triumph.

Nay, weep not, gentle Eros; there is left us

Ourselves to end ourselves.

Enter MARDIAN.

O, thy vile lady!

She has robb'd me of my sword.

Mar. No, Antony;

My mistress loved thee, and her fortunes mingled

With thine entirely.

Ant. Hence, saucy eunuch; peace!

She hath betray'd me and shall die the death.

Mar. Death of one person can be paid but

once,

And that she has discharged: what thou

wouldst do

Is done unto thy hand: the last she spake

Was 'Antony! most noble Antony!'

Then in the midst a tearing groan did break

The name of Antony; it was divided Between her heart and lips: she render'd life,

Thy name so buried in her.

Ant. Dead, then?

Mar. Dead.

Ant. Unarm, Eros; the long day's task is done,

And we must sleep. [To Mar.] That thou

depart'st hence safe,

Does pay thy labour richly; go.

[Exit Mardian.]

Off, pluck off:

The seven-fold shield of Ajax cannot keep

The battery from my heart. O, cleave, my sides!

Heart, once be stronger than thy continent,

Crack thy frail case! Apace, Eros, apace.

No more a soldier: bruised pieces, go;

You have been nobly borne. From me awhile.

[Exit Eros.]

I will o'ertake thee, Cleopatra, and Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now

All length is torture: since the torch is out,

Lie down, and stray no farther: now all labour

Mans what it does; yea, very forced entangles

Itself with strength: seal then, and all is done.

Eros!—I come, my queen!—Eros!—Stay for

me:

Where souls do couch on flowers, we'll hand in hand,

And with our sprightly port make the ghosts

gaze:

Dido and her Aeneas shall want troops,

And all the haunt be ours. Come, Eros, Eros!

Re-enter EROS.

Eros. What would my lord?

Ant. Since C

I have lived in such dishonour, that I can group

Detest my baseness. I, that with my sword

Quarter'd the world, and o'er great Neptune's

back

With ships made cities, condemn myself to lack
The courage of a woman; less noble mind
Than she which by her death our Caesar tells
'I am conqueror of myself.' Thou art sworn,

Eros.
That, when the exigent should come, which
now

Is come indeed, when I should see behind me
The inevitable prosecution of Disgrace and horror, that, on my command, Thou then wouldst kill me: do't; the time is

come:
Thou strik'st not me, 'tis Caesar thou defeat'st.
Put colour in thy cheek.

Eros. The gods withhold me!
Shall I do that which all the Parthian darts,
Though enemy, lost aim, and could not?

Ant. Eros, 71
Wouldst thou be window'd in great Rome and
see

Thy master thus with pleas'd arms, bending down

His corrigible neck, his face subdued
To penetrative shame, whilst the wheel'd seat
Of fortunate Caesar, drawn before him, branded
His baseness that ensu'd?

Eros. I would not see't.
Ant. Come, then; for with a wound I must be cured.

Draw that thy honest sword, which thou hast won
Most useful for thy country.

Eros. O, sir, pardon me! so Ant. When I did make thee free, swear'st thou not then

To do this when I bade thee? Do it at once;
Or thy precedent services are all
But accidents unpurposed. Draw, and come.

Eros. Turn from me, then, that noble countenance.

Wherein the worship of the whole world lies.
Ant. Lo thee! [Turning from him.]

Eros. My sword is drawn.
Ant. Then let it do at once

The thing why thou hast drawn it.
Eros. My dear master,

My captain, and my emperor, let me say, 90
Before I strike this bloody stroke, farewell.

Ant. 'Tis said, man; and farewell.
Eros. Farewell, great chief. Shall I strike

now?
Ant. Now, Eros.

Eros. Why, there then: thus I do escape the sorrow

Of Antony's death. [Kills himself.]

Ant. Thrice nobler than myself!
Thou teachest me, O valiant Eros, what I should, and thou couldst not. My queen and

Eros
Have by their brave instruction got upon
me

A nobleness in record; but I will be
A bridegroom in my death, and run into't 100
As to a lover's bed. Come, then; and, Eros,

My master lies thy scholar: so do thus [Falling on his sword.]

I would of this. How! not dead? not dead!
How! not dead? O, dispatch me!

Enter DERCETAS and Guard.

First Guard. What's the noise?
Ant. I have done my work ill, friends: O, make an end

Of what I have begun.

Sec. Guard. The star is fall'n.
First Guard. And time is at his period.

All. Alas, and woe!
Ant. Let him that loves me strike me dead.

First Guard. Not I.
Sec. Guard. Nor I.

Third Guard. Nor any one. 120
[Re-enter Guard.]

Der. Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers fly.

This sword but shewn to Caesar, with this tidings,
Shall enter me with him.

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. Where's Antony?
Der. There, Diomed, there.

Dio. Lives he!
Wilt thou not answer, man? [Exit Dercetas.]

Ant. Art thou there, Diomed? Draw thy sword, and give me

Sufficing strokes for death.
Dio. Most absolute lord,

My mistress Cleopatra sent me to thee.
Ant. When did she send thee?

Dio. Now, my lord.
Ant. Where is she?

Dio. Lock'd in her monument. She had a prophesying fear 120

Of what hath come to pass: for when she saw—
Which never shall be found—you did suspect

She had disposed with Caesar, and that your rage

Would not be purged, she sent you word she was dead;

But, fearing since how it might work, hath sent
Me to proclaim the truth; and I am come,

I dread, too late.
Ant. Too late, good Diomed: call my guard,

I prithee.
Dio. What, ho, the emperor's guard! The guard, what, ho!

Come, your lord calls! 130

Enter four or five of the Guard of ANTONY.

Ant. Bear me, good friends, where Cleopatra bides;

'Tis the last service that I shall command you.
First Guard. Woe, woe are we, sir, you may not live to wear

All your true followers out.

All. Most heavy day!
Ant. Nay, good my fellows, do not please sharp fate

To grace it with your sorrows: bid that welcome!

Which comes to punish us, and we punish it
Seeming to bear it lightly. Take me up:

I have led you off: carry me now, good friends,
And have my thanks for all. 140

[Re-enter, bearing Antony.]

SCENE XV. The same. A monument.

Enter CLEOPATRA, and her maids aloft, with CHARMIAN and IRAS.

Cleo. O Charmian, I will never go from hence.

Char. Be comforted, dear madam.

Cleo. No, I will not: All strange and terrible events are welcome, But comforts we despise; our size of sorrow, Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great As that which makes it.

Enter, below, DIOMEDES.

Dio. How now! is he dead? His death's upon him, but not dead. Look out o' the other side your monument; His guard have brought him thither.

Enter, below, ANTONY, borne by the Guard.

Cleo. O sun, Burn the great sphere thou movest in! darkling stand The varying shore o' the world. O Antony, Antony, Antony! Help, Charmian, help, Iras, help; Help, friends below; let's draw him hither.

Ant. Peace! Not Caesar's valour hath o'erthrown Antony, But Antony's hath triumph'd on itself.

Cleo. So it should be, that none but Antony Should conquer Antony; but woe 'tis so!

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying; only I here importune death awhile, until (If many thousand kisses the poor last I lay upon thy lips.

Cleo. I dare not, dear,— Dear my lord, pardon,—I dare not, Lest I be taken: not the imperious show Of the full-fortuned Caesar ever shall Be brooch'd with me; if knife, drugs, serpents, have Edge, sting, or operation, I am safe: Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes And still conclusion, shall acquire no honour Daming upon me. But come, come, Antony,—

Help me, my women,—we must draw thee up: Assist, good friends.

Ant. O, quick, or I am gone. Cleo. Here's sport indeed! How heavy weighs my lord!

Our strength is all gone into heaviness, That makes the weight; had I great Juno's power,

The strong-wing'd Mercury should fetch thee up, And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a little.— Wishes were ever fools.—O, come, come, come;

[They heave Antony aloft to Cleopatra.] And welcome, welcome! die where thou hast liv'd:

Quicken with kissing: had my lips that power, Thus would I wear them out.

Ant. A heavy night! Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying:

Give me some wine, and let me speak a little. Cleo. No, let me speak; and let me rail so high,

That the false housewife Fortune break her wheel.

Ant. Provoked by my offences. One word, sweet queen: Of Caesar seek your honour, with your safety.

O! Cleo. They do not go together.

Ant. Gentle, hear me: None about Caesar trust but Proculeius.

Cleo. My resolution and my hands I'll trust; None about Caesar.

Ant. The miserable change now at my end Lament nor sorrow at; but please your thoughts

In feeding them with those my former fortunes Wherein I liv'd, the greatest prince of the world.

The noblest; and do now not basely die, Not cowardly put off my helmet to My countryman,—a Roman by a Roman Valiantly vanquish'd. Now my spirit is going; I can no more.

Cleo. Noblest of men, woo't die! Hast thou no care of me? shall I abide

In this dull world, which in thy absence is No better than a sty? O, see, my women,

The crown o' the earth doth melt. My lord! O, wither'd is the garland of the war,

The soldier's pole is fall'n: young boys and girls Are level now with men; the odds is gone, And there is nothing left remarkable

Beneath the visiting moon. [Points.]

Char. O, quietness, lady! Ir. She is dead too, our sovereign.

Char. Lady! Ir. Madam! Char. O madam, madam, madam!

Ir. Royal Egypt, to Empress!

Char. Peace, peace, Iras! Cleo. No more, but e'en a woman, and commanded

By such poor passion as the maid that milks And does the meanest chares. It were for me To throw my sceptre at the injurious gods;

To tell them that this world did equal them Till they had sto'n our jewel. All's but naught; Patience is scotish, and impatience does

Become a dog that's mad: then is it sin To rush into the secret house of death,

Ere death dare come to us! How do you, women?

What, what! good cheer! Why, how now, Charmian?

My noble girls! Ah, women, women, look, Our lamp is spent, it's out! Good girls, take heart:

We'll bury him; and then, what's brave, what's

Let's do it after the high Roman fashion, And make death proud to take us. Come, away:

This case of that huge spirit now is cold: Ah, women, women! come; we have no friend

But resolution, and the traitor dead. [Sings; then above her voice.]

[Sings; then above her voice.]

[Sings; then above her voice.]

ACT V.

SCENE I. Alexandria. Caesar's camp.

Enter CESAR, AGRIPPA DOLABELLA, PROCULIUS, GALLUS, PROULEIUS, and others, his council of war.

Ces. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield; Being so frustrate, tell him he mocks The pauses that he makes.

Dol. Caesar, I shall. [Exit.]

Enter DERCETAS, with the sword of ANTONY.

Ces. Wherefore is that? and what art thou that darest

Appear thus to us?

Der. I am call'd Dercetas; Mark Antony I served, who best was worthy Best to be served: whilst he stood up and spoke, He was my master; and I wore my life To spend upon his haters. If thou please To take me to thee, as I was to him 10 I'll be to Caesar; if thou pleasest not, I yield thee up my life.

Ces. What is't thou say'st?

Der. I say, O Caesar, Antony is dead.

Ces. The breaking of so great a thing should make

A greater crack: †the round world Should have shook lions into civil streets, And citizens to their dens: the death of Antony

Is not a single doom; in the name lay A moiety of the world.

Der. He is dead, Caesar; Not by a public minister of justice, Nor by a hired knife; but that self hand, 20 Which writ his honour in the acts it did, Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it, Splitted the heart. This is his sword; I robb'd his wound of it; behold it stain'd With his most noble blood.

Ces. Look you sad, friends? The gods rebuke me, but it is tidings To wash the eyes of kings.

Agp. And strange it is, That nature must compel us to lament Our most persisted deeds.

Mec. His taints and honours 30 Waged equal with him.

Agp. A rarer spirit never Did steer humanity: but you, gods, will give us Some faults to make us men. Caesar is touch'd.

Mec. When such a spacious mirror's set before him, He needs must see himself.

Ces. O Antony! I have follow'd thee to this; but we do lance Diseases in our bodies: I must perforce Have shown to thee such a declining day, Or look on thine; we could not stall together In the whole world: but yet let me lament, 40 With tears as sovereign as the blood of hearts, That thou, my brother, my competitor In all designs, my mate in empire, My partner in the front of war, Myself in mine own body, and the heart

Where mine his thoughts did kindle,—that our stars,

Unreconcilable, should divide Our equalness to this. Hear me, good friends,— But I will tell you at some meetest season:

Enter an Egyptian.

The business of this man looks out of him; 30 We'll hear him what he says. Whence are you?

Egypt. A poor Egyptian yet. The queen my mistress,

Confined in all she has, her monument, Of thy intents desires instruction, That she preparedly may frame herself To the way she's forced to.

Ces. Bid her have good heart: She soon shall know of us, by some of ours, How honourable and how kindly we Determine for her; for Caesar cannot live To be ungentle.

Egypt. So the gods preserve thee! [Exit. 60

Ces. Come hither, Proculeius. Go and say, We purpose her no shame: give her what comforts

The quality of her passion shall require, Lest, in her greatness, by some mortal stroke She do defeat us; for her life in Rome Would be eternal in our triumph: go, And with your speediest bring us what she says,

And how you find of her.

Pro. Caesar, I shall. [Exit. 70

Ces. Gallus, go you along. [Exit Gallus.]

Where's Dolabella?

To second Proculeius!

All. Dolabella!

Ces. Let him alone, for I remember now How he's employ'd: he shall in time be ready. Go with me to my tent; where you shall see How hardly I was drawn into this war; How calm and gentle I proceeded still In all my writings: go with me, and see What I can show in this. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Alexandria. A room in the monument.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

Cleo. My desolation does begin to make A better life. 'Tis paltry to be Caesar; Not being Fortune, he's but Fortune's knave, A minister of her will: and it is great To do that thing that ends all other deeds; Which shackles accidents and bolts up change; Which sleeps, and never palates more the dug, The beggar's nurse and Caesar's.

Enter, to the gates of the monument, PROCULIUS, GALLUS, and Soldiers.

Pro. Caesar sends greeting to the Queen of

And bids thee study on what fair demands 20 Thou mean'st to have him grant thee.

Cleo. What's thy name?

Pro. My name is Proculeius.

Cleo. Antony Did tell me of you, bade me trust you; but I do not greatly care to be deceived,

That have no use for trusting. If your master
Would have a queen his beggar, you must tell
him.

That majesty, to keep decorum, must
No less beg than a kingdom: if he please
To give me conquer'd Egypt for my son,
He gives me so much of mine own, as I
Will kneel to him with thanks.

Pro. Be of good cheer;
You're fall'n into a princely hand, fear nothing:
Make your full reference freely to my lord,
Who is so full of grace, that it flows over
On all that need: let me report to him
Your sweet dependency; and you shall find
A conqueror that will pray in aid for kindness,
Where he for grace is kneel'd to.

Cleo. Pray you, tell him
I am his fortune's vassal, and I send him
The greatness he has got. I hourly learn
A doctrine of obedience; and would gladly
Look him i' the face.

Pro. This I'll report, dear lady.
Have comfort, for I know your plight is pitied
Of him that caused it.

Gal. You see how easily she may be surprised:
[Here Proculeius and two of the Guard ascend the monument by a ladder placed against a window, and, having descended, come behind Cleopatra. Some of the Guard unbar and open the gates.]
[To Proculeius and the Guard] Guard her till Cesar come. [Exit.

Iras. Royal queen!

Char. O Cleopatra! thou art taken, queen.

Cleo. Quick, quick, good hands.

[Drawing a dagger.
Pro. Hold, worthy lady, hold:
[Seizes and disarms her.]

Do not yourself such wrong, who are in this Relieved, but not betray'd.

Cleo. What, of death too,
That rides our dogs of languish!

Pro. Cleopatra,
Do not abuse my master's bounty by
The undoing of yourself: let the world see
His nobleness well acted, which your death
Will never let come forth.

Cleo. Where art thou, death?
Come hither, come! come, come, and take a

Worth many babes and beggars!

Pro. O, temperance, lady!
Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat, I'll not drink,
sir;

If idle talk will once be necessary,
I'll not sleep neither: this mortal house I'll ruin,

Do Caesar what he can. Know, sir, that I
Will not wait pinion'd at your master's court;
Nor once be chastised with the sober eye
Of dull Octavia. Shall they holst me up

And show me to the shouting variety
Of censuring Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt

Be gentle grave unto me! rather on Nilus' mud
Lay me stark naked, and let the water-flies Blow me into abhorring! rather make

My country's high pyramids my gibbet, 60

And hang me up in chains!

Pro. You do extend
These thoughts of horror further than you shall Find cause in Caesar.

Enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. Proculeius,
What thou hast done thy master Caesar knows,
And he hath sent for thee: for the queen,
I'll take her to my guard.

Pro. So, Dolabella,
It shall content me best: be gentle to her.
[To Cleo.] To Caesar I will speak what you shall please,

If you'll employ me to him.

Cleo. Say, I would die. 70
[Exeunt Proculeius and Soldiers.]
Dol. Most noble empress, you have heard of me!

Cleo. I cannot tell.

Dol. Assuredly you know me.

Cleo. No matter, sir, what I have heard or known.

You laugh when boys or women tell their dreams;

Is't not your trick?

Dol. I understand not, madam.

Cleo. I dream'd there was an Emperor
Antony:

O, such another sleep, that I might see

But such another man!

Dol. If it might please ye,—

Cleo. His face was as the heavens; and therein stuck

A sun and moon, which kept their course, and lighted 80

The little O, the earth.

Dol. Most sovereign creature,—

Cleo. His legs bestrid the ocean: his rear'd arm

Crested the world: his voice was property'd
As all the tuned spheres, and that to friends;

But when he meant to quail and shake the orb,
He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty,

There was no winter in't; an autumn 'twas
That grew the more by reaping: his delights

Were dolphin-like; they show'd his back above
The element they lived in: in his livery 90

Walk'd crows and crownets; realms and islands were

As plates dropp'd from his pocket.

Dol. Cleopatra!

Cleo. Think you there was, or might be, such a man

As this I dream'd of?

Dol. Gentle madam, no.

Cleo. You lie, up to the hearing of the gods.

But, if there be, or ever were, one such,
It's past the size of dreaming: nature wants

stuff

To vie strange forms with fancy; yet, to imagine

An Antony, were nature's piece 'gainst fancy, Condemning shadows quite.

Dol. Hear me, good madam, 100

Your loss is as yourself, great; and you bear it
As answering to the weight: would I might

never

O'ertake pursued success, but I do feel,
By the rebound of yours, a grief that smites
My very heart at root.

Cleo. I thank you, sir.
Know you what Caesar means to do with me?

Dol. I am loath to tell you what I would you knew.

Cleo. Nay, pray you, sir,—
Dol. Though he be honourable,—

Cleo. He'll lead me, then, in triumph?

Dol. Madam, he will; I know't. 110 [Flourish, and shout within. 'Make way
there: Caesar!']

Enter CESAR, GALLUS, PROCULEIUS, MECE-NAS, SELEUCUS, and others of his train.

Ces. Which is the Queen of Egypt?

Dol. It is the emperor, madam. [Cleopatra kneels.]

Ces. Arise, you shall not kneel:

I pray you, rise; rise, Egypt.

Cleo. Sir, the gods
Will have it thus; my master and my lord
I must obey.

Ces. Take to you no hard thoughts:
The record of what injuries you did us,
Though written in our flesh, we shall remember
As things but done by chance.

Cleo. Sole sir o' the world,
I cannot project mine own cause so well 121
To make it clear; but do confess I have Been laden with like frailties which before
Have often shamed our sex.

Ces. Cleopatra, know,
We will extenuate rather than enforce:
If you apply yourself to our intents,
Which towards you are most gentle, you shall find

A benefit in this change; but if you seek
To lay on me a cruelty, by taking Antony's course, you shall bereave yourself 130
Of my good purposes, and put your children
To that destruction which I'll guard them from,
If thereon you rely. I'll take my leave.

Cleo. And may, through all the world: 'tis yours; and we,
Your acutcheons and your signs of conquest,
shall

Hang in what place you please. Here, my good lord.

Ces. You shall advise me in all for Cleopatra.

Cleo. This is the brief of money, plate, and jewels.

I am possess'd of: 'tis exactly valued;
Not petty things admitted. Where's Seleucus?

See. Here, madam. 141

Cleo. This is my treasurer: let him speak,

What his peril, that I have reserved
To myself nothing. Speak the truth, Seleucus.

See. Madam,
I had rather seal my lips, than, to my peril,
Speak that which is not.

Cleo. What have I kept back?

See. Enough to purchase what you have made known.

Ces. Nay, which not, Cleopatra; I approve
Your wisdom in the deed.

Cleo. See, Caesar! O, L—
How pomp is fellow'd! mine will now be yours,
And, should we shift estates, yours would be
mine.

The ingratitude of this Seleucus does
Even make me wild: O slave, of no more trust
Than love that's hired! What, goest thou back! thou shalt

Go back, I warrant thee; but I'll catch thine
eyes.

Though they had wings: slave, soulless villain,
dog!

O rarely base!

Ces. Good queen, let us entreat you.
Cleo. O Caesar, what a wounding shame is
this,

That thou, vouchsafing here to visit me, 150
Doing the honour of thy lordliness

To one so meek, that mine own servant should Parcel the sum of my disgraces by

Addition of his envy! Say, good Caesar,
That I some lady trifles have reserved,

Immement toys, things of such dignity
As we greet modern friends withal; and say,

Some nobler token I have kept apart
For Livia and Octavia, to induce

Their mediation; must I be unfolded 170
With one that I have bred! The gods! it smites me

Beneath the fall I have. [To Seleucus] Prithce, go hence;

Or I shall show the cinders of my spirits
Through the ashes of my chance: wert thou

a man,
Thou wouldst have mercy on me.

Ces. Forbear, Seleucus.
[Exit Seleucus.]

Cleo. Be it known, that we, the greatest, are unthought

For things that others do; and, when we fall,
We answer others' merits in our name,

Are therefore to be pitied.

Ces. Cleopatra,
Not what you have reserved, nor what acknowledged, 180

Put we! the roll of conquest: still he's yours,
Bestow it at your pleasure; and believe,

Caesar's no merchant, to make prize with you
Of things that merchants sold. Therefore be cheer'd;

Make not your thoughts your prisons: no, dear
queen;

For we intend so to dispose you as Yourself shall give us counsel. Feed, and sleep:

Our care and pity is so much upon you,
That we remain your friend; and so, adieu.

Cleo. My master, and my lord!

Ces. Not so. Adieu.
[Flourish. Exit Caesar and his train.]

Cleo. He words me, girls, he words me, that I should not

Be noble to myself: but, hark thee, Charmian.
[Whisper Charmian.]

Ira. Finish, good lady; the bright day is done,

And we are for the dark.

Cleo. His thee again:
I have spoke already, and is is provided;

Go put it to the hasts.

Char.

Madam, I will.

Re-enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. Where is the queen?

Char.

Behold, sir. [Exit.]

Dolabella!

Dol. Madam, as thereto sworn by your command,

Which my love makes religion to obey,
I tell you this: Caesar through Syria
Intends his journey; and within three days
You with your children will he send before:
Make your best use of this: I have perform'd
Your pleasure and my promise.

Cleo.

I shall remain your debtor. Dolabella,

Dol.

I your servant.

Adieu, good queen; I must attend on Caesar.

Cleo. Farewell, and thanks. [Exit Dolabella.]

Now, Iras, what think'st thou?
Thou, an Egyptian puppet, shalt be shown
In Rome, as well as I: mechanic slaves
With greasy aprons, rules, and hammers, shall Uplift us to the view; in their thick breaths,
Rank of gross diet, shall we be enclouded,
And forced to drink their vapour.

Iras.

The gods forbid!

Cleo. Nay, 'tis most certain, Iras: saucy lictors

Will catch at us, like strumpets; and scald rhymers

Ballad us out o' tune: the quick comedians,
Extemporally will stage us, and present
Our Alexandrian revels; Antony
Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see
Some squeaking Cleopatra boy my greatness
I' the posture of a whore.

Iras.

O the good gods!

Cleo. Nay, that's certain.

Iras. I'll never see't; for, I am sure, my nails

Are stronger than mine eyes.

Cleo.

Why, that's the way

To fool their preparation, and to conquer
Their most absurd intents.

Re-enter CHARMIAN.

Now, Charmian!

Show me, my women, like a queen: go fetch
My best attires: I am again for Cydnus,
To meet Mark Antony: sirrah Iras, go.
Now, noble Charmian, we'll dispatch indeed;
And, when thou hast done this chare, I'll give thee leave

To play till doomsday. Bring our crown and all.
Wherefore's this noise?

[Exit Iras. A noise within.]

Enter a Guardsman.

Guard.

Here is a rural fellow

That will not be denied your highness's presence
He brings you figs.

Cleo. Let him come in. [Exit Guardsman.]

What poor an instrument
May do a noble deed! he brings me liberty.
My resolution's plac'd, and I have nothing
Of woman in me: now from head to foot

am marble-constant; now the fleeting moon
No planet is of mine.

Re-enter Guardsman, with Clown bringing in a basket.

Guard.

This is the man.

241

Cleo. Avoid, and leave him.

[Exit Guardsman.]

Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus there,
That kills and pains not?

Clown. Truly, I have him; but I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortal; those that do die of it do seldom or never recover.

Cleo. Rememberest thou any that have died on't?

249

Clown. Very many, men and women too. I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday:
a very honest woman, but something given to lie; as a woman should not do, but in the way of honesty: how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt: truly, she makes a very good report o' the worm; but he that will believe all that they say, shall never be saved by half that they do: but this is most fallible, the worm's an odd worm.

Cleo. Get thee hence; farewell.

260

Clown. I wish you all joy of the worm.
[Setting down his basket.]

Cleo. Farewell.

Clown. You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind.

Cleo. Ay, ay; farewell.

Clown. Look you, the worm is not to be trusted but in the keeping of wise people; for, indeed, there is no goodness in the worm.

Cleo. Take thou no care; it shall be heeded.

Clown. Very good. Give it nothing, I say you, for it is not worth the feeding.

271

Cleo. Will it eat me?

Clown. You must not think I am so simple but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman: I know that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dress her not. But, truly, these same whorson devils do the gods great harm in their women; for in every ten that they make, the devils mar five.

Cleo. Well, get thee gone; farewell.

280

Clown. Yes, forsooth: I wish you joy o'
the worm. [Exit.]

Re-enter IRAS with a robe, crown, &c.

Cleo. Give me my robe, put on my crown;
I have

Immortal longings in me: now no more
The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this lip:
Yare, yare, good Iras; quick. Methinks I hear
Antony call; I see him rouse himself

To praise my noble act; I hear him mock
The luck of Caesar, which the gods give men

To excuse their after wrath: husband, I come;
Now to that name my courage prove my title!

I am fire and air; my other elements
I give to base life. So; have you done?

Come then, and take the last warmth of my lip.
Farewell, kind Charmian! Iras, long farewell.

[Kisses them. Iras falls and dies.]

Have I the apple in my lips? Don't fall!

If thou and nature can so gently part,
The stroke of death is as a lover's pinch,
Which hurts, and is desired. Dost thou lie still!

If thus thou vanishest, thou tell'st the world
It is not worth leave-taking.

Char. Dissolve, thick cloud, and rain; that I may say,
The gods themselves do weep!

Cleo. This proves me base:
If she first meet the curled Antony,
He'll make demand of her, and spend that kiss
Which is my heaven to have. Come, thou mortal wretch,

[To an asp, which she applies to her breast.
With thy sharp teeth this knot intrinsicate
Of life at once untie: poor venomous fool,
Be angry, and dispatch. O, couldst thou speak,
That I might hear thee call great Caesar ass Unpolitic!

Char. O eastern star!
Cleo. Peace, peace!

Dost thou not see my baby at my breast,
That sucks the nurse asleep!

Char. O, break! O, break!
Cleo. As sweet as balm, as soft as air, as gentle—

O Antony!—Nay, I will take thee too; [Applying another asp to her arm.

What should I stay—
Char. In this vile world? So, fare thee well.
Now boast thee, death, in thy possession lies
A lass unparallel'd. Downy windows, close;
And golden Phœbus never be beheld
Of eyes again so royal! Your crown's awry;
I'll mend it, and then play.

Enter the Guard, rushing in.

First Guard. Where is the queen?
Char. Speak softly, wake her not.

First Guard. Caesar hath sent—Char. Too slow a messenger.

[Applies an asp.
O, come apace, dispatch! I partly feel thee.

First Guard. Approach, ho! All's not well: Caesar's beguiled.

Sec. Guard. There's Dolabella sent from Caesar; call him.

First Guard. What work is here! Charmian, is this well done!

Char. It is well done, and fitting for a princess Descended of so many royal kings.

Ah, soldier!
[Dies.

Re-enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. How goes it here?

Sec. Guard. All dead.
Dol. Caesar, thy thoughts

Touch their effects in this: thyself art coming
To see perform'd the dreaded act which thou
So sought'st to hinder.

[Within 'A way there, a way for Caesar!'
Re-enter CAESAR and all his train, marching.

Dol. O sir, you are too sure an augurer;
That you did fear is done.

Ces. Bravest at the last,
She levell'd at our purposes, and, being royal,
Took her own way. The manner of their deaths

I do not see them bleed.

Dol. Who was last with them?
First Guard. A simple countryman, that brought her figs:

This was his basket.

Ces. Poison'd, then.
First Guard. O Caesar,

This Charmian lived but now; she stood and spake:

I found her trimming up the diadem
On her dead mistress; tremblingly she stood
And on the sudden dropp'd.

Ces. O noble weakness!
If they had swallow'd poison, 'twould appear
By external swelling: but she looks like sleep,
As she would catch another Antony
In her strong toil of grace.

Dol. Here, on her breast,
There is a vent of blood and something blown:
The like is on her arm.

First Guard. This is an asp's trail: and these fig-leaves
Have a line upon them, such as the asp leaves
Upon the caves of Nile.

Ces. Most probable
That so she died; for her physician tells me
She hath pursued conclusions infinite
Of easy ways to die. Take up her bed;
And bear her women from the monument:
She shall be buried by her Antony;

No grave upon the earth shall clip in it
A pair so famous. High events as these Strike those that make them; and their story is No less in pity than his glory which Brought them to be lamented. Our army shall
In solemn show attend this funeral;
And then to Rome. Come, Dolabella, see
High order in this great solemnity. [Exeunt.

Apparitions.

SCENE: Britain; Rome.

ACT I.

SCENE I. Britain. The garden of Cymbeline's palace.

Enter two Gentlemen.

First Gent. You do not meet a man but frowns: our bloods No more obey the heavens than our courtiers Still seem as does the king.

Sec. Gent. But what's the matter?

First Gent. His daughter, and the heir of 's kingdom, whom

He purposed to his wife's sole son—a widow That late he married—hath referr'd herself Unto a poor but worthy gentleman: she's wedded;

Her husband banish'd; she imprison'd: all is outward sorrow; though I think the king Be touch'd at very heart.

Sec. Gent. None but the king? so

First Gent. He that hath lost her too; so is the queen,

That most desired the match; but not a courtier,

Although they wear their faces to the bent Of the king's looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.

Sec. Gent. And why so?

First Gent. He that hath mis'd the princess is a thing

Too bad for bad report: and he that hath her—I mean, that married her, alack, good man!

And therefore banish'd—is a creature such

As, to seek through the regions of the earth, so For one his like, there would be something failing

In him that should compare. I do not think So fair an outward and such stuff within Endows a man but he.

Sec. Gent. You speak him far.

First Gent. I do extend him, sir, within himself,

Crush him together rather than unfold His measure duly.

Sec. Gent. What's his name and birth?

First Gent. I cannot delve him to the root: his father

Was called Sicilius, who did join his honour Against the Romans with Cassibelan,

But had his titles by Temantius whom He served with glory and admired success,

So gain'd the sur-addition Leonatus; And had, besides this gentleman in question,

Two other sons, who in the wars o' the time Died with their swords in hand; for which their father,

Then old and fond of issue, took such sorrow That he quit being, and his gentle lady,

Big of this gentleman our theme, deceased As he was born. The king he takes the babe

To his protection, calls him Posthumus Leonatus,

Breeds him and makes him of his bed-chamber, Puts to him all the learnings that his time

Could make him the receiver of; which he took, As we do sir, fast as 'twas minister'd,

And in 's spring became a harvest, lived in court—

Which rare it is to do—most praised, most loved,

A sample to the youngest, to the more mature
A glass that fented them, and to the graver 49
A child that guided dotards; to his mistress,
For whom he now is banish'd, her own price
Proclaims how she esteem'd him and his virtue;
By her election may be truly read
What kind of man he is.

Sec. Gent. I honour him
Even out of your report. But, pray you, tell me,
Is she sole child to the king?

First Gent. His only child.
He had two sons: if this be worth your hearing,
Mark it: the eldest of them at three years old,
I' the swathing-clothes the other, from their nursery

Were stol'n, and to this hour no guess in knowledge 60

Which way they went.

Sec. Gent. How long is this age?

First Gent. Some twenty years.

Sec. Gent. That a king's children should be so convey'd,

So slackly guarded, and the search so slow,
That could not trace them!

First Gent. Howsoe'er 'tis strange,
Or that the negligence may well be laugh'd at,
Yet is it true, sir.

Sec. Gent. I do well believe you.

First Gent. We must forbear: here comes the gentleman,

The queen, and princess. [Exeunt.]

Enter the QUEEN, POSTHUMUS, and IMOGEN.

Queen. No, be assured you shall not find me, daughter, 70

After the slander of most stepmothers,
Evil-eyed unto you: you're my prisoner, but
Your gaoler shall deliver you the keys
That lock up your restraint. For you, Posthumus,

as I can win the offended king,
I will be known your advocate: marry, yet
The fire of rage is in him, and 'twere good
You lean'd unto his sentence with what patience
Your wisdom may inform you.

Post. Please your highness,
I will from hence to-day.

Queen. You know the peril. So
I'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying
The pangs of barr'd affections, though the king
Hath charged you should not speak together.

[Exit.]

Imo. O
Dissembling courtesy! How fine this tyrant Can tickle where she wounds! My dearest
husband,
I something fear my father's wrath; but nothing—

Always reserved my holy duty—what
His grace can do on me: you must be gone;
And I must here abide the hourly shot
Of angry eyes, not comforted to live,
But that there is this jewel in the world
That I may see again.

Post. My spouse! my mistress!
O lady, weep no more, lest I give cause

To be suspected of more tenderness
Than doth become a man. I will remain
The loyal'st husband that did e'er plight troth:
My residence in Rome at one Philario's,
Who to my father was a friend, to me
Known but by letter: thither write, my queen,
And with mine eyes I'll drink the words you

Though ink be made of gall.

Re-enter QUEEN

Queen. Be brief, I pray you:
If the king come, I shall incur I know not
How much of his displeasure. [Aside.] Yet
I'll move him

To walk this way: I never do him wrong,
But he does buy my injuries, to be friends;
Pays dear for my offences. [Exit.]

Post. Should we be taking leave
As long a term as yet we have to live,
The loathsomeness to depart would grow. Adieu!

Imo. Nay, stay a little:

Were you but riding forth to air yourself, 70
Such parting were too petty. Look here, love;
This diamond was my mother's: take it, heart;
But keep it till you woo another wife,
When Imogen is dead.

Post. How, how: another?
You gentle gods, give me but this I have,
And scar up my embracements from a next
With bonds of death! [Putting on the ring.]

Remain, remain thou here
While sense can keep it on. And, sweetest, fairest,

As I my poor self did exchange for you,
To your so infinite loss, so in our trifles 70
I still win of you: for my sake wear this;
It is a manacle of love; I'll place it
Upon this fairest prisoner.

[Putting a bracelet upon her arm.]
Imo. O the gods!

When shall we see again?

Enter CYMBELINE and Lords.

Post. Alack, the king!
Cym. Thou basest thing, avoid! hence, from my sight!

If after this command thou fraught the court
With thy unworthiness, thou diest: away!
Thou'rt poison to my blood.

Post. The gods protect you!
And bless the good remainders of the court!
I am gone. [Exit.]

Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death 70
More sharp than this is.

Cym. O disloyal thing,
That shouldst repair my youth, thou hast
A year's age on me.

Imo. I beseech you, sir,
Harm not yourself with your vexation:
I am senseless of your wrath; a touch more rare

Subdues all pangs, all fears.

Cym. Fast grace! obedience!
Imo. Past hope, and in despair; that way, past grace.

Cym. That mightst have had the sole son of my queen!

Imo. O blest, that I might not! I chose an [Id avoid a puttock.]

Cym. Thou took'st a beggar; wouldst have made my throne
A seat for baseness.

Imo. No; I rather added
A lustre to it.

Cym. O thou vile one!

Imo. Sir,
It is your fault that I have loved Posthumus:
You bred him as my playfellow, and he is
A man worth any woman, overbuys me
Almost the sum he pays.

Cym. What, art thou mad?

Imo. Almost, sir: heaven restore me!
Would I were
A neat-herd's daughter, and my Leonatus
Our neighbour shepherd's son!

Cym. Thou foolish thing! 150

Re-enter QUEEN.

They were again together: you have done
Not after our command. Away with her,
And pen her up.

Queen. Desecch your patience. Peace,
Dear lady daughter, peace! Sweet sovereign, Leave us to ourselves; and make yourself some comfort

Out of your best advice.

Cym. Nay, let her languish
A drop of blood a day; and, being aged,
Die of this folly!

[Exeunt Cymbeline and Lords.]

Queen. Fie! you must give way.

Enter PISANTO.

Here is your servant. How now, sir! What news?

Pis. My lord your son drew on my master.

Queen. His! 160
No harm, I trust, is done!

Pis. There might have been,
But that my master rather play'd than fought
And had no help of anger: they were parted
By gentlemen at hand.

Queen. I am very glad on't.

Imo. Your son's my father's friend; he takes his part.

To draw upon an exile! O brave sir!
I would they were in Afric both together;
Myself by with a needle, that I might prick
The goer-back. Why came you from your master?

Pis. On his command: he would not suffer
me

To bring him to the haven; left these notes
Of what commands I should be subject to,
When't pleased you to employ me.

Queen. This hath been
Your faithful servant: I dare lay mine honour
He will remain so.

Pis. I humbly thank your highness.

Queen. Pray, walk awhile.

Imo. About some half-hour hence,
I pray you, speak with me: you shall at least
Go see my lord aboard: for this time leave me.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. The same. A public place.

Enter CLOTEN and two Lords.

First Lord. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt; the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice: where air comes out, air comes in: there's none abroad so wholesome as that you vent.

Clo. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift
it. Have I hurt him!

Sec. Lord. [Aside] No, faith; not so much as his patience.

First Lord. Hurt him! his body's a passable carcass, if he be not hurt: it is a through-fare for steel, if it be not hurt.

Sec. Lord. [Aside] His steel was in debt; it went o' the backside the town.

Clo. The villain would not stand me.

Sec. Lord. [Aside] No; but he fled forward still, toward your face.

First Lord. Stand you! You have land enough of your own: but he added to your having; gave you some ground.

Sec. Lord. [Aside] As many inches as you have oceans. Puppies!

Clo. I would they had not come between us.

Sec. Lord. [Aside] So would I, till you had measured how long a fool you were upon the ground.

Clo. And that she should love this fellow and refuse me!

Sec. Lord. [Aside] If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damned.

First Lord. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together: she's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

Sec. Lord. [Aside] She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her.

Clo. Come, I'll to my chamber. Would there had been some hurt done!

Sec. Lord. [Aside] I wish not so; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt.

Clo. You'll go with us!

First Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

Clo. Nay, come, let's go together.

Sec. Lord. Well, my lord. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. A room in Cymbeline's palace.

Enter IMOGEN and PISANTO.

Imo. I would thou grew'st unto the shores o'
the haven,

And question'd every sail: if he should write,
And I not have it, 'twere a paper lost,
As offer'd mercy is. What was the last
That he spake to thee?

Pis. It was his queen, his queen!

Imo. Then waved his handkerchief!

Pis. And kiss'd it, madam.

Imo. Senseless linen! happier than thou that I

And that was all!

Pis. No, madam; for as long
As he could make me with this ere great Distinguish him from others, he did keep
The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief.

Still waving, as the fits and starts of his mind
Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on,
How swift his ship.

Imo. Thou shouldst have made him
As little as a crow, or less, ere left
To after-eye him.

Pis. Madam, so I did.
Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings;
crack'd them, but
To look upon him, till the diminution
Of space had pointed him sharp as my needle,
Nay, follow'd him, till he had melted from
The smallness of a gnat to air, and then
Have turn'd mine eye and wept. But, good
Pisanio,

When shall we hear from him?

Pis. Be assured, madam,
With his next vantage.

Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had

Most pretty things to say: ere I could tell him
How I would think on him at certain hours
Such thoughts and such, or I could make him swear

The shes of Italy should not betray Mine interest and his honour, or have charged
him,

At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at mid-
night,

To encounter me with orisons, for then
I am in heaven for him; or ere I could Give him that parting kiss which I had set Betwixt two charming words, comes in my father

And like the tyrannous breathing of the north
Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. The queen, madam,
Desires your highness' company.

Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them dispatch'd.

I will attend the queen.

Pis. Madam, I shall. [Exeunt. 40]

SCENE IV. Rome. Philario's house.

Enter PHILARIO, IACHIMO, a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Jack. Believe it, sir, I have seen him in Britain: he was then of a crescent note, expected to prove so worthy as since he hath been allowed the name of; but I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration, though the catalogue of his endowments had been tabled by his side and I to peruse him by items.

Phi. You speak of him when he was less furnished than now he is with that which makes him both without and within.

French. I have seen him in France: we had very many there could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he.

Jack. This matter of marrying his king's daughter, wherein he must be weighed rather by her value than his own, words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter.

French. And then his banishment.

Jack. Ay, and the approbation of those that weep this lamentable divorce under her colours are wonderfully to extend him; be it but to fortify her judgement, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar without less quality. But how comes it he is to sojourn with you? How deeps acquaintance?
Phi. His father and I were soldiers together;
to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life. Here comes the Briton: let him be so entertained amongst you as suits, with gentlemen of your knowing, to a stranger of his quality. 30

Enter POSTHUMUS.

I beseech you all, be better known to this gentleman, whom I commend to you as a noble friend of mine: how worthy he is I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own hearing.

French. Sir, we have known together in Orleans.

Post. Since when I have been debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay and yet pay still. 40

French. Sir, you o'er-rate my poor kindness;
I was glad I did atone my countryman and you; it had been pity you should have been put together with so mortal a purpose as then each bore, upon importance of so slight and trivial a nature.

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a young traveller; rather shunned to go even with what I heard than in my every action to be guided by others' experiences: but upon my mended judgement—if I offend not to say it is mended—my quarrel was not altogether slight.

French. Faith, yes, to be put to the arbitrement of swords, and by such two that would by all likelihood have confounded one the other, or have fallen both.

Jack. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference?

French. Safely, I think: 'twas a contention in public, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses; this gentleman at that time vouching—and upon warrant of bloody affirmation—his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant-qualified and less attemptable than any the rarest of our ladies in France.

Jack. That lady is not now living, or this gentleman's opinion by this worn out.

Post. She holds her virtue still and I my mind.

Jack. You must not so far prefer her 'fore ours of Italy. 50

Post. Being so far provoked as I was in France, I would abate her nothing, though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend.

Jack. As fair and as good—a kind of hand-in-hand comparison—had been something too fair and too good for any lady in Britain. If she went before others I have seen, as that diamond of yours outlives many I have beheld, I could not but believe she excelled many:

but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady.

Post. I praised her as I rated her: so do I my stone.

Iach. What do you esteem it at?

Post. More than the world enjoys.

Iach. Either your unparagoned mistress is dead, or she's outprized by a trifle.

Post. You are mistaken: the one may be sold, or given, if there were wealth enough for the purchase, or merit for the gift: the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods.

Iach. Which the gods have given you?

Post. Which, by their graces, I will keep.

Iach. You may wear her in title yours: but, you know, strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds. Your ring may be stolen too: so your brace of unprizable estimations; the one is but frail and the other casual; a cunning thief, or a that way accomplished courtier, would hazard the winning both of first and last.

Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplished a courtier to convince the honour of my mistress, if, in the holding or loss of that, you term her frail. I do nothing doubt you have store of thieves; notwithstanding, I fear not my ring.

Phi. Let us leave here, gentlemen. 109

Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy signior, I thank him, makes no stranger of me; we are familiar at first.

Iach. With five times so much conversation, I should get ground of your fair mistress, make her go back, even to the yielding, had I admittance and opportunity to friend.

Post. No, no.

Iach. I dare thereupon pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring; which, in my opinion, o'ervalues it something: but I make my wager rather against your confidence than her reputation: and, to bar your offence herein too, I durst attempt it against any lady in the world.

Post. You are a great deal abused in too bold a persuasion; and I doubt not you sustain what you're worthy of by your attempt.

Iach. What's that?

Post. A repulse: though your attempt, as you call it, deserve more; a punishment too.

Phi. Gentlemen, enough of this: it came in too suddenly; let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, be better acquainted.

Iach. Would I had put my estate and my neighbour's on the approbation of what I have spoke!

Post. What lady would you choose to assail?

Iach. Yours; whom in constancy you think stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousand ducats to your ring, that, commend me to the court where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence that honour of hers which you imagine so reserved.

Post. I will wage against your gold, gold to it: my ring I hold dear as my finger; 'tis part of it.

Iach. You are afraid, and therein the wiser. If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you cannot preserve it from tainting: but I see you have some religion in you, that you fear.

Post. This is but a custom in your tongue; you bear a graver purpose, I hope. 111

Iach. I am the master of my speeches, and would undergo what's spoken, I swear.

Post. Will you? I shall but lend my diamond till your return: let there be covenants drawn between's: my mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of your unworthy thinking: I dare you to this match: here's my ring.

Phi. I will have it no law. 119

Iach. By the gods, it is one. If I bring you no sufficient testimony that I have enjoyed the dearest bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are yours; so is your diamond too: if I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are yours: provided I have your commendation for my more free entertainment.

Post. I embrace these conditions; let us have articles betwixt us. Only, thus far you shall answer: if you make your voyage upon her and give me directly to understand you have prevailed, I am no further your enemy; she is not worth our debate: if she remain un-seduced, you not making it appear otherwise, for your ill opinion and the assault you have made to her chastity you shall answer me with your sword.

Iach. Your hand; a covenant: we will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain, lest the bargain should catch cold and starve: I will fetch my gold and have our two wagers recorded. 121

Post. Agreed.

[Exeunt Posthumus and Iachimo.]

French. Will this hold, think you?

Phi. Signior Iachimo will not from it. Pray, let us follow 'em. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Britain. A room in Cymbeline's palace.

Enter QUEEN, Ladies, and CORNELIUS.

Queen. Whiles yet the dew's on ground, gather those flowers; Make haste: who has the note of them?

First Lady. I, madam.

Queen. Dispatch. [Exeunt Ladies.]
Now, master doctor, have you brought those drugs?

Cor. Pleaseth your highness, ay: here they are, madam. [Presenting a small box.]
But I beseech your grace, without offence,—My conscience bids me ask—wherefore you have Commanded of me these most poisonous compounds, Which are the movers of a languishing death; But though slow, deadly!

Queen. I wonder, doctor, 120
Thou ask'st me such a question. Have I not been

Thy pupil long? Hast thou not learn'd me how To make perfumes? distill? preserve? sea, so That our great king himself doth woo me oft For my confections! Having thus far proceeded,—

Unless thou think'st me devilish—is't not meet
That I did simplify my judgement in Other conclusions? I will try the forces
Of these thy compounds on such creatures as We count not worth the hanging, but none human.

To try the vigour of them and apply
Allayments to their act, and by them gather
Their several virtues and effects.

Cor. Your highness
Shall from this practice but make hard your
heart:

Besides, the seeing these effects will be Both noisome and infectious.

Queen. O, content thee.

Enter PISANIO.

[Aside] Here comes a flattering rascal; upon
him

Will I first work: he's for his master,
And enemy to my son. How now, Pisanio!
Doctor, your service for this time is ended; so Take your own way.

Cor. [Aside] I do suspect you, madam;
But you shall do no harm.

Queen. [To Pisanio] Hark thee, a word.
Cor. [Aside] I do not like her. She doth think she has

Strange lingering poisons: I do know her spirit,
And will not trust one of her malice with A drug of such damn'd nature. Those she has
Will stupefy and dull the sense awhile;
Which first, perchance, she'll prove on cats and

Then afterward up higher: but there is
No danger in what show of death it makes, 40
More than the locking-up the spirits a time,
To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd
With a most false effect; and I the truer,
So to be false with her.

Queen. No further service, doctor,
Until I send for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leave. [Exit.]

Queen. Weeps she still, say'st thou? Dost thou think in time

She will not quench and let instructions enter
Where folly now possesses? Do thou work:
When thou shalt bring me word she loves my son.

I'll tell thee on the instant thou art then 50
As great as is thy master, greater, for
His fortunes all lie speechless and his name

Is at last gasp: return he cannot, nor Continue where he is: to shift his being
Is to exchange one misery with another,
And every day that comes comes to decay

A day's work in him. What shalt thou expect,
To be depend on a thing that leans,
Who cannot be new built, nor has no friends,

So much as but to prop him! *[The Queen drops
the box; Pisanio takes it up.]* Thou takest up Thou know'st not what; but take it for thy labour:

It is a thing I made, which hath the king
Five times redeem'd from death: I do not know
What is more cordial. Nay, I pribebe, take it;
It is the sweetest of a further good

That I can send to thee. Tell thy mistress how

The case stands with her; do't as from thyself.
Think what a chance thou changest on, but think

Thou hast thy mistress still, to boot, my son.
Who shall take notice of thee: I'll move thee
king 70

To any shape of thy preferment such
As thou'lt desire; and then myself, I chiefly;
That set thee on to this desert, am bound
To load thy merit richly. Call my women:
Think on my words. [Exit Pisanio.]

A sly and constant knave,
Not to be shaken; the agent for his master
And the remembrancer of her to hold
The hand-fast to her lord. I have given him
that

Which, if he take, shall quite unpeople her
Of liegers for her sweet, and which she after, so Except she bend her humour, shall be assured
To taste of too.

Re-enter PISANIO and Ladies.

So, so: well done, well done:
The violets, cowslips, and the primroses,
Bear to my closet. Fare thee well, Pisanio;
Think on my words.

[Exit Queen and Ladies.]
Pis. And shall do:

But when to my good lord I prove untrue,
I'll choke myself: there's all I'll do for you.
[Exit.]

SCENE VI. The same. Another room in the palace.

Enter IMOGEN.

Imo. A father cruel, and a step-dame false;
A foolish sutor to a wedded lady,
That hath her husband banish'd;—O, that husband!

My supreme crown of grief! and those repeated
Vexations of it! Had I been thief-stol'n,
As my two brothers, happy! but most miserable

Is the desire that's glorious: blest be those,
How mean so'er, that have their honest wills,
Which seasons comfort. Who may this be?
Fie!

Enter PISANIO and IACHIMO.

Pis. Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome,
Comes from my lord with letters.

Iach. Change you, madam! 11
The worthy Leonatus is in safety
And greets your highness dearly.

[Presents a letter.]
Imo. Thanks, good sir:
You're kindly welcome.

Iach. [Aside] All of her that is out of door
most rich!

If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare,
She is alone the Arabian bird, and I
Have lost the wager. Boldness be my friend!
Arm me, audacity, from head to foot!

Or, like the Partisan, I shall fly fighting; so Rather, directly fly.

Imo. [Rings] 'He is one of the noblest note, to whose kindness I am most infinitely tied. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your trust—

 So far I read aloud :
 But even the very middle of my heart
 Is warm'd by the rest, and takes it thankfully.
 You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I
 Have words to bid you, and shall find it so
 In all that I can do.

Jack. Thanks, fairest lady.
 What, are men mad? Hath nature given them
 eyes

To see this vaulted arch, and the rich crop
 Of sea and land, which can distinguish 'twixt
 The fiery orbs above and the twinn'd stones
 Upon the number'd beach? and can we not Partition make with spectacles so precious 'Twixt fair and foul?

Imo. What makes your admiration?
Jack. It cannot be i' the eye, for apes and monkeys

'Twixt two such shes would chatter this way
 and Contemn with mows the other; nor i' the judgement,

For idiots in this case of favour would
 Be wisely definite; nor i' the appetite;
 Sluttish to such neat excellence opposed
 Should make desire vomit emptiness,
 Not so allured to feed.

Imo. What is the matter, trow?
Jack. The cloyed will,
 That satiate yet unsatisfied desire, that tub
 Both fill'd and running, ravening first the lamb
 Longs after for the garbage.

Imo. What, dear sir, so
 Thus raps you? Are you well?
Jack. Thanks, madam; well. [To Pisanio]

Beseech you, sir, desire
 My man's abode where I did leave him: he Is strange and peevish.

Pis. I was going, sir,
 To give him welcome. [Exit.]
Imo. Continues well my lord? His health, beseech you?

Jack. Well, madam.
Imo. Is he disposed to mirth? I hope he is.

Jack. Exceeding pleasant; none a stranger there
 So merry and so gamesome: he is call'd

The Briton reveller.
Imo. When he was here,
 He did incline to sadness, and oft-times of knowing why.

Jack. I never saw him sad.
 Here's a Frenchman his companion, one
 't eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much loves

Gallian girl at home; he fumes
 as thick sighs from him, whiles the jolly Briton—

our lord, I mean—laughs from 's free lungs, cries 'O,
 my sides hold, to think that man, who knows

 history, report, or his own proof, at woman is, yea, what she cannot choose it must be, will his free hours languish for bondage?

Imo. Will my lord say so?
Jack. Ay, madam, with his eyes in flood with laughter:

It is a recreation to be by
 And hear him mock the Frenchman. But, heavens know,

Some men are much to blame.
Imo. Not he, I hope.

Jack. Not he; but yet heaven's bounty towards him might

Be used more thankfully. In himself, 'tis much;
 In you, which I account his beyond all talents,
 Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound
 To pity too.

Imo. What do you pity, sir?
Jack. Two creatures heartily.

Imo. Am I one, sir?
 You look on me: what wreck discern you in me
 Deserves your pity?

Jack. Lamentable! What
 To hide me from the radiant sun and solace
 I' the dungeon by a snuff!

Imo. I pray you, sir,
 Deliver with more openness your answers
 To my demands. Why do you pity me?

Jack. That others do—
 I was about to say—enjoy your—But
 It is an office of the gods to venge it,
 Not mine to speak on't.

Imo. You do seem to know Something of me, or what concerns me: pray
 you,—

Since doubting things go ill often hurts more
 Than to be sure they do; for certainties
 Either are past remedies, or, timely knowing,
 The remedy then born—discover to me

What both you spur and stop.

Jack. Had I this cheek so
 To bathe my lips upon; this hand, whose touch,
 Whose every touch, would force the feeder's soul

To the oath of loyalty; this object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye,
 Fixing it only here; should I, damn'd then,

Slave with lips as common as the stairs
 That mount the Capitol; join grips with hands
 Made hard with hourly falsehood—falsehood, as

With labour; then by-peeping in an eye
 Base and unlistrous as the smoky light
 That's fed with stinking tallow; it were fit

That all the plagues of hell should at one time
 Encounter such revolt.

Imo. My lord, I fear,
 Has forgot Britain.

Jack. And himself. Not I,
 Inclined to this intelligence, pronounce
 The beggary of his change; but 'tis your graces

That from my inmost conscience to my tongue
 Charms this report out.

Imo. Let me hear no more.
Jack. O dearest soul! your cause doth strike
 my heart

With pity, that doth make me sick. A lady
 So fair, and fasten'd to an empery,
 Would make the great'st king double—to be partner'd

 With tomboys hired with that self ambition
 Which your own coffers yield! with dammed ventures

That play with all infirmities for gold
Which rottenness can lend nature! such bold'd stuff

As well might poison poison! Be revenged;
Or she that bore you was no queen, and you
Recoil from your great stock.

Imo. Revenged!
How should I be revenged? If this be true,—
As I have such a heart that both mine ears ¹³⁰
Must not in haste abuse—if it be true,
How should I be revenged?

Jack. Should he make me
Live, like Diana's priest, betwixt cold sheets,
While he is vaulting variable ramps,
In your despite, upon your purse? Revenge it.
I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure,
More noble than that runagate to your bed,
And will continue fast to your affection,
Still close as sure.

Imo. What, ho, Pisanio!

Jack. Let me my service tender on your lips.
Imo. Away! I do condemn mine ears that have

So long attended thee. If thou wert honourable,
Thou wouldst have told this tale for virtue, not For such an end thou seek'st,—as base as strange.

Thou wrong'st a gentleman, who is as far
From thy report as thou from honour, and Solicit'st here a lady that disdains
Thee and the devil alike. What ho, Pisanio!
The king my father shall be made acquainted
Of thy assault: if he shall think it fit, ¹⁵⁰
A saucy stranger in his court to mart
As in a Romish stew and to expound
His beastly mind to us, he hath a court
He little cares for and a daughter who
He not respects at all. What ho, Pisanio!

Jack. O happy Leonatus! I may say:
The credit that thy lady hath of thee
Deserves thy trust, and thy most perfect goodness

Her assured credit. Blessed live you long!
A lady to the worthiest sir that ever ¹⁶⁰
Country call'd his! and you his mistress, only For the most worthiest fit! Give me your pardon.

I have spoke this, to know if your affiance
Were deeply rooted; and shall make your lord,
That which he is, new o'er: and he is one
The truest manner'd; such a holy witch
That he enchants societies into him;
Half all men's hearts are his.

Imo. You make amends.

Jack. He sits 'mongst men like a descended

He hath a kind of honour sets him off, ¹⁷⁰
More than a mortal seeming. Be not angry,
Most mighty princess, that I have adventured
To try your taking of a false report; which hath

Honour'd with confirmation your great judgement

In the election of a sir so rare,
Which you know cannot err: the love I bear
hath

Made me to fan you thus, but the gods made
you.

Unlike all others, chaffless. Pray, your pardon Imo. All's well, sir: take my power I the court for yours.

Jack. My humble thanks. I had almost forgot

To entreat your grace but in a small request,
And yet of moment too, for it concerns
Your lord; myself and other noble friends
Are partners in the business.

Imo. Pray, what is't?

Jack. Some dozen Romans of us and you

lord—
The best feather of our wing—have mingled sums

To buy a present for the emperor;
Which I, the factor for the rest, have done
In France: 'tis plate of rare device, and jewels
Of rich and exquisite form; their values great
And I am something curious, being strange,
To have them in safe stowage: may it please
you

To take them in protection?

Imo. Willingly.
And pawn mine honour for their safety: since
My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them
In my bedchamber.

Jack. They are in a trunk,
Attended by my men: I will make bold
To send them to you, only for this night;
I must aboard to-morrow.

Imo. O, no, no.

Jack. Yes, I beseech; or I shall short my word

By lengthening my return. From Gallia
I cross'd the seas on purpose and on promise
To see your grace.

Imo. I thank you for your pains:
But not away to-morrow!

Jack. O, I must, madam:
Therefore I shall beseech you, if you please
To greet your lord with writing, do't to-night:
I have outstaid my time; which is material
To the tender of our present.

Imo. I will write.

Send your trunk to me; it shall safe be kept,
And truly yielded you. You're very welcome.
[Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I. Britain. Before Cymbeline's palace.

Enter CLOTEN and two Lords.

Clo. Was there ever man had such luck!
when I kissed the Jack, upon an up-cast to be hit away! I had a hundred pound on't: and then a whoreson jackanapes must take me up for swearing; as if I borrowed mine oaths of him and might not spend them at my pleasure.

First Lord. What got he by that? You have broke his pate with your bowl.

Sec. Lord. [Aside] If his wit had been like him that broke it, it would have run all out.

Clo. When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths.
ha!

Sec. Lord. No, my lord; [Aside] nor crop the ears of them.

Cla. Whoreson dog! I give him satisfaction! Would he had been one of my rank!

Sec. Lord. [Aside] To have smelt like a fool.

Cla. I am not vexed more at any thing in the earth: a pox on't! I had rather not be so noble as I am; they dare not fight with me, because of the queen my mother: every Jack-slave hath his bellyful of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that nobody can

Sec. Lord. [Aside] You are cock and capon too; and you crow, cock, with your comb on.

Cla. Sayest thou!

Sec. Lord. It is not fit your lordship should undertake every companion that you give offence to.

Cla. No, I know that: but it is fit I should commit offences to my inferiors.

Sec. Lord. Ay, it is fit for your lordship only.

Cla. Why, so I say.

First Lord. Did you hear of a stranger that's come to court to-night!

Cla. A stranger, and I not know on't!

Sec. Lord. [Aside] He's a strange fellow himself, and knows it not.

First Lord. There's an Italian come; and, 'tis thought, one of Leonatus' friends.

Cla. Leonatus! a banished rascal; and he's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger!

First Lord. One of your lordship's pages.

Cla. Is it fit I went to look upon him? is there no derogation in't!

Sec. Lord. You cannot derogate, my lord.

Cla. Not easily, I think.

Sec. Lord. [Aside] You are a fool granted; therefore your issues, being foolish, do not derogate.

Cla. Come, I'll go see this Italian: what I have lost to-day at bowls I'll win to-night of him. Come, go.

Sec. Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

[Exit Cloten and First Lord.]

That such a crafty devil as is his mother Should yield the world this ass! a woman that Bears all down with her brain; and this her son

Cannot take two from twenty, for his heart, 60 And leave eighteen. Alas, poor princess, Thou divine Imogen, what thou endurest, Betwixt a father by thy step-dame govern'd, A mother hourly coining plots, a wooer More hateful than the foul expulsion is Of thy dear husband, than that horrid act Of the divorce he'd make! The heavens hold firm

The walls of thy dear honour, keep unshak'd That temple, thy fair mind, that thou mayst stand,

To enjoy thy banish'd lord and this great land.

[Exit.]

SCENE II. Imogen's bedchamber in Cymbeline's palace: a trunk in one corner of it.

IMOGEN in bed, reading; a Lady attending.

Imo. Who's there! my woman Helen?

Lady.

Please you, madam.

Imo. What hour is it?

Lady. Almost midnight, madam.

Imo. I have read three hours then: mine eyes are weak:

Fold down the leaf where I have left: to bed: Take not away she taper, leave it burning; And if thou canst awake by four o' the clock, I prithee, call me. Sleep hath seized me wholly.

[Exit Lady.]

To your protection I commend me, gods. From fairies and the tempters of the night Guard me, beseech ye.

[Sleeps. Iachimo comes from the trunk.]
Iach. The crickets sing, and man's o'erlabour'd sense

Repairs itself by rest. Our Targuin thus Did softly press the rushes, ere he waken'd The chastity he wounded. Cythera, How bravely thou becomest thy bed, fresh lily, And whiter than the sheets! That I might touch!

But kiss; one kiss! Rubies unparagon'd, How dearly they do't! 'Tis her breathing that Perfumes the chamber thus: the flame o' the taper

Bows toward her, and would under-peep her lids, To see the enclosed lights, now canopied 21 Under these windows, white and azure laced With blue of heaven's own tinct. But my design,

To note the chamber: I will write all down: Such and such pictures; there the window; such

The adornment of her bed; the arras; figures, Why, such and such; and the contents o' the story.

Ah, but some natural notes about her body, Above ten thousand manner moveables Would testify, to enrich mine inventory. 30 O sleep, thou ape of death, lie dull upon her! And be her sense but as a monument, Thus in a chapel lying! Come off, come off:

[Taking off her bracelet.]

As slippery as the Gordian knot was hard!

'Tis mine; and this will witness outwardly, As strongly as the conscience does within, To the madding of her lord. On her left breast A mole cinque-spotted, like the crimson drops I the bottom of a cowslip: here's a voucher, Stronger than ever law could make: this secret Will force him think I have pick'd the lock and ta'en

The treasure of her honour. No more. To what end?

Why should I write this down, that's riveted, Screw'd to my memory! She hath been reading late

The tale of Tereus; here the leaf's turn'd down Where Philomel gave up. I have enough:

To the trunk again, and shut the spring of it. Swift, swift, you dragons of the night, that dawn

May bare the raven's eye! I lodge in fear; Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here. 30

One, two, three: time, time! [Clock strikes.]

[Goes into the trunk. The scene closes.]

SCENE III. An ante-chamber adjoining Imogen's apartments.

Enter CLOTEN and Lords.

First Lord. Your lordship is the most patient man in loss, the most coldest that ever turned up ace.

Clo. It would make any man cold to lose.

First Lord. But not every man patient after the noble temper of your lordship. You are most hot and furious when you win.

Clo. Winning will put any man into courage. If I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough. It's almost morning, is't not?

First Lord. Day, my lord.

Clo. I would this music would come: I am advised to give her music o' mornings; they say it will penetrate.

Enter Musicians.

Come on; tune: if you can penetrate her with your fingering, so; we'll try with tongue too: if none will do, let her remain; but I'll never give o'er. First, a very excellent good-conceited thing; after, a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it: and then let her consider.

SONG.

Hark, hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings,
And Phoebus' gins arise,
His steeds to water at those springs
On chaliced flowers that lies;
And winking Mary-buds begin
To ope their golden eyes:
With every thing that pretty is,
My lady sweet, arise:
Arise, arise.

Clo. So, get you gone. If this penetrate, I will consider your music the better: if it do not, it is a vice in her ears, which horse-hairs and calves'-guts, nor the voice of unpaved cunuch to boot, can never amend.

[Exeunt Musicians.]

Sec. Lord. Here comes the king.

Clo. I am glad I was up so late; for that's the reason I was up so early: he cannot choose but take this service I have done fatherly.

Enter CYMBELINE and QUEEN.

Good morrow to your majesty and to my gracious mother.

Cym. Attend you here the door of our stern daughter?

Will she not forth?

Clo. I have assailed her with music, but she wenchafes no notice.

Cym. The exile of her minion is too new; she hath not yet forgot him: some more time must wear the print of his remembrance out, and then she's yours.

Queen. You are most bound to the king, who lets go by no vantages that may Prove you to his daughter. Frame yourself to comply soliciting, and befriend with softness of the season; make denials gracious your services; so seem as if you were disposed to do those duties which

You tender to her; that you in all obey her. Say when command to your dismissal tends, And therein you are senseless.

Clo.

Senseless! not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. So like you, sir, ambassadors from Rome;

The one is Caius Lucius.

Cym.

A worthy fellow, so. Albeit he comes on angry purpose now; But that's no fault of his; we must receive him

According to the honour of his sender; And towards himself, his godness forespent on us,

We must extend our notice. Our dear son, When you have given good morning to your mistress,

Attend the queen and us; we shall have need To employ you towards this Roman. Come, our queen.

Clo. If she be up, I'll speak with her; if not,

Let her lie still and dream. [Knocks] By your leave, ho!

I know her women are about her: what if I do line one of their hands? 'Tis gold which buys admittance; oft it doth; yea, and makes

Diana's rangers false themselves, yield up Their deer to the stand o' the stealer; and 'tis gold

Which makes the true man kill'd and saves the thief;

Nay, sometime hangs both thief and true man: what

Can it not do and undo! I will make One of her women lawyer to me, for I yet not understand the case myself. [Knocks] By your leave.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. Who's there that knocks?

Clo.

A gentleman.

Lady.

No more!

Clo. Yes, and a gentlewoman's son.

Lady.

That's more

Than some, whose tailors are as dear as you, Can justly boast of. What's your lordship's pleasure?

Clo. Your lady's person: is she ready?

Lady.

Ay,

To keep her chamber.

Clo.

There is gold for you;

Sell me your good report.

Lady. How! my good name! or to report of you

What I shall think is good!—The princess!

Enter IMOGEN.

Clo. Good morrow, fairest: sister, your sweet hand.

Imo. Good morrow, sir. You lay out too much pains

For purchasing but trouble: the thanks I give is telling you that I am poor of thanks And scarce can spare them.

Cl. Still, I swear I love you.
Imo. If you but said so, 'twere as deep
 with me:

If you swear still, your recompense is still
 That I regard it not.

Cl. This is no answer.
Imo. But that you shall not say I yield being silent,
 I would not speak. I pray you, spare me:
 'Faith, 100
 I shall unfold equal discourtesy
 To your best kindness: one of your great knowing
 Should learn, being taught, forbearance.

Cl. To leave you in your madness, 'twere
 my sin:
 I will not.

Imo. Fools are not mad folks.
Cl. Do you call me fool?
Imo. As I am mad, I do:

If you'll be patient, I'll no more be mad;
 That cures us both. I am much sorry, sir,
 You put me to forget a lady's manners, 110
 By being so verbal: and learn now, for all,
 That I, which know my heart, do here pronounce,

By the very truth of it, I care not for you,
 And am so near the lack of charity—
 To accuse myself—I hate you; which I had rather

You felt than make 't my boast.

Cl. You sin against Obedience, which you owe your father. For
 The contract you pretend with that base wretch,
 One bred of alms and foster'd with cold dishes,
 With scraps o' the court, it is no contract, none;
 And though it be allow'd in meaner parties—
 Yet who than he more mean!—to knit their souls,

In whom there is no more dependency
 But brats and beggary, in self-figured knot;
 Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement by
 The consequence o' the crown, and must not soil

The precious note of it with a base slave,
 A holding for a livery, a squire's cloth,
 A panther, not so eminent.

Imo. Profane fellow!
 Wert thou the son of Jupiter and no more 130
 'ut what thou art besides, thou wert too base
 o be his groom: thou wert dignified enough,
 Even to the point of envy, if 'twere made
 Comparative for your virtues, to be styled
 The under-hangman of his kingdom, and hated
 For being prefer'd so well.

Cl. The south-fog rot him!
Imo. He never can meet more mischance than come

o be but named of thee. His meanest garment,
 That ever hath but clipp'd his body, is dearer
 In my respect than all the hairs above thee, 140
 Were they all made such men. How now, Pisanio!

Enter PIRANIO.

Cl. 'His garment!' Now the devil—
Imo. To Dorothy my woman his time presently—

Cl. 'His garment!'

Imo. I am sprited with a fool,
 Frighted, and anger'd worse: go bid my woman
 Search for a jewel that too usually Hath left mine arm: it was thy master's:
 'shrew me,

If I would lose it for a revenue
 Of any king's in Europe. I do think
 I saw 't this morning: confident I am, 150
 Last night 'twas on mine arm; I kiss'd it:
 I hope it be not gone to tell my lord
 That I kiss aught but he.

Pis. 'Twill not be lost.
Imo. I hope so: go and search.

[Exit Pisanio.]
Cl. You have abused me:
 His meanest garment!'

Imo. Ay, I said so, sir:
 If you will make 't an action, call witness to 't.
Cl. I will inform your father.

Imo. Your mother too:
 She's my good lady, and will conceive, I hope,
 But the worst of me. So, I leave you, sir,
 To the worst of discontent. [Exit.]

Cl. I'll be revenged: 160
 'His meanest garment!' Well. [Exit.]

SCENE IV. Rome. Philario's house.

Enter POSTHUMUS and PHILARIO.

Post. Fear it not, sir: I would I were so sure
 To win the king as I am bold her honour
 Will remain here.

Phl. What means do you make to him?
Post. Not any, but abide the change of
 time,

Quake in the present winter's state and wish
 That warmer days would come: in these scard hopes,

I barely gratify your love; they failing,
 I must die much your debtor.

Phl. Your very goodness and your company
 O'erpay all I can do. By this, your king 20
 Hath heard of great Augustus; Caius Lucius
 Will do's commission thoroughly: and I think He'll grant the tribute, send the arranges;
 Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance

Is yet fresh in their grief.

Post. I do believe,
 Statist though I am none, nor like to be,
 That this will prove a war; and you shall hear
 The legions now in Gallia sooner landed
 In our not-fearing Britain than have tidings
 Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen so
 Are men more order'd than when Julius Cæsar

Smiled at their lack of skill, but found their courage

Worthy his frowning at; their discipline,
 Now mingled with their courage, will make known

To their approvers they are people such
 That mend upon the world.

Enter IACHIMO.

Phl. See!
Post. The swiftest harts have land;

you by

And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails,
To make your vessel nimble.

Phi. Welcome, sir.

Post. I hope the briefness of your answer
made
The speediness of your return.

Jack. Your lady
Is one of the fairest that I have look'd upon.

Post. And therewithal the best; or let her beauty
Look through a casement to allure false hearts
And be false with them.

Jack. Here are letters for you.

Post. Their tenour good, I trust.

Jack. 'Tis very like.

Phi. Was Caius Lucius in the Britain court
When you were there?

Jack. He was expected then,
But not approach'd.

Post. All is well yet. 39
Sparkles this stone as it was wont? or is't not Too dull for your good wearing?

Jack. If I had lost it,
I should have lost the worth of it in gold.

I'll make a journey twice as far, to enjoy
A second night of such sweet shortness which
Was mine in Britain, for the ring is won.

Post. The stone's too hard to come by.
Jack. Not a whit,
Your lady being so easy.

Post. Make not, sir,
Your loss your sport: I hope you know that we Must not continue friends.

Jack. Good sir, we must,
If you keep covenant. Had I not brought 50
The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant
We were to question further: but I now
Profess myself the winner of her honour,
Together with your ring; and not the wronger
Of her or you, having proceeded but
By both your wills.

Post. If you can make't apparent
That you have tasted her in bed, my hand
And ring is yours; if not, the foul opinion
You had of her pure honour gains or loses 59
Your sword or mine, or masterless leaves both
To who shall find them.

Jack. Sir, my circumstances,
Being so near the truth as I will make them,
Must first induce you to believe: whose strength
I will confirm with oath; which, I doubt not, You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall find

You need it not.

Post. Proceed.

Jack. First, her bedchamber,—
Where, I confess, I slept not, but profess Had that was well worth watching—it was hang'd

With tapestry of silk and silver; the story
Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman, 70
And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for
The press of boats or pride: a piece of work
So heavenly done, so rich, that it did strive
In rich embroidery; and value; which I wonder'd
Could be so rich, and exactly wrought,
Since the truest on't was—

Post. This is true;

And this you might have heard of here, by me,
Or by some other.

Jack. More particulars
Must justify my knowledge.

Post. So they must,
Or do your honour injury;

Jack. chimney 80
Is south the chamber; and the chimney-piece
Chaste Dian bathing; never saw I figures
So likely to report themselves: the cutter
Was as another nature, dumb; outwent her,
Motion and breath left out.

Post. This is a thing
Which you might from relation likewise reap,
Being, as it is, much spoke of.

Jack. The roof o' the chamber With golden cherubins is fretted: her androns—

I had forgot them—were two winking Cupids
Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely 90
Depending on their brands.

Post. This is her honour!
Let it be granted you have seen all this—and praise

Be given to your remembrance—the description
Of what is in her chamber nothing saves
The wager you have laid.

Jack. Then, if you can,
[Showing the bracelet,

Be pale: I beg but leave to air this jewel; see!
And now 'tis up again: it must be married
To that your diamond; I'll keep them.

Post. Jove!
Once more let me behold it: is it that
Which I left with her?

Jack. Sir—I thank her—that: 100
She stripp'd it from her arm: I see her yet;
Her pretty action did outsell her gift,
And yet enrich'd it too: she gave it me, and

said
She priz'd it once.

Post. May be she pluck'd it off
To send it me.

Jack. She writes so to you, doth she!
Post. O, no, no, no! 'tis true. Here, take this too; [Gives the ring.

It is a basilisk unto mine eye,
Kills me to look on't. Let there be no honour
Where there is beauty; truth, where semblance;
love.

Where there's another man: the vows of
women 110

Of no more bondage be, to where they are made,
Than they are to their virtues; which is nothing.
O, above measure false!

Phi. Have patience, sir,
And take your ring again; 'tis not yet won:
It may be probable she lost it; or

Who knows if one of her women, being corrupted,
Hath stol'n it from her?

Post. Very true;
And so, I hope, he came by't. Back my ring:
Render to me some espousal sign about her,
More evident than this; for this was stolen.

Jack. By Jupiter, I had it from her arm.

Post. Hark you, he swears; by Jupiter he swears.

'tis true:—nay, keep the ring—'tis true: I am sure he would not lose it: her attendants are all sworn and honourable:—they induced to steal it!

And by a stranger!—No, he hath enjoy'd her:
the cognizance of her incontinency
s this: she hath bought the name of whore thus dearly.

Here, take thy hire; and all the fiends of hell divide themselves between you!

Phi. Sir, be patient: '30
[This is not strong enough to be believed if one persuaded well of—

Post. Never talk on't;
he hath been colted by him.

Iach. If you seek for further satisfying, under her breast—Worthy the pressing—lies a mole, right proud of that most delicate lodging: by my life,
I kiss'd it; and it gave me present hunger to feed again, though full. You do remember
This stain upon her?

Post. Ay, and it doth confirm another stain, as big as hell can hold, 140
Where there no more but it.

Iach. Will you hear more?

Post. Spare your arithmetic: never count the turns;

see, and a million!

Iach. I'll be sworn—
Post. No swearing.

If you will swear you have not done't, you lie;
And I will kill thee, if thou dost deny
Thou'st made me cuckold.

Iach. I'll deny nothing.
Post. O, that I had her here, to tear her limb-meal!

Will go there and do't, if the court, before her father. I'll do something.— [Exit.

Phi. Quite besides 149
he government of patience! You have won:
let's follow him, and pervert the present wrath
e hath against himself.

Iach. With all my heart. [Exeunt.

SCENE V. Another room in Philario's house.

Enter POSTHUMUS.

Post. Is there no way for men to be but women

Must be half-workers! We are all bastards; and that most venerable man which I did call my father, was I know not where When I was stamp'd; some coiner with his tools

Made me a counterfeit: yet my mother seem'd
't Dian of that time: so doth my wife nonpareil of this. O, vengeance, vengeance!

As if my lawful pleasure she restrain'd
And pray'd me oft forbearance; did it with pudency so rosy the sweet view on't Might well have warm'd old Saturn; that I thought her

As chaste as unsunn'd snow. O, all the devils his yellow Iachimo, in an hour—was't not!—
Or less,—at first!—perchance he spoke not, but,

Like a full-acorn'd bear, a German one,
Uried 'O!' and mounted; found no opposition
But what he look'd for should oppose and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find out

The woman's part in me! For there's no motion

That tends to vice in man, but I affirm
It is the woman's part: be it lying, note it,
The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiving, hers;

Lust and rank thoughts, hers, hers; revenges,
hers;

Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain,

Nice longing, slanders, mutability,
All faults that may be named, nay, that hell
knows,

Why, hers, in part or all; but rather, all;
For even to vice

They are not constant, but are changing still
One vice, but of a minute old, for one 31
Not half so old as that. I'll write against
them,

Detest them, curse them: yet 'tis greater skill
In a true hate, to pray they have their will:

The very devils cannot plague them better.

[Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I. Britain. A hall in Cymbeline's
palace.

Enter in state, CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, and Lords at one door, and at another,
CAIUS LUCIUS and Attendants.

Cym. Now say, what would Augustus Caesar
with us?

Luc. When Julius Caesar, whose remembrance yet

Lives in men's eyes and will to ears and tongues
Be theme and hearing ever, was in this Britain

And conquer'd it, Cassibelan, thine uncle,—
Famous in Caesar's praises, no whit less

Than in his feats deserving it—for him
And his succession granted Rome a tribute,

Yearly three thousand pounds, which by thee lately

Is left untender'd.

Queen. And, to kill the marvel, 30
Shall be so ever.

Clo. There be many Caesars,
Ere such another Julius. Britain is

A world by itself; and we will nothing pay
For wearing our own noses.

Queen. That opportunity
Which then they had to take from us, to resume

We have again. Remember, sir, my liege,
The kings your ancestors, together with

The natural bravery of your isle, which stands
As Neptune's park, ribbed and paled in

With rocks unscalable and roaring waters, so
With sands that will not bear your enemies'

boats,
But suck them up to the topmast. A kind of cockney

Caesar made here; but made not here his king
Of 'Came' and 'saw' and 'overcame'; with
shame—

The first that ever touch'd him—he was carried From off our coast, twice beaten; and his shipping—

Poor ignorant bumbles!—on our terrible seas,
Like egg-shells moved upon their surges, crack'd
As easily against our rocks: for joy whereof
The famed Cymbeline, who was once at point—
O gigit fortune!—to master Caesar's sword, 31
Made Lond's town with rejoicing fires bright
And Britons strut with courage.

Clo. Come, there's no more tribute to be paid: our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time; and, as I said, there is no more such Caesars: other of them may have crook'd noses, but to owe such straight arms, none.

Cym. Son, let your mother end. 39
Clo. We have yet many among us can gripe as hard as Cassibela: I do not say I am one;
but I have a hand. Why tribute? why should we pay tribute? If Caesar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light; else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now.

Cym. You must know,
Till the injurious Romans did extort
This tribute from us, we were free: Caesar's ambition,
Which swell'd so much that it did almost stretch 50

The sides o' the world, against all colour here
Did put the yoke upon 's; which to shake off
Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon Ourselves to be.

Clo. and Lords. We do.

Cym. Say, then, to Caesar,
Our ancestor was that Mulmutius which Ordain'd our laws, whose use the sword of Hath too much mangled; whose repair and franchise

Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed, Though Rome be therefore angry: Mulmutius made our laws,

Who was the first of Britain which did put 60
His brows within a golden crown and call'd
Himself a king.

Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline,
That I am to pronounce Augustus Caesar—
Caesar, that hath more kings his servants than Thyself domestic officers—thine enemy:
Receive it from me, then: war and confusion
In Caesar's name pronounce I 'gainst thee: look
For fury not to be resisted. Thus defied,
I thank thee for myself.

Cym. Thou art welcome, Caius.
Thy Caesar knighted me; my youth I spent 70
Much under him; of him I gather'd honour;
Which he to seek of me again, perforce,
Behoves me keep at utterance. I am perfect
That the Pannonians and Dalmatians for Their liberties are now in arms; a precedent
Which not to read would show the Britons

So they shall not find them.

Let proof speak,
My lady bids you welcome. Make some stay a day or two, or longer; if you speak no more in other terms, you shall find us in our salt-water girdle: if you best out of it, it is yours; if you fall in the adventure, our crowns shall fare the better for you; and there's an end.

Luc. So, sir.

Cym. I know your master's pleasure and his
mine:

All the remain is 'Welcome!' [Exit

SCENE II. Another room in the palace.

Enter PIRANIO, with a letter.

Pis. How! of adultery? Wherefore writ you not

What monster's her accuser? \ Leonatus!
O master! what a strange infection
Is fall'n into thy ear! What false Italian,
As poisonous-tongued as handed, hath prevail'd
On thy too ready hearing? Disloyal! No:
She's punish'd for her truth, and undergoes,
More goddess-like than wife-like, such assault
As would take in some virtue. O my master, Thy mind to her is now as low as were Thy fortunes. How! that I should murder
her!

Upon the love and truth and vows which I Have made to thy command! I, her! In blood!

If it be so to do good service, never Let me be counted serviceable. How look I,
That I should seem to lack humanity
So much as this fact comes to? [Reading
'Do't: the letter

That I have sent her, by her own command
Shall give thee opportunity. O damn'd paper!
Black as the ink that's on thee! Senseless bauble,

Art thou a feodary for this act, and look'st
So virgin-like without! Lo, here she comes.
I am ignorant in what I am commanded.

Enter IMOGEN.

Imo. How now, Pisanio!

Pis. Madam, here is a letter from my lord
Imo. Who? thy lord? that is my lord
Leonatus!

O, I learn'd indeed were that astronomer
That knew the stars as I his characters:
He'd lay the future open. You good gods,
Let what is here contain'd relish of love,
(Of my lord's health, of his content, yet not
That we two are asunder; let that grieve him
Some griefs are medicinal; that is one of
them,

For it doth physic love: of his content,
All but in that! Good wax, thy leave. His
be

You bees that make these looks of counsel
Lovers

And men in dangerous bonds pray not alike:
Though forefathers you cast in prison, yet
You clasp young Cupid's tables. Good new gods!

[Heads. 'Justice, and your father's wrath should he take me in his dominion, could no be so cruel to me, as you, O the dearest of creatures, would even now me with your eye!
Take notice that I am in Cymbeline, sir!']

Haven: what your own love will out of this advise you, follow. So he wishes you all happiness, that remains loyal to his vow, and your, increasing in love.

LEONATUS POSTHUMUS.
O, for a horse with wings! Hearst thou, Pisanio!

He is at Milford-Haven: read, and tell me
How far 'tis thither. If one of mean affairs
May plod it in a week, why may not I Glide thither in a day! Then, true Pisanio,— Who long'st, like me, to see thy lord; who long'st,—

O, let me bate,—but not like me,—yet long'st,
But in a fainter kind:—O, not like me;
For mine's beyond beyond—say, and speak thick;

Love's counsellor should fill the pores of hearing,
To the smothering of the sense—how far it is
To this same blessed Milford: and by the way
Tell me how Wales was made so happy as
To inherit such a haven: but first of all,
How we may steal from hence, and for the gap
That we shall make in time, from our hence-
going

And our return, to excuse: but first, how get
hence:

Why should excuse be born or e'er begot?
We'll talk of that hereafter. Prithce, speak,
How many score of miles may we well ride
Twixt hour and hour!

Pis. One score 'twixt sun and sun,
Madam, 's enough for you: [Aside] and too much too.

Imo. Why, one that rode to 's execution,
man.

Could never go so slow: I have heard of riding
wagers,
Where horses have been nimbler than the sands

That run f' the clock's behalf. But this is foolery:

Go bid my woman feign a sickness; say
She'll home to her father: and provide me
n'tly

A ri—suit, no costlier than would fit
A franklin's housewife.

Pis. Madam, you're best consider.

Imo. I see before me, man: nor here, nor
here.

Nor what ensues, but have a fog in them,
That I cannot look through. Away, I prithce;
Do as I bid thee: there's no more to say;
Accessible is none but Milford way. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Wales: a mountainous country with a cave.

*Enter, from the cave, BELARIUS; GUIDERIUS,
and ANVIRAGUS following.*

Bel. A goodly day not to keep house, with such

Whose roof's as low as ours! Stoop, boys this gate

Instructs you how to adore the heavens and bows you

To a mountain's holy office: the gates of

Are arch'd so high that giants may jet through
And keep their impious turbans on, without Good Morrow to the sun. Hail, then, fair
heaven!

We house f' the rock, yet use thee not so hardly
As prouder livers do.

Gwi. Hail, heaven!

Arv. Hail, heaven!

Bel. Now for our mountain sport: up to yond hill;

Your legs are young; I'll tread these flats.

Consider,

When you above perceive me like a crow,
That it is place which lessens and sets off:

And you may then revolve what tales I have told you

Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war:
This service is not service, so being done,

But being so allow'd: to apprehend thus,
Draws us a profit from all things we see;

And often, to our comfort, shall we find
The sharded beetle in a safer hold

Than is the full-wing'd eagle. O, this life

Is nobler than attending for a check,

Richer than doing nothing for a hauble,

Prouder than rustling in unpaid-for silk:

Such gain the cap of him that makes 'em fine,
Yet keeps his book uncrowd'd: no life to ours.

Gwi. Out of your proof you speak: we, poor

Have never view'd from view o' the nest, nor know not

What air's from home. Haply this life is best,
If quiet life be best; sweeter to you

That have a sharper known; well corresponding With your stiff age: but unto us it is

A cell of ignorance; travelling a-bed;

A prison for a debtor, that not dares
To stride a limit.

Arv. What should we speak of

When we are old as you? when we shall hear
The rain and wind beat dark December, how,

In this our pinching cave, shall we discourse
The freezing hours away! We have seen nothing;

We are beastly, subtle as the fox for prey,

Like warlike as the wolf for what we eat;

Our valour is to chase what flies; our rage
We make a quire, as doth the prison'd bird,

And sing our bondage freely.

Bel. How you speak!

Did you but know the city's murmur,

And felt them knowingly; the art o' the court,

As hard to leave as keep; whose top to climb
Is certain falling, or so slippery that

The fear's as bad as falling; the toll o' the way,
A pain that only seems to seek out danger;

I the name of fame and honour; which dies f'
the search.

And hath as oft a seditious epithet
As record of fair act; nay, many times,

Doth ill deserve by doing well; what's worse,
Must courtesy at the command—O, how, this story

The world may read in me; my body's match'd
With Roman sword, and my sweet tongue Runs with the best of actors; I have tried
all.

And when a soldier was the theme, my name
Was not far off: then was I as a tree
Whose boughs did bend with fruit: but in one
night,

A storm or robbery, call it what you will,
Shook down my mellow hangings, nay, my leaves,
And left me bare to weather.

Gui. Uncertain favour!

Bel. My fault being nothing—as I have told you oft—

But that two villains, whose false oaths prevail'd

Before my perfect honour, swore to Cymbeline
I was confederate with the Romans: so
Follow'd my banishment, and this twenty years
This rock and these demesnes have been my world;

Where I have lived at honest freedom, paid
More pious debts to heaven than in all The fore-end of my time. But up to the mountains!

This is not hunters' language: he that strikes
The venison first shall be the lord o' the feast;
To him the other two shall minister;
And we will fear no poison, which attends
In place of greater state. I'll meet you in the valleys.

[Exeunt Guiderius and Arviragus.]

How hard it is to hide the sparks of nature!
These boys know little they are sons to the
king;

Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive.
They think they are mine; and though train'd up thus meanly
I' the cave wherein they bow, their thoughts do hit

The roofs of palaces, and nature prompts them
In simple and low things to prince it much Beyond the trick of others. This Polydore,
The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, who
The king his father call'd Guiderius,—Jove!
When on my three-foot stool I sit and tell
The warlike feats I have done, his spirits fly out Into my story: say 'Thus mine enemy fell, 91
And thus I set my foot on's neck;' even then
The princely blood flows in his cheek, he sweats, Strains his young nerves and puts himself in posture

That acts my words. The younger brother,
Cadwal,

Once Arviragus, in as like a figure,
Strikes life into my speech and shows much
more

His own conceiving.—Hark, the game is rounded—

O Cymbeline! heaven and my conscience
knows

Thou didst unjustly banish me: whereon, 100
At three and two years old, I stole these babes;
Thinking to bar thee of succession, as Thou hast me of my lands. Euriphile, Thou wast their nurse; they took thee for their mother.

And every day do honour to her grave:
york, I suppose, that am Morgan call'd, her being my natural father. The game is up.
[Exit.]

SCENE IV. Country near Milford-Haven.

Enter PISANIO and IMOGEN.

Imo. Thou told'st me, when we came from hence, the place

Was near at hand: ne'er long'd my mother so
To see me first, as I have now. Pisanio! man
Where is Posthumus? What is in thy mind,
That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore break that sigh

From the inward of thee? One, but painted
thus,

Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
Beyond self-explication: put thyself
Into a havour of less fear, ere wildness
Vanquish my staid sense. What's th'
matter?

Why tender'st thou that paper to me, with
A look untender? If't be summer news,
Smile to't before; if wintery, thou need'st
But keep that countenance still. My husband's hand!

That drug-damn'd Italy hath out-craftied him,
And he's at some hard point. Speak, man thy tongue

May take off some extremity, which to read
Would be even mortal to me.

Pis. Please you, read;
And you shall find me, wretched man, a thing
The most disdain'd of fortune.

Imo. [Reads] 'Thy mistress, Pisanio, hath played the strumpet in my bed; the testimonies whereof lie bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak surmises, but from proof as strong as my grief and as certain as I expect my revenge.
That part thou, Pisanio, must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of her.
Let thine own hands take away her life: I shall give thee opportunity at Milford-Haven. She hath my letter for the purpose: where, if thou fear to strike and to make me certain it is done, thou art the pander to her dishonour and equally to me disloyal.'

Pis. What shall I need to draw my sword!
the paper

Hath cut her throat already. No, 'tis slander, Whose edge is sharper than the sword, whose
tongue

Outvenoms all the worms of Nile, whose breath
Rides on the posting winds and doth belie
All corners of the world: kings, queens and states,

Maid, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave
This viperous slander enters. What cheer, madam?

Imo. False to his bed! What is it to be false?

To lie in watch there and to think on him!
To weep 'twixt clock and clock! if sleep charge
nature,

To break it with a fearful dream of him
And cry myself awake! that's false to's bed, is it?

Pis. Alas, good lady!

Imo. I false! Thy conscience

laching,
Thou didst accuse him of incontinency;
Thou then look'd'st like a villain; now methinks

Thy favour's good enough. Some jay of Italy Whose mother was her painting, hath betray'd
 him:

Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion;
 And, for I am richer than to hang by the walls,
 I must be ripp'd :- to pieces with me! - O,
 Men's vows are women's traitors! All good seeming.

By thy revolt, O husband, shall be thought
 Put on for villany; not born where't grows,
 But worn a bait for ladies.

Pis. Good madam, hear me.

Imo. True honest men being heard, like false Aeneas,
 Were in his time thought false, and Sinon's
 weeping

Did scandal many a holy tear, took pity
 From most true wretchedness: so thou, Post-
 humus,

Wilt lay the leaven on all proper men;
 Goodly and gallant shall be false and perjured
 From thy great fall. Come, fellow, be thou
 honest:

Do thou thy master's bidding: when thou see'st
 him,

A little witness my obedience: look!
 I draw the sword myself: take it, and hit
 The innocent mansion of my love, my heart: 70
 Fear not: 'tis empty of all things but grief:
 Thy master is not there, who was indeed
 The riches of it: do his bidding; strike.
 Thou mayest be valiant in a better cause;
 But now thou seem'st a coward.

Pis. Hence, vile instrument!
 Thou shalt not damn my hand.

Imo. Why, I must die;
 And if I do not by thy hand, thou art
 No servant of thy master's. Against self-slaughter

There is a prohibition so divine
 That cravens my weak hand. Come, here's my heart.

Something's afore't. Soft, soft! we'll no defence;

Obedient as the scabbard. What is here!
 The scriptures of the loyal Leonatus,
 All turn'd to heresy! Away, away,
 Corrupters of my faith! you shall no more
 Be stomachers to my heart. Thus may poor fools

Believe false teachers: though those that are betray'd

Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor
 Stands in worse case of woe.

And thou, Posthumus, thou that didst set up 80
 My disobedience 'gainst the king my father
 And make me put into contempt the suits
 Of princely fellows, shalt hereafter find

It is no act of common passage, but
 A strain of rareness: and I grieve myself

To think, when thou shalt be dislodged by her
 That now thou threat on, how thy memory

Will then be pang'd by me. Prithus, dispatch.
 The lamb entreats the butcher: where's thy knife!

Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding,
 When I desire it too.

Pis. O gracious lady, 80

Since I received command to do this business
 I have not slept one wink.

Imo. Do't, and to bed then.

Pis. I'll wake mine eye-balls blind first.

Imo. Wherefore then

Didst undertake it? Why hast thou abused

So many miles with a pretence! this place!

Mine action and thine own! our horses' labour!

The time invading thee! the perturbed court,

For my being absent! whereunto I never

Purpose return. Why hast thou gone so far, 110

To be unbent when thou hast ta'en thy stand,

The elected deer before thee?

Pis. But to win time

To lose so bad employment; in the which I have consider'd of a course. Good lady,

Hear me with patience.

Imo. Talk thy tongue weary; speak:

I have heard I am a strumpet; and mine ear,

Therein false struck, can take no greater wound,

Nor tent to bottom that. But speak.

Pis. Then, madam,

I thought you would not back again.

Imo. Most like;

Bringing me here to kill me.

Pis. Not so, neither: 120

But if I were as wise as honest, then

My purpose would prove well. It cannot be

But that my master is abused:

Some villain, ay, and singular in his art,

Hath done you both this cursed injury.

Imo. Some Roman courtesan.

Pis. No, on my life.

I'll give but notices you are dead and send him

Some bloody sign of it; for 'tis commanded

I should do so: you shall be mis'd at court,

And that will well confirm it.

Imo. Why, good fellow, 130

What shall I do the while! where bide! how

live!

Or in my life what comfort, when I am

Dead to my husband!

Pis. If you'll back to the court—

Imo. No court, no father; nor no more ado

With that harsh, noble, simple nothing,

That Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me

As fearful as a siege.

Pis. If not at court,

Then not in Britain must you bide.

Imo. Where then?

Hath Britain all the sun that shines! Day,

night,

Are they not but in Britain! I the world's volume 140

Our Britain seems as of it, but not in't;

In a great pool a swan's nest: prithus, think

There's livers out of Britain.

Pis. I am most glad

You think of other place. The archbishop,

Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven

To-morrow: now, if you could wear a mind

Dark as your fortune is, and but disguise

That which, to appear itself, must ask yet

But by self-danger, you should tread a course

150 Pretty and full of view; yea, happy near

The residence of Posthumus; so high at least

That though his actions were not visible, yet

Report should render him hourly to your ear

As truly as he moves.

Iso. O, for such means!
Though peril to my modesty, not death on't,
I would adventure.

Pis. Well, then, here's the point:
You must forget to be a woman; change
Command into obedience: fear and niceness—
The handmaids of all women, or, more truly,
Woman is pretty self—into a wagish courage;
Ready in gibes, quick-answer'd, saucy and
As quarrelous as the weasel; nay, you must Forget that rarest treasure of your cheek,
Exposing it—but, O, the harder heart!
Alack, no remedy!—to the greedy touch
Of common-kissing Titan, and forget
Your laboursome and dainty trims, wherein
You made great Juno angry.

Iso. Nay, be brief:
I see into thy end, and am almost
A man already.

Pis. First, make yourself but like one. 170
Fore-thinking this, I have already fit—
"Tis in my cloak-bag—doublet, hat, hose, all That answer to them: would you in their serving,

And with what imitation you can borrow
From youth of such a season, 'fore noble Lucius
Present yourself, desire his service, tell him Wherein you're happy,—which you'll make him know.

If that his head have ear in music,—doubtless
With joy he will embrace you, for he's honourable

And doubling that, most holy. Your means abroad, 180

You have me, rich; and I will never fail
Beginning nor supplement.

Iso. Thou art all the comfort
The gods will dist me with. Prithce, away:
There's more to be consider'd; but we'll even
All that good time will give us: this attempt
I am soldier to, and will abide it with
A prince's courage. Away, I prithee.

Pis. Well, madam, we must take a short farewell.

Least, being mis'd, I be suspected of Your carriage from the court. My noble mistress, 190

Here is a box; I had it from the queen:
What's in 't is precious; if you are sick at sea,
Or stomach-quain'd at land, a dram of this Will drive away distemper. To some shade
And sit you to your manhood. May the gods
Direct you to the best!

Iso. Amen: I thank thee.

[Exeunt, severally.]

SCENE V. A room in Cymbeline's palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTAK, LUCIUS,
Lords, and Attendants.

Cym. Thus far, and so farewell.
Luc. Thanks, royal sir.

My daughter hath wrote, I must from hence;
And am right sorry that I must report ye.

My mistress says—
Queen. Our subjects, sir,

Will not endure his yoke; and for ourself
To show less sovereignty than they, must needs
Appear unkinglike.

Luc. So, sir: I desire of you
A conduct over-land to Milford-Haven.
Madam, all joy befall your grace!

Queen. And you!
Cym. My lords, you are appointed for the office:

The due of honour in no point omit.

So farewell, noble Lucius.

Luc. Your hand, my lord

Clo. Receive it friendly; but from this tin-forth

I wear it as your enemy.

Luc. Sir, the event

Is yet to name the winner: fare you well.

Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, goe
my lords,

Till he have cross'd the Severn. Happiness!

[Exeunt Lucius and Lord
Queen. He goe; hence frowning: but honours us

That we have given him cause.

Clo. "Tis all the better

Your valiant Britons have their wishes in it.
Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the emperor

How it goes here. It fits us therefore ripely
Our chariots and our horsemen be in readiness
The powers that he already hath in Gallia Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves

His war for Britain.

Queen. "Tis not sleepy business;
But must be look'd to speedily and strongly.

Cym. Our expectation that it would be thus Hath made us forward. But, my gentle queen Where is our daughter? She hath not appear'd

Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd
The duty of the day: she looks us like
A thing more made of malice than of duty:
We have noted it. Call her before us; for
We have been too slight in sufferance.

[Exit an Attendant
Queen. Royal sir

Since the exile of Posthumus, most retired
Hath her life been; the cure whereof, my lord
"Tis time must do. Beseech your majesty,
Forbear sharp speeches to her: she's a lady
So tender of rebukes that words are strokes
And strokes death to her.

Re-enter Attendant.

Cym. Where is she, sir? How
Can her contempt be answer'd?

Atten. Please you, sir,
Her chamber is all lock'd; and she's in answer

That will be given to the loudest noise we make.

Queen. My lord, when last I went to visit
her,

She pray'd me to excuse her keeping close,
Whence constrained by her father's anger,
She should that duty leave unpaid to you,
Which daily she was bound to perform.

She wish'd me to make known; but our great count

Made me to blame in memory.

Cym. Her doors lock'd!
Not seen of late! Grant, heavens, that which
I fear

Prove false! [Exit.]

Queen. Son, I say, follow the king.

Clo. That man of hers, Pisanio, her old servant,

I have not seen these two days.

Queen. Go, look after. [Exit Cloten.]

Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus!

He hath a drug of mine; I pray his absence

Proceed by swallowing that, for he believes

It is a thing most precious. But for her,

Where is she gone? Haply, despair hath seized

her.

Or, wing'd with fervour of her love, she's flown

To her desired Posthumus; gone she is

To death or to dishonour; and my end

Can make good use of either: she being down,

I have the placing of the British crown.

Re-enter CLOTEN.

How now, my son!

Clo. 'Tis certain she is fled.

Go in and cheer the king: he rages; none

Dare come about him.

Queen. [Aside] All the better: may

This night forestall him of the coming day!

[Exit.]

Clo. I love and hate her: for she's fair and royal.

And that she hath all courtly parts more exquisite

Than lady, ladies, woman; from every one

The best she hath; and she, of all compounded,

Outsells them all; I love her therefore: but Disdaining me and throwing favours on

The low Posthumus slanders so her judgement

That what's else rare is choked; and in that point

I will conclude to hate her, nay, indeed,

To be revenged upon her. For when fools

Shall—

Enter PISANIO.

Who is here? What are you packing, sirrah!

Come hither: ah, you precious pandar! Villain,

Where is thy lady? In a word; or else

Thou art straightway with the fends.

Pis. O, good my lord!

Clo. Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter,—

I will not ask again. Close villain,

I'll have this secret from thy heart, or rip

Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus?

From whose so many weights of baseness cannot

A dram of worth be drawn.

Pis. Alas, my lord,

How can she be with him? When was she mis'd!

He is in Rome.

Clo. Where is she, sir? Come nearer;

No further halting; satisfy me home

What is become of her.

Pis. O, my all-worthy lord!

Clo. All-worthy villain!

Discover where thy mistress is at once,

At the next word: no more of 'worthy lord'!

Or thy silence on the instant is condemnation and thy death.

Then, sir,

This paper is the history of my knowledge; so

Touching her flight. [Presenting a letter.]

Clo. Let's see it. I will pursue her

Even to Augustus' throne.

Pis. [Aside] Or this, or perish.

She's far enough; and what he learns by this

May prove his travel, not her danger.

Clo. Hum!

Pis. [Aside] I'll write to my lord she's dead.

O Imogen,

Safe mayst thou wander, safe return again!

Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true?

Pis. Sir, as I think.

Clo. It is Posthumus' hand; I know't. Sirrah,

If thou wouldst not be a villain, but do me true service, undergo those employments wherein

I should have cause to use thee with a serious industry, that is, what villany so'er I bid thee

do, to perform it directly and truly, I would think thee an honest man: thou shouldst neither want my means for thy relief nor my voice for thy preferment.

Pis. Well, my good lord.

Clo. Wilt thou serve me! for since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare feature of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine: wilt thou serve me!

Pis. Sir, I will.

Clo. Give me thy hand; here's my purse.

Hast any of thy late master's garments in thy possession?

Pis. I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress.

Clo. The first service thou doest me, fetch that suit hither: let it be thy first service; go.

Pis. I shall, my lord.

Clo. Meet thee at Milford-Haven.—I longed to ask him one thing; I'll remember't soon:—

even there, thou villain Posthumus, wilt I kill thee. I would these garments were mine. She said upon a time—the bitterness of it I now beach from my heart—that she had the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of any qualities. With that suit upon my back, will I ravish her: first kill him, and in her eyes; there shall she see my violence,

which will then be a torment to her conscience.

He on the ground, my speech of incontinency ended on his dead body, and when my suit hath dined—which, as I say, to vex her I will execute in the clothes that she so prized,—so the court I'll knock her back, that she home again. She hath despised us scornfully, and I'll be marry in my revenge.

Re-enter PISANIO, with the clothes.

Be those the garments?

Pis. Ay, my noble lord.

Clo. How long is 't since she went to Milford-Haven?

Pis. She can scarce be there yet.

Clo. Bring this apparel to my chamber; that is the second thing that I have commanded thee: the third is, that thou wilt be a voluntary mute to my design. Be but dutious, and true preferment shall tender itself to thee. My revenge is now at Milford: would I had wings to follow it! Come, and be true. [Exit.]

Pis. Thou bid'st me to my loss: for true to thee

Were to prove false, which I will never be, To him that is most true. To Milford go, And find not her whom thou pursuest. Flow, flow, You heavenly blessings, on her! This fool's speed Be cross'd with slowness; labour be his need! [Exit.]

SCENE VI. Wales. Before the cave of Belarius.

Enter IMOGEN, in boy's clothes.

Imo. I see a man's life is a tedious one: I have tired myself, and for two nights together Have made the ground my bed. I should be sick, But that my resolution helps me. Milford, When from the mountain-top Pisanio show'd thee,

Thou wast within a ken: O Jove! I think Foundations fly the wretched; such, I mean, Where they should be relieved. Two beggars told me

I could not miss my way: will poor folks lie, That have afflictions on them, knowing 'tis a punishment or trial? Yes; no wonder, When rich ones scarce tell true. To lapse in fulness

Is sorer than to lie for need, and falsehood Is worse in kings than beggars. My dear lord! Thou art one o' the false ones. Now I think on thee,

My hunger's gone; but even before, I was At point to sink for food. But what is this? Here is a path to 't: 'tis some savage hold: I were best not call: I dare not call: yet famine,

Ever clean it o'erthrow nature, makes it valiant. Plenty and peace breeds cowards: hardness

Of hardness is mother. Ho! who's here? If any thing that's civil speak; if savage, Take or lend. Ho! No answer! Then I'll enter.

Best draw my sword; and if mine enemy But fear the sword like me, he'll scarcely look on 't.

Such a peace, good heavens! [Exit, to the cave.]

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and

ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. You, Polydore, have proved best woodman and

Are master of the feast: Cadwal and I

Will play the cook and servant; 'tis our match: The sweat of industry would dry and die, But for the end it works to. Come; our stomachs

Will make what's homely & weary; weariness Can smore upon the flint, when resty sloth Finds the down pillow hard. Now peace be here, Poor house, that keep'st thyself.

Gui. I am thoroughly weary.

Arv. I am weak with toil, yet strong in appetite.

Gui. There is cold meat & the cave; we'll browse on that.

Whilst what we have kill'd be cook'd.

Bel. [Looking into the cave.] Stay; come not in.

But that it eats our victuals, I should think Here were a fairy.

Gui. What's the matter, sir?

Bel. By Jupiter, an angel! or, if not, An earthly paragon! Behold divineness No elder than a boy!

Re-enter IMOGEN.

Imo. Good masters, harm me not: Before I enter'd here, I call'd; and thought To have begg'd or bought what I have took: good troth,

I have stol'n nought, nor would not, though I had found Gold strew'd i' the floor. Here's money for my meat;

I would have left it on the board so soon As I had made my meal, and parted With prayers for the provider.

Gui. Money, youth!

Arv. All gold and silver rather turn to dirt! As 'tis no better reckon'd, but of those Who worship dirty gods.

Imo. I see you're angry: Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should Have died had I not made it.

Bel. Whither bound?

Imo. To Milford-Haven.

Bel. What's your name?

Imo. Fidele, sir. I have a kinsman who Is bound for Italy; he embark'd at Milford; To whom being going, almost spent with hunger,

I am fall'n in this offence.

Bel. Prithee, fair youth,

Think us no churls, nor measure our good minds

By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd!

'Tis almost night: you shall have better cheer Ere you depart; and thanks to stay and eat it. Boys, bid him welcome.

Gui. Were you a woman, youth,

I should woo hard but be your groom. In honesty,

I bid for you as I'd buy.

Arv. I'll make 't my comfort

He is a man; I'll love him as my brother: And such a welcome as I'd give to him After long absence, such is yours: most welcome!

Be sprightly, for you fall 'mongst friends.

Imo. If brothers. [Aside] Would it that they

Had been my father's sons! then had my prize
Been less, and so more equal ballasting
To thee, Posthumus.

Bel. He wrings at some distress.

Gui. Would I could free 't!

Arv. Or I, whate'er it be, so
What pain it cost, what danger. Gods!

Bel. Hark, boys.
[Whispering.]

Imo. Great men,
That had a court no bigger than this cave,
That did attend themselves and had the virtue Which their own conscience seal'd them—laying

by
That nothing-gift of differing multitudes—
Could not out-peer these twain. Pardon me,
gods!

I'd change my sex to be companion with them,
Since Leonatus's false.

Bel. It shall be so.

Boys, we'll go dress our hunt. Fair youth, come in:

Discourse is heavy, fasting; when we have supp'd,

We'll mannerly demand thee of thy story,
So far as thou wilt speak it.

Gui. Pray, draw near.

Arv. The night to the owl and morn to the lark less welcome.

Imo. Thanks, sir.

Arv. I pray, draw near. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. Rome. A public place.

Enter two Senators and Tribunes.

First Sen. This is the tenour of the emperor's writ:

That since the common men are now in action
Gainst the Pannonians and Dalmatians,
And that the legions now in Gallia are Full weak to undertake our wars against
The fall'n-off Britons, that we do incite
The gentry to this business. He creates Lucius proconsul: and to you the tribunes,
For this immediate levy, he commends
His absolute commission. Long live Caesar! so

First Tri. Is Lucius general of the forces?

Sec. Sen. AY.

First Tri. Remaining now in Gallia?

First Sen. With those legions

Which I have spoke of, whereunto your levy Must be supplyant: the words of your commission

Will tie you to the numbers and the time
Of their dispatch.

First Tri. We will discharge our duty.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I. Wales: near the cave of Belarius.

Enter CLOTEN.

Olo. I am near to the place where they should meet, if Pisanio have mapped it truly. How fit his garments serve me! Why should his mistress, who was made by him that made the tailor, not be fit too! the rather—saying reverence of the word—for 'tis said a woman's finesse comes by fita. Therein I must play the workman. I dare speak it to myself—for it is not vain-glory for a man and his glass to confer in his own chamber—I mean, the lines of my body are as well drawn as his; no less young,

more strong, not beneath him in fortunes,
beyond him in the advantage of the time,
above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions: yet this imperceivable thing loves him in my despite. What mortality is! Posthumus, thy head, which now is growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off; thy mistress enforced; thy garments cut to pieces before thy face: and all this done, spurn her home to her father; who may haply be a little angry for my so rough usage; but my mother, having power of his testines, shall turn all into my commendations. My horse is tied up safe:
out, sword, and to a sore purpose! Fortune, put them into my hand! This is the very description of their meeting-place; and the fellow dares not deceive me. [Exit.]

SCENE II. Before the cave of Belarius.

Enter, from the cave, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, and IMOGEN.

Bel. [To Imogen] You are not well: remain
here in the cave;

We'll come to you after hunting.

Arv. [To Imogen] Brother, stay here:
Are we not brothers?

Imo. So man and man should be:
But clay and clay differs in dignity.

Whose dust is both alike. I am very sick.

Gui. Go you to hunting; I'll abide with him.

Imo. So sick I am not, yet I am not well.

But not so citizen a wanton as

To seem to die ere sick: so please you, leave me;
Stick to your journal course: the breach of custom

Is breach of all. I am ill, but your being by me
Cannot amend me; society is no comfort.

To one not sociable: I am not very sick.

Since I can reason of it. Pray you, trust me
here:

I'll rob none but myself; and let me die,
Stealing so poorly.

Gui. I love thee; I have spoke it:
How much the quantity, the weight as much,
As I do love my father.

Bel. What! how! how!

Arv. If it be sin to say so, sir, I yoke me
In my good brother's fault: I know not why as
I love this youth; and I have heard you say,
Love's reason's without reason: the less a doer,
And a demand who is't shall die, I'd say
My father, not this youth.

Bel. [Aside] O noble strain!
O worthiness of nature! breed of greatness!

Cowards father cowards and base things are
base:
Nature hath meal and bran, contempt and grace.

I'm not their father; yet who this should be,
Death miracle itself, loved before me.
Tis the ninth hour o' the morn.

Arv. Brother, farewell. 30

Imo. I wish ye sport.

Arv. You health. So please you, sir.

Imo. [Aside.] These are kind creatures.

Gods, what lies I have heard!

Our courtiers say all's savage but at court:

Experience, O, thou disprovest report!

The imperious seas breed monsters, for the dish

Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish.

I am sick still; heart-sick. Pisanio,

I'll now taste of thy drug. [Swallows some.]

Gui. I could not stir him:

He said he was gentle, but unfortunate;

Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest. 40

Arv. Thus did he answer me: yet said, hereafter

I might know more.

Bel. To the field, to the field!

We'll leave you for this time: go in and rest.

Arv. We'll not be long away.

Bel. Pray, be not sick,

For you must be our housewife.

Imo. Well or ill, I

I am bound to you.

Bel. And shalt be ever.

[Exit Imogen, to the cave.]

This youth, howe'er distress'd, appears he hath

had

Good ancestors.

Arv. How angel-like he sings!

Gui. But his neat cookery! he cut our roots

In characters,

And sauced our broth, as Juno had been sick

And he her dieter.

Arv. Nobly he yokes 51

A smiling with a sigh, as if the sigh

Was that it was, for not being such a smile;

The smile mocking the sigh, that it would fly

From so divine a temple, to commix

With winds that sailors rail at.

Gui. I do note

That grief and patience, rooted in him both,

Mingle their spurs together.

Arv. Grow, patience!

And let the stinking elder, grief, untwine

His perishing root with the increasing vine! 60

Bel. It is great morning. Come, away!—

Who's there?

Enter CLOTEN.

Clot. I cannot find those runagates; that

villain

Hath mock'd me. I am faint.

Bel. 'Those runagates!'

Means he not us? I partly know him: 'tis Cloten, the son o' the queen. I fear some business.

I saw him not these many years, and yet

I know 'tis he. We are held as outlaws; hence!

Gui. He is but one: you and my brother search

What companies are near: pray you, away;

Let us alone with him.

[Re-enter Belarius and Arviragus.]

Clot. Soft! What are you?
That fly me thus? some villain mountaineers!

I have heard of such. What slave art thou?

Gui. A thief.

More slavish did I ne'er than answering

A slave without a knock.

Clot. art a robber,

A law-breaker, a villain: Ield thee, thief.

Gui. To who? What art thou

Have not I

An arm as big as thine? a as big!

Thy words, I grant, are big, for I wear not

My dagger in my mouth. S what thou art,

Why I should yield to thee?

Clot. Thou villain base, 8

Know'st me not by my clothes!

Gui. No, nor thy tailor, rascal!

Who is thy grandfather: he made those clothes!

Which, as it seems, make thee.

Clot. Thou precious varlet

My tailor made them not.

Gui. Hence, then, and thence!

The man that gave them thee. Thou art some fool;

I am loath to beat thee.

Clot. Thou injurious thief,

Hear but my name, and tremble.

Gui. What's thy name

Clot. Cloten, thou villain.

Gui. Cloten, thou double villain, be thy

name,

I cannot tremble at it: were it Toad, or Adder

Spider, 9

'Twould move me sooner.

Clot.

To thy further fear,

Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt know

I am son to the queen.

Gui. I am sorry for't; not seeming

So worthy as thy birth.

Clot. Art not afraid?

Gui. Those that I reverence those I fear

the wise:

At fools I laugh, not fear them.

Clot.

Die the death.

When I have slain thee with my proper hand,

I'll follow those that even now fled hence,

And on the gates of Lud's-town set your heads:

Yield, rustic mountaineer. 100

[Exeunt, fighting.]

Re-enter BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. No companies abroad?

Arv. None in the world: you did mistake him, sure.

Bel. I cannot tell: long is it since I saw him.

But time hath nothing blurr'd those lines of

favour

Which then he wore: the smatches in his voice

And burst of speaking, were as his: I am absolute

'Twas very Cloten.

Arv. In this place we left them:

I wish my brother make good time with him.

You say he is so fell.

Bel. Being scarce made up,

I mean, to man, he had not apprehension 110

Of roaring terrors; for the effect of judgment

Is oft the cause of fear. But, see, I

Re-enter GUIDERIUS, with CLOTEN's head.

Gui. This Cloten was a fool, an empty puny;

There was no money in't; not Hercules
Could have knock'd out his brains, for he had none:

Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne
My head as I do his.

Bel. What hast thou done?

Gui. I am perfect what: cut off one Cloten's head,
Son to the queen, after his own report;
Who call'd me traitor, mountaineer, and swore
With his own single hand he'd take us in, 121
Displace our heads where—thank the gods!—

And set them on Lard's-town.

Bel. We are all undone.
Gui. Why, worthy father, what have we to lose,

But that he swore to take, our lives? The law
Protects not us: then why should we be tender
To let an arrogant piece of flesh threaten us,
Play judge and executioner all himself,
For we do fear the law? What company
Discover you abroad?

Bel. No single soul 130
Can we set eye on; but in all safe reason
He must have some attendants. Though his humour

Was nothing but mutation, ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse; not frenzy, not Absolute madness could so far have raved
To bring him here alone; although perhaps
It may be heard at court that such as we
Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time
May make some stronger head; the which he hearing—

As it is like him—might break out, and swear
He'd fetch us in; yet is't not probable 141
To come alone, either he so undertaking,
Or they so suffering: then on good ground we fear.

If we do fear this body hath a tail
More perilous than the head.

Arv. Let ordinance
Come as the gods foresee it: howsoever,
My brother hath done well.

Bel. I had no mind
To hunt this day: the boy Fidele's sickness
Did make my way long forth.

Gui. With his own sword,
Which he did wave against my throat, I have 150
His head from him: I'll throw't into the creek
Behind our rock; and let it to the sea,
And tell the fishes he's the queen's son, Cloten:
That's all I reck. [Exit.]

Bel. I fear 'twill be revenged;
Would, Polydore, thou hadst not done't: though valour

Becomes thee well enough.
Arv. Would I had done't,
So the revenge alone pursued me! Polydore,
I love thee brotherly, but envy much Thou hast robb'd me of this deed: I would revenge.

That possible strength might meet, would seek us through 160
And put us to our answer.

Bel. Well, 'tis done:
We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger
Where there's no profit. I prithee, to our rock;
You and Fidele play the cooks: I'll stay
Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him
To dinner presently.

Arv. Poor sick Fidele!
I'll willingly to him: to gain his colour
I'll let a parish of such Clotens bleed,
And praise myself for charity. [Exit.]

Bel. O thou goddess, 160
Thou divine Nature, how thyself thou blam'st
In these two princely boys! They are as gentle
As zephyrs blowing below the violet,
Not wagging his sweet head; and yet as rough,
Their royal blood enchain'd, as the rudest wind,
That by the top doth take the mountain pine,
And make him stoop to the vale. 'Tis wonder
That an invisible instinct should frame them
To royalty unlearn'd, honour untaught,
Civility not seen from other, valour
That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop 180
As if it had been sow'd. Yet still it's strange
What Cloten's being here to us portends,
Or what his death will bring us.

Re-enter GUIDERIUS.

Gui. Where's my brother?
I have sent Cloten's clotpoll down the stream,
In embassy to his mother: his body's hostage
For his return. [Solemn music.]

Bel. My ingenious instrument!
Hark, Polydore, it sounds! But what occasion
Hath Cadwal now to give it motion? Hark!

Gui. Is he at home?
Bel. He went hence even now.
Gui. What does he mean! since death of my dear'st mother 190

It did not speak before. All solemn things Should answer solemn accidents. The matter!
Triumphs for nothing and lamenting toys
Is jollity for apes and grief for boys.
Is Cadwal mad?

Bel. Look, here he comes,
And brings the dire occasion in his arms.
Of what we blame him for.

Re-enter ARVIRAGUS, with INOCH, as dead, bearing her in his arms.

Arv. The bird is dead
That we have made so much on. I had rather
Have skip'd from sixteen years of age to-day,
To have turn'd my leaping-time into a crutch.
Than have seen this.

Gui. O sweetest, farewell! My
My brother wears thee not the one half so well
As when thou grew'st thyself.

Bel. O melancholy
Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? And
The ocean, to show what coast thy depths cover Might easiest harbour: but thou'st no thing!

Just knows what man thou shouldst have made; but I,
Then diedst, a most rare boy, of melancholy.

How found you him?

Arv. Stark, as you see:
Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled alumber,
Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at; his right cheek

Reposing on a cushion.

Gui. Where?

Arv. O' the floor;
His arms thus leagued: I thought he slept, and My clouted brogues from off my feet, whose rudeness
Answer'd my steps too loud.

Gui. Why, he but sleeps:
If he be gone, he'll make his grave a bed;
With female fairies will his tomb be haunted,
And worms will not come to thee.

Arv. With fairest flowers
Whilst summer lasts and I live here, Fidele,
I'll sweeten thy sad grave: thou shalt not lack
The flower that's like thy face, pale primrose, nor

The azure harebell, like thy veins, no, nor
The leaf of eglantine, whom not to slander,
Out-sweeten'd not thy breath: the ruddock would,

With charitable bill,—O bill, sore-shaming
Those rich-left heirs that let their fathers lie
Without a monument!—bring thee all this;
Yea, and turr'd moss besides, when flowers are none,

To winter-ground thy come.

Gui. Prithce, have done;
And do not play in wench-like words with that
Which is so serious. Let us bury him,
And not protract with admiration what
Is now due debt. To the grave!

Arv. Say, where shall 's lay him?
Gui. By good Euriphile, our mother.

Arv. Be't so:
And let us, Polydore, though now our voices
Have got the mannish crack, sing him to the ground,

As once our mother; use like note and words,
Save that Euriphile must be Fidele.

Gui. Cadwal,
I cannot sing: I'll weep, and word it with thee;
For notes of sorrow out of tune are worse
Than priests and fanes that lie.

Arv. We'll speak it, then.
Bel. Great griefs, I see, medicine the less;
for Cloten

Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys;
And though he came our enemy, remember
He was paid for that: though mean and mighty, rotting

Together, have one dust, yet reverence,
That angels of the world, doth make distinction Of place 'twixt high and low. Our foe was princely;

And though you took his life, as being our foe,
Yet bury him as a prince.

Gui. Pray you, fetch him hither.
The dead's body is as good as Ajax',
When neither are alive.

Arv. If you'll go fetch him.
We'll sing our song the whilst. Brother, begin.

[Exit Belarius.]

Gui. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the east;

My father hath a reason for't.

Arv. 'Tis true,
Gui. Come on then, and remove him.
Arv. So. Begin.

Song.

Gui. Fear no more the heat o' the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rages;
Thou thy worldly task hast done,
Home art gone, and 't'en thy wages:
Golden lads and girls all must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.

Arv. Fear no more the frown o' the great;
Thou art past the tyrant's stroke;
Care no more to clothe and eat;
To thee the reed is as the oak:
The sceptre, learning, physic, must
All follow this, and come to dust.

Gui. Fear no more the lightning-flash,
Arv. Nor the all-dreaded thunder-stone;

Gui. Fear not slander, censure rash;
Arv. Thou hast finish'd joy and moan;

Both. All lovers young, all lovers must Consign to thee, and come to dust.

Gui. No excoriser harm thee!
Arv. Nor no witchcraft charm thee!

Gui. Ghost unlaid forbear thee!
Arv. Nothing ill come near thee!

Both. Quiet consummation have;
And renowned be thy grave!

Re-enter BELARIUS, with the body of CLOTEN.

Gui. We have done our obsequies: come,
lay him down.

Bel. Here's a few flowers; but 'bout midnight, more:

The herbs that have on them cold dew o' the
night
Are strewings fitt'at for graves. Upon their faces.

You were as flowers, now wither'd: even so
These herbets shall, which I upon you strew.
Come on, away: apart upon our knees.

The ground that gave them first has them again:
Their pleasures here are past, so is their pain.

[Exit Belarius, Guidrius, and Arviragus.]

Imo. [Awaking] Yes, sir, to Milford-
Haven; which is the way!

I thank you.—By yond bush!—Pray, how far thither!

'Ods pittikins! can it be six mile yet?—
I have gone all night. 'Faith, I'll lie down and

But, soft! no bedfellow!—O gods and goddesses!

[Seeing the body of Cloten.]
These flowers are like the pleasures of the world;

This bloody man, the care on't. I hope I dream!

For so I thought I was a cave-keeper,
And took to honest creatures: but 'tis not so;

'Twas but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing;

Which the brain makes of fumes: our very
eyes
Are sometimes like our judgements, blind.
Good faith,

I tremble still with fear: but if there be
Yet left in heaven as small a drop of pity
As a wren's eye, fear'd gods, a part of it!
The dream's here still: even when I wake, it is Without me, as within me; not imagined, felt.
A headless man! The garments of Posthumus!
I know the shape of 's leg: this is his hand;
His foot Mercurial; his Martial thigh; 310
The brawns of Hercules: but his Jovial face—
Murder in heaven!—How!—'Tis gone. Pisanio,
All curses madd'd Hecuba gave the Greeks,
And mine to boot, be darted on thee! Thou,
Conspired with that irregular devil, Cloten,
Hast here cut off my lord. To write and read
Be henceforth treacherous! Damn'd Pisanio
Hath with his forged letters,—damn'd Pisanio—
From this most bravest vessel of the world
Struck the main-top! O Posthumus! alas, 320
Where is thy head! where's that! Ay me!
where's that!

Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the heart,
And left this head on. How should this be!

Pisanio!
'Tis he and Cloten: malice and lucre in them
Have laid this woe here. O, 'tis pregnant, pregnant!

The drug he gave me, which he said was precious

And cordial to me, have I not found it Murderous to the senses! That confirms it
home:

This is Pisanio's deed, and Cloten's: O!
Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood,
That we the horrid may seem to those 331
Which chance to find us: O, my lord, my lord!
[Falls on the body.]

Enter LUCIUS, a Captain and other Officers, and a Soothsayer.

Cap. To them the legions garrison'd in Gallia,

After your will, have cross'd the sea, attending
You here at Millford-Haven with your ships:
They are in readiness.

Luc. But what from Rome?
Cap. The senate hath stirr'd up the confiners
And gentlemen of Italy, most willing spirits,
That promise noble service: and they come
Under the conduct of bold Iachimo, 340
Syenna's brother.

Luc. When expect you them?
Cap. With the next benefit of the wind.

Luc. This forwardness
Makes our hopes fair. Command our present numbers

Be must'r'd; bid the captains look to 't. Now,
sir,

What have you dream'd of late of this war's purpose?

Sooth. Last night the very gods show'd me a vision—

I fast and pray'd for their

These vanish'd in the sunbeams: which portends— 350
Unless my sins abuse my divination—
Success to the Roman host.

Luc. Dream often so,
And never false. Soft, ho! what trunk is here Without his top! The ruin speaks that sometime
It was a worthy building. How! a page!
Or dead, or sleeping on him! But dead rather;
For nature doth abhor to make his bed
With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.
Let's see the boy's face.

Cap. He's alive, my lord.
Luc. He'll then instruct us of this body.

Young one, 360
Inform us of thy fortunes, for it seems
They crave to be demanded. Who is this Thou makest thy bloody pillow! Or who was he

That, otherwise than noble nature did, Hath alter'd that good picture! What's thy interest

In this sad wreck! How came it! Who is it!
What art thou!

Imo. I am nothing: or if not,
Nothing to be better. This was my master,
A very valiant Briton and a good,
That here by mountaineers lies slain. Alas! 370
There is no more such masters: I may wander
From east to occident, cry out for service,
Try many, all good, serve truly, never Find such another master.

Luc. 'Lack, good youth!
Thou movest no less with thy complaining than Thy master in bleeding: say his name, good friend.

Imo. Richard du Champ. [Aside] If I do lie and do

No harm by it, though the gods hear, I hope
They'll pardon it.—Say you, sir!

Luc. Thy name?
Imo. Fidele, sir.

Luc. Thou dost approve thyself the very

Thy name well fits thy faith, thy faith thy name.

Wilt take thy chance with me? I will not say
Thou shalt be so well master'd, but, be sure,
No less beloved. The Roman emperor's letters,
Sent by a consul to me, should not sooner
Than thine own worth prefer thee: go with me.

Imo. I'll follow, sir. But first, an't please the gods,

I'll hide my master from the flies, as deep
As these poor pickaxes can dig; and when
With wild wood-leaves and weeds I be strow'd his grave, 380

And on it said a century of prayers,
Such as I can, twice o'er, I'll weep and sigh;
And leaving so his service, follow you,
So please you entertain me.

Luc. Ay, good youth;
And rather father thee than master thee.
My friends,

The boy hath taught us mainly duties: let us
Find out the prettiest daisied plot we can,
And make him with our pines and partians

A grave: come, arm him. Boy, he is prefer'd
By thee to us, and he shall be interr'd.
As soldiers are. Be cheerful; wipe thine eyes:
Some falls are means the happier to arise.

[Exit.

SCENE III. A room in Cymbeline's palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, Lords, PIRANIO, and Attendants.

Cym. Again; and bring me word how 'tis with her. [Exit an Attendant.
A fever with the absence of her son,
A madness, of which her life's in danger.
Heavens,

How deeply you at once do touch me! Imogen,
The great part of my comfort, gone; my queen
Upon a desperate bed, and in a time
When fearful wars point at me; her son gone,
So needful for this present: it strikes me, past
The hope of comfort. But for thee, fellow,
Who needs must know of her departure and so Dost seem so ignorant, we'll enforce it from
thee
By a sharp torture.

Pis. Sir, my life is yours;
I humbly set it at your will; but, for my
mistress,
I nothing know where she remains, why gone, Nor when she purposes return. Beseech your highness,
Hold me your loyal servant.

First Lord. Good my liege,
The day that she was missing he was here:
I dare be bound he's true and shall perform
All parts of his subjection loyally. For Cloten,
There wants no diligence in seeking him, so
And will, no doubt, be found.

Cym. The time is troublesome.
[To Pisanio] We'll slip you for a season; but our jealousy
Does yet depend.

First Lord. So please your majesty,
The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn,
Are landed on your coast, with a supply
Of Roman gentlemen, by the senate sent.

Cym. Now for the counsel of my son and
queen!

I am amazed with matter.

First Lord. Good my liege,
Your preparation can affront no less Than what you hear of: come more, for more you're ready:
The want is but to put those powers in motion
That long to move.

Cym. I thank you. Let's withdraw;
And meet the time as it seeks us. We fear not What can from Italy annoy us; but We grieve at chances here. Away!

[Exit all but Pisanio.

Pis. I heard no letter from my master since
I wrote him Imogen was slain: 'tis strange:
Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise
To visit me often tidings; neither know I
What's said to Cloten; but remain
Perplex'd at all. The heavens still must work.
What I am false I am honest; not true, to myself.

These present wars shall find I love my country
Even to the note of the king, or I'll fall in them.
All other doubts, by time let them be clear'd:
Fortune brings in some boats that are not steer'd.

[Exit.

SCENE IV. Wales: before the cave of Belarius.

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Gui. The noise is round about us.

Bel. Let us from it.
Arv. What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to lock it

From action and adventure?

Gui. Nay, what hope
Have we in hiding us! This way, the Roman Must or for Britons slay us, or receive us
For barbarous and unnatural revolts
During their use, and slay us after.

Bel. Sons,
We'll higher to the mountains; there secure us
To the king's party there's no going: newness
Of Cloten's death—we being not known, not muster'd

Among the bands—may drive us to a render
Where we have lived, and so extort from 's that Which we have done, whose answer would be death

Drawn on with torture.

Gui. This is, sir, a doubt
In such a time nothing becoming you,
Nor satisfying us.

Arv. It is not likely
That when they hear the Roman horses neigh, Behold their quarter'd fires, have both their
eyes

And ears so cloy'd importantly as now,
That they will waste their time upon our note,
To know from whence we are.

Bel. O, I am known to
Of many in the army; many years,
Though Cloten then but young, you see, not wore him

From my remembrance. And, besides, the king
Hath not deserved my service nor your loves;

But to be still hot summer's tankings and
The shrinking slaves of winter.

Gui. Than he so
Better to cease to be. Pray, sir, to the army:
I and my brother are not known; yourself
So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown,
Cannot be question'd.

Arv. By this sun that shines,
I'll thither: what thing is it that I never Did see man die! scarce ever look'd on blood,
But that of coward hares, hot goats, and venison!

Never bestid a horse, save one that had
A rider like myself, who ne'er wore sword
Nor iron on his heel! I am ashamed
To look upon the holy sun, to have
The benefit of his blest beams, remaining

So long a poor unknown.

Gu. By heavens, I'll go:
If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave,
I'll take the better care, but if you will not,
The hazard therefore due fall on me by
The hands of Romans!

Arv. So say I: amen.
Bel. No reason I, since of your lives you set
So slight a valuation, should reserve
My crack'd one to more care. Have with you, boys! 50

If in your country wars you chance to die,
That is my bed too, lads, and there I'll lie:
Lead, lead. (Aside) The time seems long;
their blood thinks scorn,
Till it fly out and show them princes born.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I. Britain. The Roman camp.

Enter POSTHUMUS, with a bloody handkerchief.

Post. Yes, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee, for I wish'd
Thou shouldst be colour'd thus. You married ones,
If each of you should take this course, how many
Must murder wives much better than them-

For wrying but a little! O Pisanio!
Every good servant does not all commands:
No bond but to do just ones. Gods! if you Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I never

Had lived to put on this: so had you saved
The noble Imogen to repent, and struck 30 Me, wretch more worth your vengeance. But, alack,

You snatch some hence for little faults; that's
love,

To have them fall no more: you some permit
To second ill with ill, each elder worse,
And make them dread it, to the doom's thrift.
But Imogen is your own: do your best wills,
And make me blest to obey! I am brought hither

Among the Italian gentry, and to fight Against my lady's kingdom: 'tis enough
That, Britain, I have kill'd thy mistress; peace!
I'll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good
heavens,

Hear patiently my purpose: I'll disrobe me
Of these Italian weeds and suit myself
As does a Briton peasant: so I'll fight Against the part I come with; so I'll die
For thee, O Imogen, even for whom my life
Is every breath a death; and thus, unknown,
Pitied nor hated, to the face of peril
Myself I'll dedicate. Let me make men know
More valour in me than my habits show. 30
Gods, put the strength of the Leonati in me!
To shame the guise of the world, I will begin
The fashion, even without and more within.

SCENE II. Field of battle between the British and Roman camps.

Enter, from one side, LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and the Roman Army; from the other side, the British Army; LEONATUS POSTHUMUS following, like a poor soldier. They march over and go out. Then enter again, in skirmish, IACHIMO and POSTHUMUS: he vanquisheth and disarmeth IACHIMO, and then leaves him.

Iach. The heaviness and guilt within my bosom
Takes off my manhood: I have belied a lady,
The princess of this country, and the air on't
Revengefully enfeebles me; or could this oak,
A very drudge of nature's, have subdued me
In my profession! Knighthoods and honours, borne

As I wear mine, are titles but of scorn.
If that thy gentry, Britain, go before
This lout as he exceeds our lords, the odds
Is that we scarce are men and you are gods. 20
[Exit.]

The battle continues; the Britons fly; CYMBELINE is taken; then enter, to his rescue, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. Stand, stand! We have the advantage of the ground;
The lane is guarded: nothing routs us but
The villany of our fears.

Gui. } Stand, stand, and fight!
Arv. }

Re-enter POSTHUMUS, and seconds the Britons: they rescue CYMBELINE, and exeunt. Then re-enter LUCIUS, and IACHIMO, with BROKEN.

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save thyself;
For friends kill friends, and the disorder's such
As war were hoodwink'd.

Iach. 'Tis their fresh supplies.
Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely: or betimes
Let's re-inforce, or fly. [Re-ent.]

SCENE III. Another part of the field.

Enter POSTHUMUS and a British Lord.

Lord. Camest thou from where they made the stand!

Post. I did:

Lord. I did.
Post. No blame be to you, sir; for all was lost.

But that the heavens fought: the king himself
Of his wings destitute, the army broken,
And but the backs of Britons seen, all flying Through a strait lane; the enemy had been Lolling the tongue with slaughtering, having work

More plentiful than tools to do't, struck down
Some mortally, some slightly wounded, some falling Merrily through fear; that the stout part was dismantled.

With dead men hurt behind, and cowards living
To die with lengthen'd shame.

Lord. Where was this lane?

Post. Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf;

Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier,
An honest one, I warrant; who deserved
So long a breeding as his white beard came to,
In doing this for's country; ahward the lane,
He, with two striplings—lads more like to run
The country base than to commit such
slaughter;

With faces fit for masks, or rather fairer
Than those for preservation cased, or shame,— Made good the passage; cried to those that fled.

'Our Britain's hearts die flying, not our men:
To darkness fleet souls that fly backwards.
Stand:

Or we are Romans and will give you that Like beasts which you shun beastly, and may save,

But to look back in frown: staid, stand.'
These three,

Three thousand confident, in act as many—
For three performers are the file when all
The rest do nothing—with this word 'Stand,
stand.'

Accommodated by the place, more charming
With their own nobleness, which could have turn'd

A distaff to a lance, gilded pale looks,
Part shame, part spirit renew'd; that some,
turn'd

But by example—O, a sin in war,
Damn'd in the first beginners!—gan to look
The way that they did, and to grin like lions
Upon the pikes o' the hunters. Then began
A stop i' the chaser, a retire, anon

A rout, confusion thick; forthwith they fly Chickens, the way which they stoop'd eagles;
slaves,

The strides they victors made: and now our
cowards,

Like fragments in hard voyages, became
The life o' the need: having found the backdoor open

Of the unguarded hearts, heavens, how they wound!

Some slain before; some dying; some their
friends

O'er-borne i' the former wave: ten, chased by one,

Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty:
Those that would die or ere resist are grown
The mortal bugs o' the field.

Lord. This was strange chance:
A narrow lane, an old man, and two boys.

Post. Nay, do not wonder at it: you are made

Rather to wonder at the things you hear
Than to work any. Will you rhyme upon't,

And vent it for a mockery? Here is one:
'Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane,
Preserved the Britons, was the Romans' bane.'

Lord. Nay, be not angry, sir.
Post. Lack, to what end?

Who does not stand his foe, I'll be his friend;

For if he'll do as he is made to do,
I know he'll quickly fly my friendship too.

You have put me into rhyme.

Lord. Farewell; you're angry
Post. Still going! [Exit Lord.] This is a lord! O noble misery,

To be i' the field, and ask 'what news' of me
To-day how many would have given their honours

To have saved their carcasses! took heel to do't
And yet died too! I, in mine own woe charm'd Could not find death where I did hear him groan.

Nor feel him where he struck: being an ugly monster,

'Tis strange he hides him in fresh cups, soft beds,

Sweet words; or hath more ministers than we That draw his knives i' the war. Well, I will find him:

For being now a favourer to the Briton,
No more a Briton, I have resumed again

The part I came in: fight I will no more,
But yield me to the veriest hind that shall

Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter is Here made by the Roman; great the answer he Britons must take. For me, my ransom's
death;

On either side I come to spend my breath;
Which neither here I'll keep nor bear again,
But end it by some means for Imogen.

Enter two British Captains and Soldiers.

First Cap. Great Jupiter be praised! Lucius is taken.

'Tis thought the old man and his sons were angels.

Sec. Cap. There was a fourth man, in a silly habit,

That gave the affront with them.

First Cap. So 'tis reported:
But none of 'em can be found. Stand! who's there!

Post. A Roman,
Who had not now been drooping here, if seconds

Had answer'd him.

Sec. Cap. Lay hands on him; a dog!
A leg of Rome shall not return to tell

What crows have peck'd them here. He brags his service

As if he were of note: bring him to the king.

Enter CYMBELINE, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS,
ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, Soldiers, Attendants, and Roman Captives. The Captains present

POSTHUMUS to CYMBELINE, who delivers him over to a Gauler: then account on.

SCENE IV. A British prison.

Enter POSTHUMUS and two Gaulers.

First Gaul. You shall not now be stoln;
you have locks upon you;

So grass as you find pasture.

Sec. Gaul. Ay, or a stomach.
[Account Gaulers.]

Post. Most welcome, bondage! for thou art
a way,
I think, to liberty; yet am I better Than one that's sick o' the gout; since he had rather

Groan so in perpetuity than be cured
By the sure physician, death, who is the key To unbar these locks. My conscience, thou art fetter'd

More than my shanks and wrists: you good gods, give me

The penitent instrument to pick that bolt, 10
Then, free for ever! Is't enough I am sorry!
So children temporal fathers do appease;
Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent!
I cannot do it better than in gyves,
Desired more than constrain'd: to satisfy,
If of my freedom 'tis the main part, take
No stricter render of me than my all.

I know you are more clement than vile men,
Who of their broken debtors take a third,
A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again 20
On their abatement: that's not my desire:
For Imogen's dear life take mine; and though
'Tis not so dear, yet 'tis a life; you coin'd it:
'Tween man and man they weigh not every stamp;

Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake:
You rather mine, being yours: and so, great
powers,

If you will take this audit, take this life,
And cancel these cold bonds. O Imogen!
I'll speak to thee in silence. [Sleeps.]

Solemn music. Enter, as in an apparition, SICILIUS LEONATUS, father to Posthumus, an old man, attired like a warrior; leading in his hand an ancient matron, his wife, and mother to Posthumus, with music before them; then, after other music, follow the two young LEONATI, brothers to Posthumus, with wounds as they died in the wars. They circle POSTHUMUS round, as he lies sleeping.

Sici. No more, thou thunder-master, show 30
Thy spite on mortal flies:
With Mars fall out, with Juno chide,
That thy adulteries

Rates and revenges.

Hath my poor boy done aught but well,

Whose face I never saw!

I died whilst in the womb he stay'd

Attending nature's law:

Whose father then, as men report

Thou orphan's father art, 40

Thou shouldst have been, and shielded
him

From this earth-revexing smart.

Moth. Lucina lent not me her aid,
But took me in my throes;
That from me was Posthumus ript,
Came crying 'mongst his foes,
A thing of pity!

Sici. Great nature, like his ancestry,
Moulded the stuff so fair,
That he deserved the praise o' the world,
As great Sicilius' heir.

First Bro. When once he was mature for man,
In Britain where was he
That could stand up his parallel;
Or fruitful object be
In eye of Imogen, that best
Could deem his dignity!

Moth. With marriage wherefore was he mock'd,
To be exiled, and thrown
From Leonati seat, and cast 60
From her his dearest one,
Sweet Imogen!

Why did you suffer Iachimo,
Slight thing of Italy,
To taint his nobler heart and brain
With needless jealousy;
And to become the geck and scorn
O' th' other's villany!

Sec. Bro. For this from stiller seats we came,
Our parents and us twain, 70
That striking in our country's cause
Fell bravely and were slain.
Our fealty and Tenantius' right
With honour to maintain.

First Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus hath
To Cymbeline perform'd:
Then, Jupiter, thou king of gods,
Why hast thou thus adjourn'd
The graces for his merits due,
Being all to dolours turn'd? 80

Sici. Thy crystal window ope: look out;
No longer exercise
Upon a valiant race thy harsh
And potent injuries.

Moth. Since, Jupiter, our son is good,
Take off his miseries.

Sici. Peep through thy marble mansion; help:
Or we poor ghosts will cry
To the shining synod of the rest
Against thy deity. 90

Both Bro. Help, Jupiter: or we appeal,
And from thy justice fly.

JUPITER descends in thunder and lightning, sitting upon an eagle: he throws a thunderbolt. The Ghosts fall on their knees.

Jup. No more, you petty spirits of region
low,
Offend our hearing; hush! How dare you

Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt, you know,
Sky-planted batters all rebelling coasts!
Poor shadows of Elysium, hence, and rest
Upon your never-withering banks of flow'ers:
Be not with mortal accidents oppress'd; 90

No care of yours it is; you know 'tis ours.
Whom best I love I cross; to make my gift,
The more delay'd, delighted. Be content;
Your low-laid son our goodness will uplift:

His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent.
Our Jovial star reign'd at his birth; and in Our temple was he married. Since, and since

He shall be lord of lady Imogen,
And happier much by his affliction made.
This tablet lay upon his breast, wherein
Our pleasure his fall fortune doth continue.

And so, away : no further with your din :
Express impatience, lest you stir up mine.
Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline.

[Ascends.]

Sic. He came in thunder; his celestial
breath
Was sulphurous to smell : the holy eagle
Stoop'd, as to foot us : his ascension is More sweet than our blest fields : his royal bird
Prunes the immortal wing and cloyes his beak,
As when his god is pleased.

All. Thanks, Jupiter !

Sic. The marble pavement closes, he is enter'd
His radiant roof. Away ! and, to be blest,
Let us with care perform his great behest.

[The Ghosts vanish.]

Post. [Waking] Sleep, thou hast been a grandaira, and begot
A father to me ; and thou hast created
A mother and two brothers ; but, O scorn !
Gone ! they went hence so soon as they were born :

And so I am awake. Poor wretches that depend
On greatness' favour dream as I have done,
Wake and find nothing. But, alas, I swerve :
Many dream not to find, neither deserve,
And yet are steep'd in favours ; so am I,
That have this golden chance and know not why.

What fairies haunt this ground ! A book ! O rare one !

Be not, as is our fangled world, a garment
Nobler than that it covers : let thy effects
So follow, to be most unlike our courtiers,
As good as promises.

[Re-enters] When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air ; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock and freshly grow ; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate and flourish in peace and plenty.

'Tis still a dream, or else such stuff as madmen
Tongue and brain not ; either both or nothing ;
Or senseless speaking or a speaking such
As sense cannot untie. Be what it is,
The action of my life is like it, which
I'll keep, if but for sympathy.

Re-enter Gaoler.

First Gaol. Come, sir, are you ready for
death !

Post. Over-roasted rather ; ready long ago.
First Gaol. Hanging is the word, sir : if you be ready for that, you are well cooked.

Post. So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators, the dish pays the debt.

First Gaol. A heavy reckoning for you, sir.
But the custom is, you shall be called to no more accounts, for no more tavern-bills ; which are often the sadness of parting, as the procuring of them : you come in faint for want of meat, and yet making with too much drink ;
some say you have paid too much, and sorry that you are paid too much ; purse and brain both empty ; the brain the heavier for being too light, the purse too light, being drawn of heaviness : of this contradiction you shall now be quit. O, the charity of a penny cord ! it sums up thousands in a trice : you have no true debtor and creditor but it ; of what's past, is,

and to come, the discharge : your neck, sir, is pen, book and counters ; so the acquittance follows.

Post. I am merrier to die than thou art to live.

First Gaol. Indeed, sir, he that sleeps feels not the tooth-ache : but a man that were to sleep your sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed, I think he would change places with his officer ; for, look you, sir, you know not which way you shall go.

Post. Yes, indeed do I, fellow.

First Gaol. Your death has eyes in 's head then ; I have not seen him so pictured : you must either be directed by some that take upon them to know, or to take upon yourself that which I am sure you do not know, or jump the after inquiry on your own peril ; and how you shall speed in your journey's end, I think you'll never return to tell one.

Post. I tell thee, fellow, there are none want eyes to direct them the way I am going, but such as wink and will not use them.

First Gaol. What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes to see the way of blindness ! I am sure hanging's the way of winking.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Knock off his manacles ; bring your prisoner to the king.

Post. Thou bring'st good news ; I am called to be made free.

First Gaol. I'll be hang'd then.

Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a gaoler ;
no bolts for the dead.

[Exeunt all but the First Gaoler.]

First Gaol. Unless a man would marry a gallows and begot young gibbets, I never saw one so prone. Yet, on my conscience, there are verier knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman ; and there be some of them too that die against their wills ; so should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good ; O, there were decolation of gaolers and gallowses ! I speak against my present profit, but my wish hath a preferment in't.

[Exit.]

SCENE V. Cymbeline's tent.

*Enter CYMBELINE, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS,
ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, Lords, Officers, and Attendants.*

Cym. Stand by my side, you whom the gods have made

Preservers of my throne. Woe is my heart
That the poor soldier that so richly fought,
Whose rags shamed gilded arms, whose naked
breast

Stepp'd before targes of proof, cannot be found :

He shall be happy that can find him, if
Our grace can make him so.

Bel. I never saw
Such noble fury in so poor a thing;
Such precious deeds in one that promised nought
But beggary and poor looks.

Cym. No tidings of him? ¹⁰
Pis. He hath been search'd among the dead and living,
But no trace of him.

Cym. To my grief, I am
The heir of his reward; [To Belarius, Guido-rius, and Arrivagus] which I will add
To you, the liver, heart and brain of Britain,
By whom I grant she lives. 'Tis now the time
To ask of whence you are. Report it.

Bel. Sir,
In Cambria are we born, and gentlemen:
Further to boast were neither true nor modest,
Unless I add, we are honest.

Cym. Bow your knees.
Arise my knights o' the battle: I create you ²⁰
Companions to our person and will fit you
With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter CORNELIUS and Ladies.

There's business in these faces. Why so sadly Greet you our victory? I look like Romans,
And not o' the court of Britain.

Cor. Hail, great king!
To sour your happiness, I must report
The queen is dead.

Cym. Who worse than a physician

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her ³⁰
life,
Which, being cruel to the world, concluded
Most cruel to herself. What she confess'd
I will report, so please you: these her women
Can trip me, if I err; who with wet cheeks
Were present when she finish'd.

Cym. Prithee, say.
Cor. First, she confess'd she never loved you, only

Affected greatness got by you, not you:
Married your royalty, was wife to your place;
Abhor'd your person.

Cym. She alone knew this: ⁴⁰
And, but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand to love

With such integrity, she did confess
Was as a scorpion to her sight; whose life,
But that her flight prevented it, she had Ta'en off by poison.

Cym. O most delicate fiend!

Who is't can read a woman? Is there more?

Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess ⁴⁵
she had

For you a mortal mineral; which, being took,
Should by the minute feed on life and lingering,
By inches waste you: in which time she pur-

By watching, weeping, tending

O'ercome you with her show, and in time,
When she had fitted you with her craft, to
work

Her son into the adoption of the crown;
But, failing of her end by his strange absence,
Grew shameless-desperate; open'd, in despite
Of heaven and men, her purposes; repented
The evils she hatch'd were not effected; so ⁵⁰
Despairing died.

Cym. Heard you all this, her women?
First Lady. We did, so please your highness.

Cym. Mine eyes
Were not in fault, for she was beautiful;
Mine ears, that heard her flattery; nor my
heart,
That thought her like her seeming; it had been vicious

To have mistrusted her: yet, O my daughter!
That it was folly in me, thou mayst say,
And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all!

Enter LUCIUS, LACHIMO, the Soothsayer, and other Roman Prisoners, guarded; POSTHU-MUS behind, and IMOGEN.

Thou comest not, Caius, now for tribute; that The Britons have razed out, though with the loss ⁷⁰

Of many a bold one; whose kinsmen have made suit

That their good souls may be appeased with slaughter

Of you their captives, which ourself have granted:

So think of your estate.

Luc. Consider, sir, the chance of war: the

Was yours by accident; had it gone with us,
We should not, when the blood was cool, have threaten'd

Our prisoners with the sword. But since the gods

Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives
May be call'd ransom, let it come: sufficient so

A Roman with a Roman's heart can suffer:
Augustus lives to think on't; and so much

For my peculiar care. This one thing only
I will entreat; my boy, a Briton born,

Let him be ransom'd: never master had
A page so kind, so dutious, diligent,

So tender over his occasions, true,
So fast, so nurse-like: let him virtue join

With my request, which I'll make bold your highness

Cannot deny; he hath done us Britons harm, so
Though he have served a Roman: save him,

And spare no blood beside.

Cym. I have surely seen him:
His favour is familiar to me. Boy,

Thou hast look'd thyself into my glass,
And art mine own. I know not who, wherefore,

To say 'live, boy:' ne'er thank thy master:
live:

And ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt,
Selling my beauty and thy state, I'll give it;
Yea, though thou do demand a princess.

The noblest is'en.

Imo. I humbly thank your highness. 100
Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good lad;
And yet I know thou wilt.

Imo. No, no: a lack,
There's other work in hand: I see a thing
Bitter to me as death: your life, good master,
Must shuffle for itself.

Luc. The boy disdains me.
He heaves me, scorns me: briefly die their joys
That place them on the truth of girls and boys.
Why stands he so perplex'd?

Cym. What wouldst thou, boy?
I love thee more and more: think more and
more

What's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st on? I speak, 110

Will have him live? Is he thy kin? thy friend?

Imo. He is a Roman; no more kin to me Than I to your highness; who, being born your vassal,

Am something nearer.

Cym. Wherefore eyest him so?

Imo. I'll tell you, sir, in private, if you
please

To give me hearing.

Cym. Ay, with all my heart,
And lend my best attention. What's thy name?

Imo. Fidele, sir.

Cym. Thou'rt my good youth, my page;
I'll be thy master: walk with me; speak freely.

[Cymbeline and Imogen converse apart.]

Bel. Is not this boy reviv'd from death?

Arv. One and another 120

Not more remembers that sweet rosy lad

Who died, and was Fidele. What think you?

Gus. The same dead thing alive.

Bel. Peace, peace! see further; he eyes us not; forbear;

Creatures may be alike: were't he, I am sure
He would have spoke to us.

Gus. But we saw him dead.

Bel. Be silent; let's see further.

Pis. [Aside] It is my mistress:

Since she is living, let the time run on

To good or bad.

[Cymbeline and Imogen come forward.]

Imo. Come, stand thou by our side;

He thy demand aloud. [To Iachimo] Sir,

stop you forth; 130

Give answer to this boy, and do it freely;

Or, by our greatness and the grace of it,

Which is our honour, bitter torture shall Winnow the truth from falsehood. On, speak

to him.

Imo. My boon is, that this gentleman may render

Of whom he had this ring.

Post. [Aside] What's that to him?

Cym. That diamond upon your finger, say

How came it yours?

Iach. Thou'lt torture me to leave unspoken

that

Which, to be spoke, would torture thee.

Cym. How! 140

Iach. I am glad to be constrain'd to utter

that

Which torments me to conceal. By villainy
I got this ring: 'twas Leonatus' jewel;

Whom thou didst banish; and—which more may grieve thee,

As it doth me—a nobler sir ne'er lived
'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more

my lord?

Cym. All that belongs to this.

Iach. That paragon, thy daughter,—
For whom my heart drops blood, and my falsprints

Quall to remember— Give me leave; I faint.

Cym. My daughter! what of her? Renew thy strength: 15

I had rather thou shouldst live while nature

will

Than die ere I hear more: strive, man, and

speak.

Iach. Upon a time,—unhappy was the clock

That struck the hour!—it was in Rome,—accursed

The mansion where!—'twas at a feast,—O

would

Our viands had been poison'd, or at least

Those which I heaved to head!—the good Post

humus—

at should I say! he was too good to be

Where ill men were; and was the best of all

Amongst the rarest of good ones,—sitting sadly,

Hearing us praise our loves of Italy 16

For beauty that made barren the swell'd boast

Of him that best could speak, for feature

laming

The shrine of Venus, or straight-pight Minerva

Postures beyond brief nature, for condition,

A shop of all the qualities that man

Loves woman for, besides that hook of wiving

Fairness which strikes the eye—

Cym. I stand on fire

Come to the matter.

Iach. All too soon I shall,

Unless thou wouldst grieve quickly. This Post

humus,

Most like a noble lord in love and one

That had a royal lover, took his hint;

And, not disparaging whom we praised,—therein

He was as calm as virtue—he began

His mistress' picture; which by his tongue

being made,

And then a mind put in't, either our brags

Were crack'd of kitchen-trulls, or his description

Proved us unspeaking poets.

Cym. Nay, nay, to the purpose

Iach. Your daughter's chastity—there it begins.

He spoke of her, as Dian had hot dreams, 18

And she alone were cold: whereas I, wretch,

Made scruple of his praise; and wags'd with

him

Pieces of gold 'gainst this which then he wore

Upon his honour'd finger, to attain

In suit the place of's bed and win this ring

By hers and mine adultery. He, true knight,

No less of her honour confident

Than I did truly find her: stakes this ring;

And would so, had it been a carbuncle 19

Of Phoebus' wheel, and might so safely, had it

Been all the worth of 's car. Away to Britain
Post I in this design: well may you, sir,
Remember me at court; where I was taught
Of your chaste daughter the wide difference Twixt amorous and villanous. Being thus quench'd

Of hope, not longing, mine Italian brain
Gan in your duller Britain operate
Most vilely: for my vantage, excellent;
And, to be brief, my practice so prevail'd,
That I return'd with simular proof enough
To make the noble Leonatus mad,
By wounding his belief in her renown
With tokens thus, and thus; averring notes
Of chamber-hanging, pictures, this her bracelet,—

O cunning, how I got it!—nay, some marks
Of secret on her person, that he could not
But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd,
I having ta'en the forfeit. Whereupon—
Methinks, I see him now—

Post. [Advancing] Ay, so thou dost,
Italian fiend! Ay me, most credulous fool, 210
Egregious murderer, thief, any thing
That's due to all the villans past, in being,
To come! O, give me cord, or knife, or poison,
Some upright justice! Thou, king, send out
For torturers ingenious: it is I
That all the abhorred things o' the earth amend
By being worse than they. I am Posthumus,
That kill'd thy daughter:—villain-like, I lie—
That caused a lesser villain than myself,
A sacrilegious thief, to do 't: the temple 220
Of virtue was she; yea, and she herself.
Spit, and throw stones, cast mire upon me, set
The dogs o' the street to bay me: every villain
Be call'd Posthumus Leonatus; and
Be villany less than 'twas! O Imogen!
My queen, my life, my wife! O Imogen,
Imogen, Imogen!

Imo. Peace, my lord; hear, hear—
Post. Shall's have a play of this! Thou scornful page,

There lie thy part. [Striking her: she falls.]

Pis. O, gentlemen, help!

Mine and your mistress! O, my lord Posthumus!

You ne'er kill'd Imogen till now. Help, help!
Mine honour'd lady!

Cym. Does the world go round?

Post. How come these staggers on me?

Pis. Wake, my mistress!

Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me

To death with mortal joy.

Pis. How fares my mistress?

Imo. O, get thee from my sight;

Thou gavest me poison: dangerous fellow,
hence!

Breathes not where princes are.

Cym. The tune of Imogen!

Pis. Lady,

The gods throw stones of sulphur on me, if 230
That box I gave you was not thought by me
A precious thing: I had it from the queen.

Cym. New matter still!

Imo. It poison'd me.

Cor. O gods!

I left out one thing which the queen confess'd,
Which must approve thee honest: 'If Placidio
Have' said she 'given his mistress that confection

Which I gave him for cordial, she is served
As I would serve a rat.'

Cym. What's this, Cornelius!

Cor. The queen, sir, very oft importuned
me

To temper poisons for her, still pretending 240
The satisfaction of her knowledge only
In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs,
Of no esteem: I, dreading that her purpose
Was of more danger, did compound for her
A certain stuff, which, being ta'en, would cease
The present power of life, but in short time
All offices of nature should again
Do their due functions. Have you ta'en of it?

Imo. Most like I did, for I was dead.

Bel. My boys,

There was our error.

Gut. This is, sure, Fidele. 250

Imo. Why did you throw your wedded lady from you?

Think that you are upon a rock; and now
Throw me again. [Embracing him.]

Post. Hang there like fruit, my soul,

Till the tree die!

Cym. How now, my flesh, my child!

What, makest thou me a dullard in this act?

Wilt thou not speak to me?

Imo. [Kneeling] Your blessing, sir.

Bel. [To Guiderius and Arviragus] Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not;

You had a motive for 't.

Cym. My tears that fall

Prove holy water on thee! Imogen,

Thy mother's dead.

Imo. I am sorry for 't, my lord. 260

Cym. O, she was naught; and long of her it was

That we meet here so strangely: but her son is gone, we know not how nor where.

Pis. My lord,

Now fear is from me, I'll speak truth. Lord

Cloten,

Upon my lady's missing, came to me

With his sword drawn; foam'd at the mouth, and swore,

If I discover'd not which way she was gone,
it was my instant death. By accident,

I had a feigned letter of my master's

Then in my pocket; which directed him 270
To seek her on the mountains near to Milford;

Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments,
Which he enforced from me, away he posted

With unchaste purpose and with oath to violate
My lady's honour: what became of him
I further know not.

Gut. Let me end the story:

I slew him there.

Cym. Marry, the gods forbid!

I would not thy good deeds should from any lips

Fluck a hard sentence: prithee, valiant youth,
Deny't again.

Gut. I have spoke it, and I did it. 280

Cym. He was a prince.

Gen. A most incivil one: the wrongs he did me
Were nothing prince-like; for he did provoke me
With language that would make me spurn the

See.
If it could so roar to me: I cut off's head;
And am right glad he is not standing here
To tell this tale of mine.

Cym. I am sorry for thee:
By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and must Endure our law: thou'rt dead.

Imo. That headless man
I thought had been my lord.

Cym. Bind the offender, 300
And take him from our presence.

Bel. Stay, sir, king:
This man is better than the man he slew,
As well descended as thyself; and hath
More of thee merited than a band of Clotens Had ever scar for. [To the Guard] Let his arms alone;

They were not born for bondage.
Cym. Why, old soldier,

Wilt thou unde the worth thou art unpaid for,
By tasting of our wrath? How of descent
As good as we?

Arr. In that he spake too far.
Cym. And thou shalt die for't.

Bel. We will die all three 310
But I will prove that two on's are as good
As I have given out him. My sons, I must,
For mine own part, unfold a dangerous speech,
Though, haply, well for you.

Arr. Your danger's ours.
Gui. And our good his.

Bel. Have at it then, by leave.
Thou hadst great king, a subject who Was call'd Belarius.

Cym. What of him? he is
A banish'd traitor.

Bel. He it is that hath Assumed this age; indeed a banish'd man;
I know not how a traitor.

Cym. Take him hence: 320
The whole world shall not save him.

Bel. Not too hot
First pay me for the nursing of thy sons;
And let it be confiscate all, so soon
As I have received it.

Cym. Nursing of my sons!
Bel. I am too blunt and saucy: here's my knee;

Ere I arise, I will prefer my sons;
Then spare not the old father. Mighty sir,
These two young gentlemen, that call me father
And think they are my sons, are none of mine;
They are the issue of your loins, my liege, 330
And blood of your begetting.

Cym. How! my issue!
Bel. No sure as you your father's. I, old

Am ~~that~~ whom you sometime

Your ~~father~~ was my more offence, my punishment, and all my treason; that I suffer'd

Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes—

For such and so the
Have I train'd up; I Could put into them; my breeding was, sir,

nurse, Euriphile, 339

Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children

Upon my banishment: I moved her to't,
Having received the punishment before,
For that which I did then: beaten for loyalty
Excited me to treason: their dear loss,
The more of you 'twas felt, the more it shaped Unto my end of stealing them. But, gracious
sir,

Here are your sons again; and I must lose
Two of the sweet'st companions in the world.
The benediction of these covering heavens 350
Fall on their heads like dew! for they are worthy

To inlay heaven with stars.
Cym. Thou weep'st, and speak'st.

The service that you three have done is more
Unlike than this thou tell'st. I lost my children:
If these be they, I know not how to wish
A pair of worthier sons.

Bel. Be pleased awhile.
This gentleman, whom I call Polydore,
Most worthy prince, as yours, is true Guiderius:
This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arviragus, 355
Your younger princely son; he, sir, was lapp'd
In a most curious mantle, wrought by the hand
Of his queen mother, which for more probation
I can with ease produce.

Cym. Guiderius had Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine star;
It was a mark of wonder.

Bel. This is he;
Who hath upon him still that natural stamp:
It was wise nature's end in the donation,
To be his evidence now.

Cym. O, what, am I
A mother to the birth of three? Ne'er mother Rejoiced deliverance more. Blest pray you be,
That, after this strange starting from your oris,
You may reign in them now! O Imogen,
Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.

Imo. No, my lord!
I have got two worlds by't. O my gentle
brothers,

Have we thus met! O, never say hereafter
But I am truest speaker: you call'd me brother,
When I was but your sister; I you brothers,
When ye were so indeed.

Cym. Did you e'er meet?
Arr. Ay, my good lord.

Gui. And at first meeting loved:
Continued so, until we thought he died. 360

Cor. By the queen's dream she swallow'd.
Cym. O rare instinct!

When shall I hear all through! This ~~these~~ abridgement

Hath to it circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in. Where! how lived you?

And when came you to serve our Roman captive?

How parted with your brothers! how first met
them?

Why fled you from the court! and whither!

These,
And your three motives to the battle, with
I know not how much more, should be demanded;

And all the other by-dependencies, 300
From chance to chance: but nor the time nor place

Will serve our long inter'gatories. See,
Posthumus anchors upon Imogen,
And she, like harmless lightning, throws her eye

On him, her brothers, me, her master, hitting Each object with a joy: the counterchange is severally in all. Let's quit this ground,
And smoke the temple with our sacrifices.

[To Belarius] Thou art my brother; so we'll hold thee ever.

Ima. You are my father too, and did relieve
me, 400

To see this gracious season.

Cym. All o'erjoy'd,
Save these in bonds: let them be joyful too,
For they shall taste our comfort.

Ima. My good master,
I will yet do you service.

Luc. Happy be you!
Cym. The forlorn soldier, that so nobly fought,

He would have well become this place, and graced

The thankings of a king.

Post. I am, sir,
The soldier that did company these three
In poor beseeching; 'twas a fitment for 400
The purpose I then follow'd. That I was he, Speak, Imogen: I had you down and might have made you finish.

Ima. [Kneeling] I am down again:
But now my heavy conscience sinks my knee,
As then your force did. Take that life, beseech

Which I so often owe: but your ring first;
And here the bracelet of the truest princess
That ever swore her faith.

Post. Kneel not to me:
The power that I have on you is to spare you;
The malice towards you to forgive you: live,
And deal with others better.

Cym. Nobly doom'd! 420
We'll learn our freeness of a son-in-law;
Post. 'Tis the word to all.

Arr. You help us, sir,
As you did mean indeed to be our brother;
Joy'd are we that you are.

Post. Your servant, princes. Good my lord of Rome,

Call forth your soothsayer: as I slept, me-
thought

Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back'd,
Appear'd to me, with other spritely shows
Of mine own kindred: when I waked, I found This label on my bosom: whose containing is so from sense in hardness, that I can Make no collection of it: let him show
His skill in the construction. 430

Luc. Philomonus!

South. Here, my good lord.

Luc. Read, and declare the meaning.

South. [Reads] 'When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be join'd to the old stock, and freshly grow; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate and flourish in peace and plenty.'

Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp;
The fit and apt construction of thy name,
Being Leo-natus, doth import so much.

[To Cymbeline] The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter,

Which we call 'mollis aer'; and 'mollis aer'
We term it 'muller'; which 'muller' I divine
Is this most constant wife; who, even now,

Answering the letter of the oracle, 450
Unknown to you, unsought, were clipp'd about
With this most tender air.

Cym. This hath some meaning.

South. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline,
Personates thee: and thy lopp'd branches point
Thy two sons forth; who, by Belarius stol'n,
For many years thought dead, are now revived,
To the majestic cedar join'd, whose issue
Promises Britain peace and plenty.

Cym. Well;
My peace we will begin. And, Calus Lucius,

Although the victor, we submit to Cesar, 460
And to the Roman empire; promising
To pay our wonted tribute, from the which
We were dissuaded by our wicked queen;

Whom heavens, in justice, both on her and
here,

Have laid most heavy hand.

South. The fingers of the powers above do tune

The harmony of this peace. The vision Which I made known to Lucius, ere the stroke

Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant is full accomplish'd; for the Roman eagle, 470
From south to west on wing soaring aloft,
Lessen'd herself, and in the beams of the sun
So vanish'd: which forebode'd our princely

The imperial Cesar, should again unite
His favour with the radiant Cymbeline,

Which shines here in the west.

Cym. Laud we the gods;
And let our crooked smoke climb to their nostrils

From our blest altars. Publish we this peace
To all our subjects. Set we forward; let 480
A Roman and a British ensign wave Friendly together; so through Rome's town march:

And in the temple of great Jupiter
Our peace we'll ratify; seal it with oaths Set on there! Never was a war so soon See bloody hands were wash'd with a peace. 490

GOWER, as Chorus.

SCENE: Dispersedly in various countries.

ACT I

Enter GOWER.

Before the palace of Antioch.

To sing a song that old was sung,
 From ashes ancient Gower is come;
 Assuming man's infirmities,
 To glad your ear, and please your eyes.
 It hath been sung at festivals,
 On ember-eves and holy-ales;
 And lords and ladies in their lives
 Have read it for restoratives:
 The purchase is to make men glorious;
 Et bonum quo antiquius, eo melius.
 If you, born in these latter times,
 When wit's more ripe, accept my rhymes,
 And that to hear an old man sing
 May to your wishes pleasure bring,
 I like would wish, and that I might Waste it for you, like taper-light.
 This Antioch, then, Antiochus the Great
 Built up, this city, for his chiefest seat;
 The fairest in all Syria.
 I tell you what mine authors say:
 This king unto him took a fere,
 Who died and left a female heir,
 So besome, blithe, and full of face,
 As heaven had lent her all his grace;
 With whom the father liking took,
 And her to incest did provoke:
 Bad child; worse father! to entice his own
 To evil should be done by none:
 But curious what they did begin
 Was with long use account no sin.
 The beauty of this sinful dame
 Made many princes thither frame,
 To seek her as a bed-fellow,
 In marriage-pleasures play-fellow:

Which to prevent he made a law,
 To keep her still, and men in awe,
 That whoso ask'd her for his wife,
 His riddle told not, lost his life:
 So for her many a wight did die,
 As you grim looks do testify,
 What now ensues, to the judgement of your
 eye
 I give, my cause who best can justify. [Exit.]

SCENE I. Antioch. A room in the palace.

Enter ANTIOCHUS, PRINCE PERICLES, and followers.

Ant. Young prince of Tyre, you have at large received
 The danger of the task you undertake.
Per. I have, Antiochus, and, with a soul
 Embolden'd with the glory of her praise,
 Think death no hazard in this enterprise.
Ant. Bring in our daughter, clothed like a bride,
 For the embracements even of Jove himself;
 At whose conception, till Lucina reign'd,
 Nature this dowry gave, to glad her presence,
 The senate-house of planets all did sit,
 To knit in her their best perfections.

Music. Enter the Daughter of Antiochus.

Per. See where she comes, apparel'd like the spring.
 Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the king
 Of every virtue gives renown to man!
30 Her face the book of praises, where is read Nothing but curious pleasures, as from thence Borrow were ever raised, and tasty wrath
 Could never be her mild companion.
 You gods that made me man, and sway in love,

That have inflamed desire in my breast 20
To taste the fruit of yon celestial tree,
Or die in the adventure, be my helps.
As I am son and servant to your will,
To compass such a boundless happiness!

Ant. Prince Pericles,—

Per. That would be son to great Antiochus.
Ant. Before thee stands this fair Hesperides,
With golden fruit, but dangerous to be touch'd;
For death-like dragons here affright thee hard;
Her face, like heaven, enticeth thee to view 30
Her countless glory, which desert must gain;
And which, without desert, because thine eye
Presumes to reach, all thy whole heap must die.

Yon sometimes famous princes, like thyself,
Drawn by report, adventurous by desire,
Tell thee, with speechless tongues and semblance pale,

That without covering, save yon field of stars,
Here they stand martyrs, slain in Cupid's wars;
And with dead cheeks advise thee to desist
For going on death's net, whom none resist. 40

Per. Antiochus, I thank thee, who hath taught

My frail mortality to know itself,
And by those fearful objects to prepare
This body, like to them, to what I must;
For death remember'd should be like a mirror,
Who tells us life's but breath, to trust it error.
I'll make my will then, and, as sick men do
Who know the world, see heaven, but, feeling
woe,

Gripe not at earthly joys as erst they did;
So I bequeath a happy peace to you 50
And all good men, as every prince should do;
My riches to the earth from whence they came;
But my unspotted fire of love to you.

[To the daughter of Antiochus.

Thus ready for the way of life or death,
I wait the sharpest blow, Antiochus.

Ant. Scorning advice, read the conclusion,
then:

Which read and not expounded, 'tis decreed,
As these before thee thou thyself shalt bleed.

Daugh. Of all say'd yet, mayst thou prove prosperous!

Of all say'd yet, I wish thee happiness! 60

Per. Like a bold champion, I assume the risk,

Nor ask advice of any other thought but faithfulness and courage.

He reads the riddle.

I am no viper, yet I feed
On mother's flesh which did me breed.

I sought a husband, in which labour
I found that kindness in a father:

He's father, son, and husband mild;

I mother, wife, and yet his child.

How they may be, and yet in two,

As you will live, resolve it you.

Sharp physic is the last: but, O you powers
That give heaven countless eyes to view men's acts,

Why cloud they not their sights perpetually,
If this be true, which makes me pale to read it Fair glass of light, I loved you, and could still,
[of the hand of the Princess.

Were not this glorious casket: with ill;
But I must tell you, now my revolt;
For he's no man on whom I wait 70
That, knowing sin within, will touch the gate:
You are a fair viol, and your sense the strings;
Who, finger'd to make man his lawful music,
Would draw heaven down, and all the gods, to hearken;

Hell only danceth at so harsh a chime.

Good sooth, I care not for you.

Ant. Prince Pericles, touch not, upon thy
life,

For that's an article within our law,
As dangerous as the rest. Your time's expired:
Either expound now, or receive your sentence.

Per. Great king,

Few love to hear the sins they love to act: 80

'Twould braid yourself too near for me to tell it.

Who has a book of all that monarchs do,
He's more secure to keep it shut than shown:

For vice repeated is like the wandering wind,
Blows dust in others' eyes, to spread itself;

And yet the end of all is bought thus dear:
The breath is gone, and the sore eyes see clear

To stop the air would hurt them. The blind
mole casts 100

Copp'd hills towards heaven, to tell the earth is throng'd

man's oppression; and the poor worm doth die for't.

Kings are earth's gods; in vice their law's their
will;

And if Jove stray, who dares say Jove doth ill?

It is enough you know; and it is fit,

What being more known grows worse, to smother it.

All love the womb that their first being bred,
Then give my tongue like leave to love my head.

Ant. [Aside] Heaven, that I had thy head!

he has found the meaning:

But I will gloss with him.—Young prince of Tyre, 120

Though by the tenour of our strict edict,
Your exposition misinterpreting,

We might proceed to cancel of your days;
Yet hope, succeeding from so fair a tree

As your fair self, doth tune us otherwise:
Forty days longer we do respite you;

If by which time our secret be undone,
This mercy shows we'll joy in such a son:

And until then your entertain shall be
As doth befit our honour and your worth. 130

[Exeunt all but Pericles.

Per. How courtesy would seem to cover sin,
When what is done is like an hypocrite,

The which is good in nothing but in sight!

If it be true that I interpret false,

Then were it certain you were not so bad

As with foul incest to abuse your soul;

Where now you're both a father and a

By your untimely clasping with your

Which pleasure fits an husband, not a

And she an eater of her mother's flesh;

By the dealing of her parent's bed;

And both like serpents ate, who though they feed

On sweetest flowers, yet they poison breed.
 Antioch, farewell! for wisdom sees, those men
 Blush not in actions blacker than the night,
 Will shun no course to keep them from the

One sin, I know, another doth provoke;
 Murder's as near to lust as flame to smoke:
 Poison and treason are the hands of sin,
 Ay, and the targets, to put off the shame: 140
 Then, lest my life be cropp'd to keep you clear,
 By flight I'll shun the danger which I fear.
 [Exit.]

Re-enter ANTIOCHUS.

Ant. He hath found the meaning, for which we mean
 To have his head.
 He must not live to trumpet forth my infamy,
 Nor tell the world Antiochus doth sin
 In such a loathed manner;
 And therefore instantly this prince must die;
 For by his fall my honour must keep high.
 Who attends us there!

Enter THALIARD.

Thal. Doth your highness call? 150
 Ant. Thaliard,
 You are of our chamber, and our mind partakes
 Her private actions to your secrecy;
 And for your faithfulness we will advance you.
 Thaliard, behold, here's poison, and here's
 gold;
 We hate the prince of Tyre, and thou must kill
 him:
 It fits thee not to ask the reason why,
 Because we bid it. Say, is it done?
 Thal. My lord,
 'Tis done.
 Ant. Enough. 160

Enter a Messenger.

Let your breath cool yourself, telling your haste.
 Mess. My lord, prince Pericles is fled. [Exit.]
 Ant. As thou
 Wilt live, fly after; and like an arrow shot
 From a well-experienced archer hits the mark
 His eye doth level at, so thou ne'er return
 Unless thou say 'Prince Pericles is dead.'
 Thal. My lord,
 If I can get him within my pistol's length, I'll make him sure enough: so, farewell to your highness.
 Ant. Thaliard, adieu! [Exit Thal.] Till
 Pericles be dead, 170
 My heart can lend no succour to my head.
 [Exit.]

SCENE II. Tyre. A room in the palace.

Enter PERICLES.

Per. [To Lords without] Let none disturb me. Why should this change of thoughts,
 The sick-suspension, dull-ear melancholy,
 Be my to-morrow's guest as not an
 In the day's glorious walk, or ye
 That would more grief should sleep, can beget?

Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine eyes shun them.

And danger, which I fear'd, is at Antioch,
 Whose arm seems far too short to hit me here:
 Yet neither pleasure's art can joy my spirits,
 Nor yet the other's distance comfort me. 10
 Then it is thus: the passions of the mind,
 That have their first conception by mis-dread,
 Have after-nourishment and life by care;
 And what was first but fear what might be done,
 Grows elder now and cares it be not done.
 And so with me: the great Antiochus,
 'Gainst whom I am too little to contend,
 Since he's so great can make his will his act,
 Will think me speaking, though I swear to silence:

Nor boots it me to say I honour him,
 If he suspect I may dishonour him:
 And what may make him in being
 known,
 He'll stop the course by which it might be known:
 With hostile forces he'll o'erspread the land,
 And with the ostent of war will look so huge,
 Amazement shall drive courage from the state;
 Our men be vanquish'd ere they do resist,
 And subjects punish'd that ne'er thought offence:
 Which care of them, not pity of myself,
 Who am no more but as the tops of trees, 30
 Which fence the roots they grow by and defend
 them,
 Makes both my body pine and soul to languish,
 And punish that before that he would punish.

Enter HELICANUS, with other Lords.

First Lord. Joy and all comfort to your sacred breast!
 Sec. Lord. And keep your mind, till you return to us,
 Peaceful and comfortable!
 Hel. Peace, peace, and give experience
 tongue.
 They do abuse the king that flatter him:
 For flattery is the bellows blows up sin;
 The thing the which is flatter'd, but a spark, 40
 To which that blast gives heat and stronger glowing:
 Whereas reproof, obedient and in order,
 Fits kings, as they are men, for they may err.
 When Signior Sooth here does proclaim a peace,
 He flatters you, makes war upon your life.
 Prince, pardon me, or strike me, if you please;
 I cannot be much lower than my knees.
 Per. All leave us else; but let your cares o'erlook
 What shipping and what lading's in our haven,
 And then return to us. [Exeunt Lords.] Hel-canus, thou 50
 Hast moved us: what avert thou in our looks?
 Hel. An angry brow, dread lord.
 Per. If there be such a dart in prison's frowns,
 How durst thy tongue move anger to our face?
 Hel. How dare the plants look up to heaven, from whence
 They have their nourishment?
 Per. Thou know'st I have power

To take thy life from thee.

Hel. [Kneeling] I have ground the axe myself;

Do you but strike the blow.

Per. Rise, prithee, rise.
Sit down: thou art no flatterer:

I thank thee for it; and heaven forbid
That kings should let their ears hear their faults hid!

Fits counsellor and servant for a prince,
Who by thy wisdom makest a prince thy servant.

What wouldst thou have me do?

Hel. To bear with patience
Such griefs as you yourself do lay upon yourself.

Per. Thou speak'st like a physician, Helicanus.

That minister'st a potion unto me
That thou wouldst tremble to receive thyself.

Attend me, then: I went to Antioch,
Where as thou know'st, against the face of
death,

I sought the purchase of a glorious beauty,
From whence an issue I might propagate,
† Are arms to princes, and bring joys to subjects.

Her face was to mine eye beyond all wonder;
The rest—hark in thine ear—as black as incest:
Which by my knowledge found, the sinful
father

Seem'd not to strike, but smooth: but thou know'st this,

'Tis time to fear when tyrants seem to kiss.

Which fear so grew in me, I hither fled,
Under the covering of a careful night,

Who seem'd my good protector; and, being
here,

Bethought me what was past, what might succeed.

I knew him tyrannous; and tyrants' fears
Decrease not, but grow faster than the years:

And should he doubt it, as no doubt he doth,
That I should open to the listening air

How many worthy princes' bloods were shed,
To keep his bed of blackness unlaid open,

To lop that doubt, he'll fill this land with arms,
And make pretence of wrong that I have done
him;

When all, for mine, if I may call offence,
Must feel war's blow, who spares not innocence:

Which love to all, of which thyself art one,
Who now repovest me for it,—

Hel. Alas, sir!

Per. Draw sleep out of mine eyes, blood from my cheeks.

Musings into my mind, with thousand doubts
How I might stop this tempest ere it came;

And finding little comfort to relieve them,
I thought it princely charity to grieve them.

Hel. Well, my lord, since you have given me leave to speak,

Freshly will I speak. Antiochus you fear,
And justly too, I think, you fear the tyrant,

Who either by public war or private treason
Will take away your life.

Therefore, my lord, go travel for a while,
Till that his anger and anger be forgot.

Or till the Destinies do cut his thread of life,
Your rule direct us any; if he sue,

Day serves not flight more faithful than I'll be.
Per. I do not doubt thy faith;

But should he wrong my liberties in my absence?

Hel. We'll mingle our bloods together in the earth,

From whence we had our being and our birth.

Per. Tyre, I now look from thee then, and to Tarsus

Intend my travel, where I'll hear from thee;
And by whose letters I'll dispose myself.

The care I had and have of subjects' good
On thee I lay, whose wisdom's strength can bear it.

I'll take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath:
Who shuns not to break one will sure carry
both:

But in our orbs we'll live so round and safe,
That time of both this truth shall never convince,

Thou show'd'st a subject's shine, I a true prince.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Tyre. An ante-chamber in the palace.

Enter THALIARD.

Thal. So, this is Tyre, and this the court.
Here must I kill King Pericles; and if I do it not, I am sure to be hanged at home: 'tis dangerous. Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow, and had good discretion, that, being bid to ask what he would of the king, desired he might know none of his secrets: now do
I see he had some reason for't; for if a king bid a man be a villain, he's bound by the indenture of his oath to be one. Hush! here come the lords of Tyre.

Enter HELICANUS and ESCANES, with other Lords of Tyre.

Hel. You shall not need, my fellow peers of Tyre,

Further to question me of your king's departure:

His seal'd commission, left in trust with me,
Doth speak sufficiently he's gone to travel.

Thal. [Aside] How! the king gone!

Hel. If further yet you will be satisfied,
Why, as it were unseasonable of your loves,
He would depart, I'll give some light unto you.
Being at Antioch—

Thal. [Aside] What from Antioch?

Hel. Royal Antiochus—on what cause I know not—

Took some displeasure at him; at least he judged so;

And doubting lest that he had err'd or slurr'd,
To show his sorrow, he did correct himself;

So sent himself unto the shipmen's hall,
With whom each minute threatens life or death.

Thal. [Aside] Well, I perceive
I shall not be hang'd now, although I would;

But since he's gone, 'tis the king's sign must
please:

He reap'd the land, to punish at the sea;
I'll present myself. Pardon to the lords of Tyre!

Hel. Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is welcome.

Thal. From him I come
With message unto princely Pericles;
But since my landing I have understood
Your lord has betook himself to unknown travels.

My message must return from whence it came.

Hel. We have no reason to desire it,
Commended to our master, not to us;
Yet, ere you shall depart, this we desire. 39
As friends to Antioch, we may feast in Tyre.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Tarsus. A room in the Governor's house.

Enter CLEON, the governor of Tarsus, with DIONYZA, and others.

Cle. My Dionyza, shall we rest us here,
And by relating tales of others' griefs,
See if 'twill teach us to forget our own?

Dio. That were to blow at fire in hope to quench it;

For who digs hills because they do aspire
Throws down one mountain to cast up a higher.
O my distressed lord, even such our griefs are;
Here they're but felt, and seen with mischief's
eyes,

But like to groves, being topp'd, they higher rise.

Cle. O Dionyza, 70
Who wanteth food, and will not say he wants it,
Or can conceal his hunger till he famish?
Our tongues and sorrows do sound deep
Our woes into the air; y our eyes do weep,
Till tongues fetch breath that may proclaim them louder;

That, if heaven slumber while their creatures
want,

They may awake their helps to comfort them.
I'll then discourse our woes, felt several years,
And wanting breath to speak help me with tears.

Dio. I'll do my best, sir. 20

Cle. This Tarsus, o'er which I have the government,
A city on whom plenty held full hand,
For riches strew'd herself even in the streets;
Whose towers bore heads so high they kiss'd
the clouds,

And strangers ne'er beheld but wonder'd at;
Whose men and dames so jetted and adorn'd,
Like one another's glass to trim them by:
Their tables were stored full, to glad the sight,
And not so much to feed on as delight;
All poverty was scorn'd, and pride so great, 30
The name of help grew odious to repeat.

Dio. O, 'tis too true.

Cle. But see what heaven can do! By this our change,

Those mouths, who but of late, earth, sea, and
air,

Were all too little to content and please,
Although they gave their creatures in abundance,

As houses are defiled for want of use,
They are now starved for want of exercise:

Those palates who, not yet two summers younger,

Must have inventions to delight the taste, 40
Would now be glad of bread, and beg for it:
Those mothers who, to nuzzle up their babes,
Thought nought too curious, are ready now
To eat those little darlings whom they loved.
So sharp are hunger's teeth, at man and wife
Draw lots who first shall die to lengthen life:
Here stands a lord, and a lady weeping;
Here many sink, yet those which see them fall
Have scarce strength left to give them burial.
Is not this true?

Dio. Our cheeks and ho eyes do witness it.

Cle. O, let those cities that of plenty's cup
And her prosperities so largely taste,
With their superfluous riots, hear these tears!
The misery of Tarsus may be theirs.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Where's the lord governor?

Cle. Here.
Speak out thy sorrows which thou bring'st in
haste,

For comfort is too far for us to expect.

Lord. We have descried, upon our neighbouring shore, 60

A portly sail of ships make hitherward.

Cle. I thought as much.
One sorrow never comes but brings an heir,
That may succeed as his inheritor;
And so in ours: some neighbouring nation,
Taking advantage of our misery,
Hath stuff'd these hollow vessels with their
power,

To beat us down, the which are down already;
And make a conquest of unhappy me,

Whereas no glory's got to overcome. 70

Lord. That's the least fear; for, by the semblance
Of their white flags display'd, they bring us
peace,

And come to us as favourers, not as foes.

Cle. Thou speak'st like him's untutor'd to repeat:

Who makes the fairest show means most deceit.
But bring they what they will and what they can,

What need we fear?

The ground's the lowest, and we are half way
there.

Go tell their general we attend him here,
To know for what he comes, and whence he comes. 80

And what he craves.

Lord. I go, my lord. [Exit.]

Cle. Welcome is peace, if he on peace consist;

If wars, we are unable to resist.

Enter PERICLES with Attendants.

Per. Lord governor, for so we hear you are,
Let not our ships and number of our men
Be like a beacon fired to amaze your eyes.
We have heard your miseries as far as Tyre,
And seen the desolation of your streets:
Nor come we to add sorrow to your tears, 90

But to relieve them of their heavy load ;
And these our ships, you happily may think
Are like the Trojan horse was stuff'd within
With bloody veins, expecting overthrow,
Are stored with corn to make your needy bread,
And give them life whom hunger starved half
dead.

All. The gods of Greece protect you !
And we'll pray for you.

Per. Arise, I pray you, rise :
We do not look for reverence, but for love, 99
And harbourage for ourself, our ships, and men.

Cle. The which when any shall not gratify,
Or pay you with unthankfulness in thought,
Be it our wives, our children, or ourselves,
The curse of heaven and men succeed their evils !

Till when,—the which I hope shall ne'er be seen,—

Your grace is welcome to our town and us.

Per. Which welcome we'll accept ; feast
here awhile,

Until our stars that frown lend us a smile.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Here have you seen a mighty king
His child, I wis, to incest bring ;
A better prince and benign lord,
That will prove awful both in deed and word.
Be quiet then as men should be,
Till he hath pass'd necessity,
I'll show you those in troubles reign,
Losing a mite, a mountain gain.
The good in conversation,
To whom I give my benison, 11
Is still at Tarsus, where each man Thinks all is writ he spoken can ;
And, to remember what he does,
Build his statue to make him glorious ;
But tidings to the contrary
Are brought your eyes ; what need speak I !

DUMB SHOW.

Enter at one door PERICLES talking with CLEON ; all the train with them. Enter at another door a Gentleman, with a letter to PERICLES ; PERICLES shows the letter to CLEON ; gives the Messenger a reward, and knights him. Exit PERICLES at one door, and CLEON at another.

Good Helicane, that stay'd at home.
Not to eat honey like a drone
From others' labours ; for though he strive
To killen bad, keep good alive ;
And to fulfil his prince's desire,
Sends word of all that haps in Tyre ;
How Thaliard came full bent with sin
And had intent to murder him ;
And that in Tarsus was not best
Longer for him to make his rest.
He, doing so, put forth to sea,
Where when men seen, there's soldiers sent
For now the wind begins to blow ;

Thunder above and deeps below 30
Make such unquiet, that the ship
Should house him safe is wreck'd and split ;
And he, good prince, having all lost,
By waves from coast to coast is tost :
All perisher of man, of poll,
Ne aught escapes but himself ;
Till fortune, tired with doing bad,
Threw him ashore, to give him glad ;
And here he comes. What shall be next,
Pardon old Gower,—this longs the text. 40
[Exit.]

SCENE I. Pentapolis. An open place by the sea-side.

Enter PERICLES, wet.

Per. Yet cease your ire, you angry stars of
heaven !
Wind, rain, and thunder, remember, earthly
man
Is but a substance that must yield to you ;
And I, as fits my nature, do obey you :
Alas, the sea hath cast me on the rocks,
Wash'd me from shore to shore, and left me
breath
Nothing to think on but ensuing death :
Let it suffice the greatness of your powers
To have bereft a prince of all his fortunes ;
And having thrown him from your watery grave, 10
Here to have death in peace is all he'll crave.

Enter three Fishermen.

First Fish. What, ho, Pilch !

Sec. Fish. Ha, come and bring away the nets !

First Fish. What, Patch-breech, I say !

Third Fish. What say you, master !

First Fish. Look how thou stirrest now !
come away, or I'll fetch thee with a wanton.

Third Fish. Faith, master, I am thinking of the poor men that were cast away before us even now. 20

First Fish. Alas, poor souls, it grieved my heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us to help them, when, well-a-day, we could scarce help ourselves.

Third Fish. Nay, master, said not I as much when I saw the porpus how he bounc'd and tumbled ! they say they're half fish, half flesh ;
a plague on them, they ne'er come but I look to be washed. Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea. 30

First Fish. Why, as men do a-land ; the great ones eat up the little ones : I can compare our rich misers to nothing so fit as to a whale ; a plays and tumbles, driving the poor fry before him, and at last devours them all at a mouthful ; such whales have I heard on o' the land, who never leave gaping till they've swallowed the whole parish, church, alehouse, bells, and all.

Per. [Aside] A pretty moral.

Third Fish. But, master, if I had been the scurion, I would have been that day in the belly. 41

Sec. Fish. Why, man!

Third Fish. Because he should have swallowed me too; and when I had been in his belly, I would have kept such a jangling of the bells, that he should never have left, till he cast bells, steeple, church, and parish, up again. But if the good King Simonides were of my mind,—

Per. [Aside] Simonides!

Third Fish. We would purge the land of these drones, that rob the bees of her honey.

Per. [Aside] How from the finny subject of the sea

These fishers tell the infirmities of men;

And from their watery empire recollect

All that may men approve or men detect!

Peace be at your labour, honest fishermen.

Sec. Fish. Honest! good fellow, what's that? If it be a day fits you, I search out of the calendar, and nobody look after it.

Per. May see the sea hath cast upon your coast.

Sec. Fish. What a drunken knave was the sea to cast thee in our way!

Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind,

In that vast tennis-court, have made the ball

For them to play upon, entreats you pity him;

He asks of you, that never used to beg.

First Fish. No, friend, cannot you beg? Here's them in our country of Greece gets more with begging than we can do with working.

Sec. Fish. Canst thou catch any fishes, then?

Per. I never practised it.

Sec. Fish. Nay, then thou wilt starve, sure; for here's nothing to be got now-a-days, unless thou canst fish for't.

Per. What I have been I have forgot to know;

But what I am, want teaches me to think on:

A man throng'd up with cold: my veins are chill,

And have no more of life than may suffice

To give my tongue that heat to ask your help;

Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead, so

For that I am a man, pray see me buried.

First Fish. Die quoth-a! Now gods forbid!

I have a gown here; come, put it on; keep thee warm. Now, afore me, a handsome fellow!

Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for holidays, fish for fasting-days, and more or puddings and flap-jacks, and thou shalt be welcome.

Per. I thank you, sir.

Sec. Fish. Hark you, my friend; you said you could not beg.

Per. I did but grave.

Sec. Fish. But grave! Then I'll turn craver too, and so I shall escape whipping.

Per. Why, are all your beggars whipped,

then?

Sec. Fish. O, not all, my friend, not all; for if all your beggars were whipped, I would wish no better office than to be beadle. But, master,

I'll go show up the net.

Per. [Exit with Third Fisherman.]

Sec. Fish. Now will this house smirch with my labour!

First Fish. Hark you, sir, do you know where ye are?

Per. Not well.

First Fish. Why, I'll tell you; this is called Pentapolis, and our—

Per. The good King Simonides, do you call

him?

First Fish. Ay, sir; and he deserves so to be called for his peaceable reign and good government.

Per. He is a happy king, since he gains from his subjects the name of good by his government. How far is his court distant from this shore?

First Fish. Marry, sir, half a day's journey;

and I'll tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and to-morrow is her birth-day; and there are princes and knights come from all parts of the world to just and tourney for her love.

Per. Were my fortunes equal to my desire,

I could wish to make one there.

First Fish. O, sir, things must be as they may; and what a man cannot get, he may lawfully deal for—his wife's soul.

Re-enter Second and Third Fishermen, drawing up a net.

Sec. Fish. Help, master, help! here's a fish hangs in the net, like a poor man's right in the law; 'twill hardly come out. Ha! boys on't, 'tis come at last, and 'tis turned to a rusty armour.

Per. An armour, friends! I pray you, let me see it.

Thanks, fortune, yet, that, after all my crosses,

Thou givest me somewhat to repair myself;

And though it was mine own, part of my heritage.

Which my dead father did bequeath to me,

With this strict charge, even as he left his life,

'Keep it, my Pericles; it hath been a shield

'Twixt me and death;—and pointed to this brace;—

'For that it saved me, keep it; in like necessity—

The which the gods protect thee from!—may defend thee.

It kept where I kept, I so dearly loved it;

Till the rough seas, that spare not any man,

Took it in rage, though calm'd have given it

again:

I thank thee for't: my shipwreck now's no ill,

Since I have here my father's gift in's will.

First Fish. What mean you, sir?

Per. To beg of you, kind friends, this coat of worth,

For it was sometime target to a king;

I know it by this mark. He loved me dearly,

And for his sake I wish the having of it;

And that you'd guide me to your sovereign's court.

Where with it I may appear a gentleman;

And if that ever my low fortune's better,

I'll pay your bounties; till then rest your debtor.

First Fish. Why, wilt thou tourney for the

lady?

Per. I'll show the virtue I have borne in arms.

First Fish. Why, do 'e take it, and the gods give thee good on't!

Sec. Fish. Ay, but hark you, my friend; 'twas we that made up this garment through the rough seams of the waters; there are certain condolements, certain vails. I hope, sir, if you thrive, you'll remember from whence you had it.

Per. Believe 't, I will.

By your furtherance I am clothed in steel; 160
And, spite of all the rapture of the sea,
This jewel holds his building on my arm:
Unto thy vaine I will mount myself
Upon a courser, whose delightful steps
Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread.
Only, my friend, I yet am unprovided
Of a pair of bases.

Sec. Fish. We'll sure provide: thou shalt have my best gown to make thee a pair; and I'll bring thee to the court myself. 170

Per. Then honour be but a goal to my will,

This day I'll rise, or else add ill to ill. [Exit.

SCENE II. The same. A public way or platform leading to the lists. A pavilion by the side of it for the reception of the King, Princess, Lords, &c.

Enter SIMONIDES, THAISA, Lords, and Attendants.

Sim. Are the knights ready to begin the triumph?

First Lord. They are, my liege; And stay your coming to present themselves.

Sim. Return them, we are ready; and our daughter.

In honour of whose birth these triumphs are,
Sits here, like beauty's child, whom nature gat
For men to see, and seeing wonder at.

[Exit a Lord.

Thai. It pleaseth you, my royal father, to express

My commendations great, whose merit's less.

Sim. It's fitt it should be so: for princes are
A model, which heaven makes like to itself: 11
As jewels lose their glory if neglected,
So princes their renowns if not respected.
Tell your honour, daughter, to explain
The labour of each knight in his device.

Thai. Which, to preserve mine honour, I'll perform.

Enter a Knight; he passes over, and his Squire presents his shield to the Princess.

Sim. Who is the first that doth prefer himself?

Thai. A knight of Sparta, my renowned father;

And the device he bears upon his shield
Is a black Ethiop's teaching at the sun: 20

The word, 'Lax ou vira mela.'

Sim. He loves you well that holds his life
Of you.

[The second knight passes:
Who is the second that presents himself?

Thai. A prince of Macedon, my royal father;
And the device he bears upon his shield
Is an arm'd knight that's conquer'd by a lady;
The motto thus, in Spanish, 'Fin por defuera que por fuerza.'

[The third knight passes over.

Sim. And what's the third?

Thai. The third of Antioch;
And his device, a wreath of chivalry;

The word, 'Me pompes proveri apex.' 30

[The fourth knight passes over.

Sim. What is the fourth?

Thai. A burning torch that's turned upside down;

The word, 'Quod me alit, me exinguit.'

Sim. Which shows that beauty hath his power and will.

Which can as well inflame as it can kill.

[The fifth knight passes over.

Thai. The fifth, an hand environed with clouds,

Holding out gold that's by the touchstone tried;

The motto thus, 'Sic spectanda fides.'

[The sixth knight, Pericles, passes over.

Sim. And what's
The sixth and last, the which the knight himself 40

With such a graceful courtesy deliver'd?

Thai. He seems to be a stranger; but his present is

A wither'd branch, that's only green at top;

The motto, 'In hac spe vivo.'

Sim. A pretty moral;
From the dejected state wherein he is,
He hopes by you his fortunes yet may flourish.

First Lord. He had need mean better than his outward show

Can any way speak in his just commend;

For by his rusty outside he appears 50
To have practised more the whiptock than the lance.

Sec. Lord. He well may be a stranger, for he comes

To an honour'd triumph strangely

Third Lord. And on set purpose let amour rust

Until this day, to scour it in the dust.

Sim. Opinion's but a fool, that unless it scan

The outward habit by the inward man.

But stay, the knights are coming: we will withdraw

Into the gallery. [Exit.

[Great shouts within, and all cry 'The mean knight!'

SCENE III. The same. A hall of state;
a banquet prepared.

Enter SIMONIDES, THAISA, Lords, Attendants, and Knights, from within.

Sim. Knights,
To say you're welcome were superfluous;
Tapers upon the velvet of your cheeks
As in a title-page, your countenances
Were more than your names; and your names still in use.

Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast :
You are princes and my guests.

Thai. But you, my knight and guest ;
To whom this wreath of victory I give,
And crown you king of this day's happiness.

Per. 'Tis more by fortune, lady, than by merit.

Sim. Call it by what you will, the day is yours ;

And here, I hope, is none that envies it.
In framing an artist, art hath thus decreed,
To make some good, but others to exceed ;
And you are her labour'd scholar. Come, queen o' the feast,—

For, daughter, so you are,—here take your place :

Marshal the rest, as they deserve their grace.

Knight. We are honour'd much by good Simonides.

Sim. Your presence glads our days : honour we love ;

For who hates honour hates the gods above.

Marshal. Sir, yonder is your place.

Per. Some other is more fit.

First Knight. Contend not, sir ; for we are gentlemen

That neither in our hearts nor outward eyes
Envy the great nor do the low despise.

Per. You are right courteous knights.

Sim. Sit, sir, sit.

Per. By Jove, I wonder, that is king of thoughts,

These cates resist me, she but thought upon.

Thai. By Juno, that is queen of marriage,
All viands that I eat do seem unsavoury,

Wishing him my meat. Sure, he's a gallant gentleman.

Sim. He's but a country gentleman ;
Has done no more than other knights have done ;

Has broken a staff or so ; so let it pass.

Thai. To me he seems like diamond to

Per. You king's to me like to my father's picture,
Which tells me in that glory once he was ;

Had princes sit, like stars, about his throne,
And he the sun, for them to reverence ;

None that beheld him, but, like lesser lights,
Did veil their crowns to his supremacy ;

Where now his son's like a glow-worm in the night,

The which hath fire in darkness, none in light :
Whereby I see that Time's the king of men,

He's both their parent, and he is their grave,

And gives them what he will, not what they crave.

Sim. What are you merry, knights ?

Knight. Who can be other in this royal presence !

Sim. Here, with a cup that's stored unto the brim,—

As you do love, fill to your mistress' lips,—

We drink this health to you.

Knight. We thank your grace.

Sim. Yet pause awhile :
You knights do sit too melancholy.

As ~~the~~ entertainment in our court

Had not a show might countervail his worth.
Note it not you, Thais !

Thai. What is it

To me, my father ?

Sim. O, attend, my daughter :
Princes in this should live like gods above,

Who freely give to every one that comes
To honour them ;

And princes not doing so are like to gnats,
Which make a sound, but kill'd are wonder'd at.

Therefore to make his entrance more sweet,
Here, say we drink this standing-bowl of wine

to him.

Thai. Alas, my father, it befits not me
Unto a stranger knight to be so bold :

He may my proffer take for an offence,
Since men take women's gifts for impudence.

Sim. How !

Do as I bid you, or you 'll move me else.

Thai. [Aside] Now, by the gods, he could not please me better.

Sim. And furthermore tell him, we desire to know of him,

Of whence he is, his name and parentage.

Thai. The king my father, sir, has drunk to you.

Per. I thank him.

Thai. Wishing it so much blood unto your life.

Per. I thank both him and you, and pledge him freely.

Thai. And further he desires to know of you,

Of whence you are, your name and parentage.

Per. A gentleman of Tyre ; my name,

Pericles ;
My education been in arts and arms ;

Who, looking for adventures in the world,
Was by the rough seas rift of ships and men,

And after shipwreck driven upon this shore.

Thai. He thanks your grace ; names himself

Pericles,
A gentleman of Tyre,

Who only by misfortune of the seas
Bereft of ships and men, cast on this shore.

Sim. Now, by the gods, I pity his misfortune,

And will awake him from his melancholy.

Come, gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles,
And waste the time, which looks for other revels.

Even in your armour, as you are address'd,
Will very well become a soldier's dance.

I will not have excuse, with saying this
Loud music is too harsh for ladies' heads,

Since they love men in arms as well as beds.

[The Knights dance.]

So, this was well said, 'twas so well perform'd.

Come, sir ;
Here is a lady that wants breathing too :

And I have heard, you knights of Tyre
Are excellent in making ladies trip ;

And that their measures are as excellent.

Per. In those that practise them, they are my lord.

Sim. O, that's as much as you would be desired

Of your fair courtesy.

[The Knights and Ladies dance.

Unclasp, unclasp :

Thanks, gentlemen, to all; all have done well,
[To Per.] But you the best. Pages and lights, to conduct

These knights unto their several lodgings! [To

Per.] Yours, sir,

We have given order to be next our own.

Per. I am at your grace's pleasure.

Sim. Princes, it is too late to talk of love;

And that's the mark I know you level at :

Therefore each one betake him to his rest ;

To-morrow all for speeding do their best.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. Tyre. A room in the Governor's house.

Enter HELICANUS and ESCANES.

Hel. No, Escanes, know this of me,
Antiochus from incest lived not free :
For which, the most high gods not minding longer

To withhold the vengeance that they had in store,
Due to this heinous capital offence,

Even in the height and pride of all his glory,

When he was seated in a chariot

Of an inestimable value, and his daughter with
him,

A fire from heaven came and shrivell'd up
Their bodies, even to loathing; for they so stunk,

That all those eyes adored them ere their fall.
Scorn now their hand should give them burial.

Esca. 'Twas very strange.

Hel. And yet but justice; for though
This king were great, his greatness was no
guard

To bar heaven's shaft, but sin had his reward.

Esca. 'Tis very true.

Enter two or three Lords.

First Lord. Sec, not a man in private conference

Or council has respect with him but he.

Sec. Lord. It shall no longer grieve without reproof.

Third Lord. And cursed be he that will not second it.

First Lord. Follow me, then. Lord Helicane, a word.

Hel. With me! and welcome: happy day,
my lords.

First Lord. Know that our griefs are risen to the top,
And now at length they overflow their banks.

Hel. Your griefs! for what? wrong not your prince you love.

First Lord. Wrong not yourself, then,
noble Helicane;

But if the prince do live, let us salute him,
Or know what ground's made happy by his
breath.

If in the world he live, we'll seek him out;
If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there; so
And he resolved he lives to govern us,
Or dead, give's cause to mourn his funeral,

And leave us to our free election.

Sec. Lord. Whose death indeed 's the strongest in our censure :

And knowing this kingdom is without a head,—
Like goodly buildings left without a roof
Soon fall to ruin,—your noble self,

That best know how to rule and how to reign,
We thus submit unto,—our sovereign.

All. Live, noble Helicane!

Hel. For honour's cause, forbear your suffrages :

If that you love Prince Pericles, forbear.

Take I your wish, I leap into the seas,

Where's hourly trouble for a minute's ease.

A twelvemonth longer, let me entreat you to

Forbear the absence of your king ;

If in which time expired, he not return,

I shall with aged patience bear your yoke.

But if I cannot win you to this love,

Go search like nobles, like noble subjects, 50
And in your search spend your adventurous
worth ;

Whom if you find, and win unto return,

You shall like diamonds sit about his crown.

First Lord. To wisdom he's a fool that will not yield ;

And since Lord Helicane enjoineth us,

We with our travels will endeavour us.

Hel. Then you love us, we you, and we'll clasp hands :

When powers thus knit, a kingdom ever stands.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V. Pentapolis. A room in the palace.

Enter SIMONIDES, reading a letter, at one door: the Knights meet him.

First Knight. Good morrow to the good Simonides.

Sim. Knights, from my daughter this I let
you know,

That for this twelvemonth she'll not undertake
A married life.

Her reason to herself is only known,

Which yet from her by no means can I get.

Sec. Knight. May we not get access to her,
my lord!

Sim. Faith, by no means; she hath so strictly tied

Her to her chamber, that 'tis impossible.

One twelve moons more she'll wear Diana's livery; 10

This by the eye of Cynthia hath she vow'd.

And on her virgin honour will not break it.

Third Knight. Loath to bid farewell, we take our leave. [Exeunt Knights.

Sim. So,

They are well dispatch'd; now to my daughter's
letter :

She tells me here, she'll wed the stranger
knight,

Or never more to view nor day nor night.

'Tis well, mistress; your choice agrees with
mine;

I like that well: nay, how absolute she's in't,
Not minding whether I dislike or no! 20

Well, I do commend her choice;

And will no longer have it be delay'd.

Soft! here he comes: I must dissemble it.

Enter PERICLES.

Per. All fortune to the good Simonides!

Sim. To you as much, sir! I am beholding to you

For your sweet music this last night: I do

Protest my ears were never better fed

With such delightful pleasing harmony.

Per. It is your grace's pleasure to commend;

Not my desert.

Sim. Sir, you are music's master.

Per. The worst of all her scholars, my good lord.

Sim. Let me ask you one thing:

What do you think of my daughter, sir?

Per. A most virtuous princess.

Sim. And she is fair too, is she not?

Per. As a fair day in summer, wondrous fair.

Sim. Sir, my daughter thinks very well of you;

Ay, so well, that you must be her master, And she will be your scholar: therefore look to it.

Per. I am unworthy for her schoolmaster.

Sim. She thinks not so; peruse this writing else.

Per. [Aside] What's here?

A letter, that she loves the knight of Tyre!

'Tis the king's subtlety to have my life.

O, seek not to entrap me, gracious lord,

A stranger and distressed gentleman,

That never aim'd so high to love your daughter,

But bent all offices to honour her.

Sim. Thou hast bewitch'd my daughter, and thou art

A villain.

Per. By the gods, I have not:

Never did thought of mine levy offence;

Nor never did my actions yet commence

A deed might gain her love or your displeasure.

Sim. Traitor, thou liest.

Per. Traitor!

Sim. Ay, traitor.

Per. Even in his throat—unless it be the king—

That calls me traitor, I return the lie.

Sim. [Aside] Now, by the gods, I do applaud his courage.

Per. My actions are as noble as my thoughts,

That never relish'd of a base descent.

I came unto your court for honour's cause,

And not to be a rebel to her state;

And he that otherwise accounts of me,

This sword shall prove he's honour's enemy.

Sim. No!

How comes my daughter, she can witness it.

Enter THAIRA.

Per. Then, as you are as virtuous as fair,

Rebuke our angry father, if my tongue

Did e'er sollicit, or my hand subscribe

To any words that might make love to you.

Thai. Yes, sir, say if you had,

Who takes offence at that would make me glad?

Sim. Yes, mistress, are you so presumptuous?

[Aside] I am glad on't with all my heart.

I'll tame you; I'll bring you in subjection.

Will you, not having my consent,

Bestow your love and your affections

Upon a stranger? [Aside] who, for aught I

know,

May be, nor can I think the contrary.

As great in blood as I myself.

Therefore hear you, mistress: either frame

Your will to mine,—and you, sir, hear you,

Either be ruled by me, or I will make you—

Man and wife:

Nay, come, your hands and lips must seal it

too:

And being join'd, I'll thus your hopes destroy;

And for a further grief,—God give you joy!—

What, are you both pleased?

Thai. Yes, if you love me, sir.

Per. Even as my life my blood that fosters it.

Sim. What, are you both agreed?

Both. Yes, if it please your majesty.

Sim. It pleaseth me so well, that I will you wed;

And then with what haste you can get you to bed.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Now sleep yelaked hath the rout;

No din but snores the house about,

Made louder by the o'er-fed breast

Of this most pompous marriage-feast.

The cat, with cyne of burning coal,

Now couches fore the mouse's hole;

And crickets sing at the oven's mouth,

E'er the blither for their drouth.

Hymen hath brought the bride to bed,

Where, by the loss of maidenhead,

A babe is moulded. Be attend,

And time that is so briefly spent

With your fine fancies quaintly echo:

What's dumb in show I'll plain with a

DUMB SHOW.

Enter, PERICLES and SIMONIDES, at door, with Attendants; a Messenger them, kneels, and gives PERICLES a

PERICLES shows it SIMONIDES; the kneel to him. Then enter THAIIRA child, with LYCHORIDA a nurse. The shows her the letter; she rejoices; she

PERICLES takes leave of her father, and departs with LYCHORIDA and their attendants. Then exeunt SIMONIDES and rest.

By

Of Pericles the careful search,

By the four opposing coigns

Which the world together joins,

Is made with all due diligence

That home and ail and high expense

Can stand the quest. At last from Tyre

Thaiira answering the quest

To the court of

Are letters brought, the tenour these:
 Antiochus and his daughter dead;
 The men of Tyros on the head
 Of Helioanus would set on
 The crown of Tyre, but he will none:
 The mutiny he there hastens 't oppress;
 Says to 'em, if King Pericles
 Come not home in twice six moons,
 He, obedient to their dooms,
 Will take the crown. The sum of this,
 Brought hither to Pentapolis,
 Y-ravished the regions round,
 And every one with claps can sound,
 'Our heir-apparent is a king!
 Who dream'd, who thought of such a thing?'
 Brief, he must hence depart to Tyre:
 His queen with child makes her desire—
 Which who shall cross?—along to go:
 Omit we all their dole and woe:
 Lychorida, her nurse, she takes,
 And so to sea. Their vessel shakes
 On Neptune's billow; half the flood
 Hath their keel cut: but fortune's mood
 Varies again; the grieved north
 Disgorges such a tempest forth,
 That, as a duck for life that dives,
 So up and down the poor ship drives:
 'he lady shrieks, and well-a-woe
 Does fall in travail with her fear:
 And what ensues in this fell storm
 Shall for itself itself perform.
 I will relate, action may Conveniently the rest convey;
 Which might not what by me is told.
 In your imagination hold
 'his stage the ship, upon whose deck
 'he sea-tost Pericles appears to speak. [Exit.]

SCENE I.

Enter PERICLES, on shipboard.

Per. Thou god of this great vast, rebuke
 these surges,
 20 Which wash both heaven and hell; and thou, that hast
 on the winds command, bind them in brass, v'ing call'd them from the deep! O, still y deafening, dreadful thunders; gently quench
 y nimble, sulphurous flashes! O, how,
 Lychorida,
 30 How does my queen! Thou stormest venom-
 ously;
 It thou spit all thyself! The seaman's whistle
 as a whisper in the ears of death, heard. Lychorida!—Lucina, O vine-st patroness, and midwife gentle those that cry by night, convey thy deity board our dancing boat; make swift the pangs
 my queen's travails!

Enter LYCHORIDA, with an Infant.

Per. Here is a thing too young for such a place.
 40 't if it had conceit, would die, as I Am like to do: take in your arms this piece

 Of your dead queen.

Per. How, how, Lychorida!

Lyc. Patience, good sir; do not assist the storm.
 Here's all that is left living of your queen, 20
 A little daughter; for the sake of it,
 Be manly, and take comfort.

Per. O you gods!

Why do you make us love your goodly gifts,
 And snatch them straight away! We have below

Recall not what we give, and therein may Use honour with you.

Lyc. Patience, good sir,
 Even for this charge.

Per. Now, mild may be thy life!
 For a more blustrous birth had never babe:
 Quiet and gentle thy conditions! for
 Thou art the rudeliest welcome to this world
 That ever was prince's child. Happy what follows! 30

Thou hast as chiding a nativity
 As fire, air, water, earth, and heaven can make,
 To herald thee from the womb: even at the first
 Thy loss is more than can thy portage quit, 50 With all thou canst find here. Now, the good gods

Throw their best eyes upon't!

Enter two Sailors.

First Sail. What courage, sir! God save
 you!

Per. Courage enough: I do not fear the flaw;

It hath done to me the worst. Yet, for the
 love 40

Of this poor infant, this fresh-new sea-farer,
 I would it would be quiet.

First Sail. Slack the bolins there! Thou wilt not, wilt thou! Blow, and split thyself.

Sec. Sail. But sea-room, an the brine and cloudy billow kiss the moon, I care not.

First Sail. Sir, your queen must overboard:
 the sea works high, the wind is loud, and will not lie till the ship be cleared of the dead.

Per. That's your superstition. 50

First Sail. Pardon us, sir; with us at sea it hath been still observed; and we are strong in custom. Therefore briefly yield her; for she must overboard straight.

Per. As you think meet. Most wretched
 queen!

Lyc. Here she lies, sir.

Per. A terrible childbed hast thou had, my dear;

No light, no fire; the unfriendly elements
 Forgot thee utterly; nor have I time 50

To give thee bellow'd to thy grave, but straight
 Must cast thee, scarcely coffin'd, in the sea;

Where, for a monument upon thy bones,
 And e'er-remaining lamps, the belching whale
 And humming water must o'erwhelm thy corpse,

Lying with simple shells. O Lychorida,
 Bid Nestor bring me spices, ink and paper.

My casket and my jewels; and bid Alexander
 Bring me the satin coffin: lay the babe

Upon the pillow : his thee, whiles I say 60
A priestly farewell to her : suddenly, woman.

Sec. Sail. Sir, we have a chest beneath the hatches, caulked and bitumed ready.

Per. I thank thee. Mariner, say what coast is this!

Sec. Sail. We are near Tarsus.

Per. Thither, gentle mariner.

Alter thy course for Tyre. When canst thou reach it?

Sec. Sail. By break of day, if the wind cease.

Per. O, make for Tarsus!

There will I visit Cleon, for the babe 79

Cannot hold out to Tyros : there I'll leave it

At careful nursing. Go thy ways, good mariner :

I'll bring the body presently. [Exit.]

SCENE II. Ephesus. A room in Cerimon's house.

Enter CERIMON, with a Servant, and some Persons who have been shipwrecked.

Cer. Philemon, ho!

Enter PHILEMON.

Phil. Doth my lord call?

Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men :
'T has been a turbulent and stormy night.

Serv. I have been in many ; but such a night as this,

Till now, I ne'er endured.

Cer. Your master will be dead ere you return ;

There's nothing can be minister'd to nature
That can recover him. [To Philemon] Give this to the 'pothecary,

And tell me how it works.

[Exit all but Cerimon.]

Enter two Gentlemen.

First Gent. Good morrow. 10

Sec. Gent. Good morrow to your lordship.

Cer. Gentlemen,

Why do you stir so early?

First Gent. Sir,

Our lodgings, standing bleak upon the sea,
Shook as the earth did quake ;

The very principals did seem to rend.

And all-to topple : pure surprise and fear

Made me to quit the house.

Sec. Gent. That is the cause we trouble you so early :

'Tis not our husbandry.

Cer. O, you say well. 20

First Gent. But I much marvel that your lordship, having

Rich fire about you, should at these early hours
Shake off the golden slumber of repose.

'Tis most strange,

Nature should be so conversant with pain,
Being thereto not compell'd.

Cer. I hold it ever,

Virtue and cunning were endowments greater
Than nobleness and riches : careless heirs

May the two latter darken and expend ;

But wisdom attends the former.

30 Making a god. The known, I ever

Have studied physic, through which secret art,
By turning o'er authorities, I have,

Together with my practices, made familiar

To me and to my aid the blest infusions

That dwell in vegetables, in metals, stones ;

And I can speak of the disturbance

That nature works, and of her cures ; which doth give me

A more content in course of true delight
Than to be thirsty after t...ing honour, 40

Or tie my treasure up in silken bags

To please the fool and death.

Sec. Gent. Your honour has through Ephesus poured forth

Your charity, and hundreds call themselves

Your creatures, who by you have been restored :

And not your knowledge, your personal pain,
but even

Your purse, still open, hath built Lord Cerimon

Such strong renown as time shall ne'er decay.

Enter two or three Servants with a chest.

First Serv. So ; lift there.

Cer. What is that?

First Serv. Sir, even now

Did the sea toss upon our shore this chest : 50

'Tis of some wreck.

Cer. Set't down, let's look upon't.

Sec. Gent. 'Tis like a coffin, sir.

Cer. Whate'er it be,

'Tis wondrous heavy. Wrench it open straight :

If the sea's stomach be o'ercharged with gold,

'Tis a good constraint of fortune it belches upon us.

Sec. Gent. 'Tis so, my lord.

Cer. How close 'tis caulk'd and bitumed !
Did the sea cast it up?

First Serv. I never saw so huge a billow, sir,
As toss'd it upon shore.

Cer. Wrench it open ;

Soft ! it smells most sweetly in my sense. 60

Sec. Gent. A delicate odour.

Cer. As ever hit my nostril. So, up with it.
O you most potent gods ! what's here ! a cove!

First Gent. Most strange !

Cer. Shrouded in cloth of state ; balm'd and entreasur'd

With full bags of spices ! A passport too !

Apollo, perfect me in the characters !

[Reads from a scroll.]

'Here I give to understand,

If e'er this coffin drive a-land,

I, King Pericles, have lost

This queen, worth all our mundane cost. 70

Who finds her, give her burying ;

She was the daughter of a king ;

Besides this reasure for a fee,

The gods requite his charity !

If thou livest, Pericles, thou hast a heart That even cracks for woe ! This chanced to-

night.

Sec. Gent. Most likely, sir.

Cer. Nay, certainly to-night ;
For look how fresh she looks ! They were too rough

That threw her in the sea. Make a fire within ;
Fetch hither all my boxes in my cloak. 80

[Exit all Servants.]

Death may usurp on nature many hours,
And yet the fire of life kindle again
The oppress'd spirits. I heard of an Egyptian
That had nine hours lien dead,
Who was by good appliance recovered.

Re-enter a Servant, with boxes, napkins, and fire.

Well said, well said; the fire and cloths.
The rough and woeful music that we have,
(cause it to sound, beseech you.
The viol once more: how thou stir'st, thou block!

The music there!—I pray you, give her air.
(Gentlemen,
This queen will live: nature awakes; a warmth
Breathes out of her: she hath not been entranced.

Above five hours: see how she gins to blow
Into life's flower again!

First Gent. The heavens,
Through you, increase our wonder and set up
Your fame for ever.

Cer. She is alive; behold,
Her eyelids, cases to those heavenly jewels
Which Pericles hath lost, 100
Begin to part their fringes of bright gold;
The diamonds of a most praised water
Do appear, to make the world twice rich. Live,
And make us weep to hear your fate, fair
creature,

Rare as you seem to be. [She moves.
That. O dear Diann,

Where am I? Where's my lord? What world
is this!

Sec. Gent. Is not this strange?
First Gent. Most rare.

Cer. Hush, my gentle neighbours!
Lend me your hands; to the next chamber bear her.

Get linen: now this matter must be look'd to,
For her relapse is mortal. Come, come; 110
And Æsculapius guide us!

... [Exeunt, carrying her away.

SCENE III. *Tarsus. A room in Cleon's
house.*

Enter PERICLES, CLEON, DIONYZA, and LYCHORIDA with MARINA in her arms.

Per. Most honour'd Cleon, I must needs be
gone;

My twelve months are expired, and Tyrus
stands

In a litigious peace. You, and your lady, Take from my heart all thankfulness! The gods

Make up the rest upon you!

Cle. Your shafts of fortune, though they hurt you mortally,

Yet glance full wanderingly on us.

Dion. O your sweet queen!
That the strict fates had pleased you had brought her hither,

To have bless'd mine eyes with her!

Per. We cannot but obey
The powers above us: Could I rage and roar
As doth the sea she lies in, yet the end

Must be as 'tis. My gentle babe Marina, whom,
For she was born at sea, I have named so, here
I charge your charity withal, leaving her
The infant of your care; beseeching you
To give her princely training, that she may be Manner'd as she is born.

Cle. Fear not, my lord, but think Your grace, that fed my country with your corn,

For which the people's prayers still fall upon
you,

Must in your child be thought on. If neg-lection

Should therein make me vile, the common body,
By you relieved, would force me to my duty:

But if to that my nature need a spur,
The gods revenge it upon me and mine,

To the end of generation!

Per. I believe you;
Your honour and your goodness teach me to 't,
Without your vows. Till she be married,
madam,

So I take my leave. 30
Good madam, make me blessed in your care
In bringing up my child.

Dion. I have one myself,
Who shall not be more dear to my respect
Than yours, my lord.

Per. Madam, my thanks and prayers.
Cle. We'll bring your grace e'en to the edge
o' the shore,

Then give you up to the mask'd Neptune and
The gentlest winds of heaven.

Per. I will embrace
Your offer. Come, dearest madam. O, no
tears,

Lychorida, no tears:
Look to your little mistress, on whose grace 40
You may depend hereafter. Come, my lord.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. Ephesus. A room in Cerimon's house.

Enter CERIMON and THAIRA.

Cer. Madam, this letter, and some certain
jewels,

Lay with you in your coffer: which are now
At your command. Know you the character!

Thai. It is my lord's.

That I was shipp'd at sea, I well remember,
Even on my eaning time; but whether there
Deliver'd, by the holy gods,

I cannot rightly say. But since King Pericles,
My wedded lord, I ne'er shall see again,

A vestal livery will I take me to, 10
And never more have joy.

Cer. Madam, if this you purpose as ye speak,
Diana's temple is not distant far.

Where you may abide till your taste expires.
Moreover, if you please, a niece of mine
Shall there attend you.

Thai. My recompense is thanks, that's all;
Yet my good will is great, though the gift small.

[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Imagine Pericles arrived at Tyre,
 Welcomed and settled to his own desires.
 His woful queen we leave at Ephesus,
 Unto Diana here a votaress.
 Now to Marina bend your mind,
 Whom our fast-growing scene must find
 At Tarsus, and by Cleon train'd
 In music, letters; who hath gain'd
 Of education all the graces,
 Which makes her both the heart and place 10
 Of general wonder. But, alack,
 That monster envy, oft the wrack
 Of earned praise, Marina's life
 Seeks to take off by treason's knife.
 And in this kind hath our Cleon
 One daughter, and a wench full grown,
 Even ripe for marriage-rite; this maid
 Hight Philoten: and it is said
 For certain in our story, she Would ever with Marina be:
 Be't when she weaved the sleided silk 20
 With fingers long, small, white as milk;
 Or when she would with sharp needle wound
 The cambric, which she made more sound
 By hurting it; or when to the lute
 She sung, and made the night-bird mute,
 That still records with moan; or when
 She would with rich and constant pen
 Vail to her mistress Dian; still
 This Philoten contends in skill
 With absolute Marina: so
 With the dove of Paphos might the crow
 Vie feathers white. Marina gets
 All praises, which are paid as debts,
 And not as given. This so darks
 In Philoten all graceful marks,
 That Cleon's wife, with envy rare,
 A present murderer does prepare
 For good Marina, that her daughter
 Might stand peerless by this slaughter. 40
 The sooner her vile thoughts to stead,
 Lychorida, our nurse, is dead:
 And cursed Dionyza hath
 The pregnant instrument of wrath
 Prent for this blow. The unborn event
 I do commend to your content:
 Only I carry winged time
 Post on the lame feet of my rhyme;
 Which never could I so convey,
 Unless your thoughts went on my way. 50
Dionyza does appear.
 With Leonine, a murderer. [Exit.]

SCENE I. Tarsus. An open place near the sea-shore.

Enter DIONYZA and LEONINE.

Dion. Thy oath remember; thou hast sworn to do't;
 'Tis but a blow, which never shall be known.
 Thou canst not do a thing in the world so
 soon,
 To yield thee so much profit. Let not conscience,

Which is but cold, inflaming love i' thy bosom,
 Inflame too nicely; nor let pity, which Even women have cast off, melt thee, but be
 A soldier to thy purpose.

Leon. I will do't; but yet she is a goodly creature.

Dion. The fitter, then, the gods should have her. 'Here she comes weeping for her only mistress' death. Thou art resolved?

Leon. I am resolved.

Enter MARINA, with a basket of flowers.

Mar. No, I will rob Tellus of her weed,
 To strew thy green with flowers: the yellow,
 blue,
 The purple violets, and marigolds,
 Shall as a carpet hang upon thy grave,
 While summer-days do last. Ay me! poor
 maid,
 Born in a tempest, when my mother died,
 This world to me is like a lasting storm, 20
 Whirring me from my friends.

Dion. How now, Marina! why do you keep alone?

How chance my daughter is not with you? Do not Consume your blood with sorrowing: you have A nurse of me. Lord, how your favour's changed

With this unprofitable woe!
 Come, give me your flowers, ere the sea mar it.
 Walk with Leonine; the air is quick there,
 And it pierces and sharpens the stomach. 30
 Come.

Leonine, take her by the arm, walk with her. 30
Mar. No, I pray you;

I'll not bereave you of your servant.
Dion. Come, come;
 I love the king your father, and yourself,
 With more than foreign heart. We every day
 Expect him here: when he shall come and find
 Our paragon to all reports thus blasted,
 He will repent the breadth of his great voyage; 40 Blame both my lord and me, that we have taken

No care to your best courses. Go, I pray you,
 Walk, and be cheerful once again; reserve 40
 That excellent complexion, which did steal
 The eyes of young and old. Care not for me;
 I can go home alone.

Mar. Well, I will go;
 But yet I have no desire to it.

Dion. Come, come, I know 'tis good for
 you.

Walk half an hour, Leonine, at the least:
 Remember what I have said.

Leon. I warrant you, madam.
Dion. I'll leave you, my sweet lady, for a while;

Pray, walk softly, do not heat your blood:
 What! I must have a care of you.

Mar. My thanks, sweet madam. 50
 [Exit Dionyza.]

Is this wind westerly that blows?

Leon. South-west.
Mar. When I was born, the wind was north.
Leon. Was't so!

Mar. My father, as nurse said, did never fear.

But cried 'Good seamen!' to the sailors, galling
His kindly hands, haling ropes;
And, clasping to the mast, endured a sea
That almost burst the deck.

Leon. When was this?

Mar. When I was born:

Never was waves nor wind more violent; 60
And from the ladder-tackle washes off
A canvas-climber. 'Ha!' says one, 'wilt out!'
And with a dropping industry they skip
From stern to stern: the boatswain whistles, and
The master calls, and trebles their confusion.

Leon. Come, say your prayers.

Mar. What mean you?

Leon. If you require a little space for prayer,
I grant it: pray; but be not tedious, 69
For the gods are quick of ear, and I am sworn
To do my work with haste.

Mar. Why will you kill me?

Leon. To satisfy my lady.

Mar. Why would she have me kill'd?
Now, as I can remember, by my troth,
I never did her hurt in all my life:
I never spake bad word, nor did ill turn
To any living creature: believe me, la,
I never kill'd a mouse, nor hurt a fly:
I trod upon a worm against my will,
But I wept for it. How have I offended, 80
Wherein my death might yield her any profit,
Or my life imply her any danger?

Leon. My commission

Is not to reason of the deed, but do it.

Mar. You will not do't for all the world, I hope.

You are well favour'd, and your looks foreshow
You have a gentle heart. I saw you lately,
When you caught hurt in parting two that
fought:

Good sooth, it show'd well in you: do so now:
Your lady seeks my life; come you between, 90
And save poor me, the weaker.

Leon. I am sworn,

And will dispatch. [He seizes her.

Enter Pirates.

First Pirate. Hold, villain!

[Leonine runs away.

Sec. Pirate. A prize! a prize!

Third Pirate. Half-part, mates, half-part.
Come, let's have her aboard suddenly.

[Exit Pirates with Marina.

Re-enter LEONINE.

Leon. These roving thieves serve the great pirate Valdes;

And they have seized Marina. Let her go:
There's no hope she will return. I'll swear she's dead.

And thrown into the sea. But I'll see further:
Perhaps they will but please themselves upon
her, 101

Not carry her aboard. If she remain,
Whom they have ravish'd must by me be slain.
[Exit.

SCENE II. Mytilene. A room in a brothel.

Enter PANDAR, Bawd, and BOULT.

Pand. Boul't!

Boul't. Sir!

Pand. Search the market narrowly; Mytilene is full of gallants. We lost too much money this morn'g by being too wenchless.

Bawd. We were never so much out of creatures. We have but poor throe, and they can do no more than they can do; and they with continual action are even as good as rotten. 9

Pand. Therefore let's have fresh ones, whate'er we pay for them. If there be not a conscience to be used in every trade, we shall never prosper.

Bawd. Thou sayest true: 'tis not our bringing up of poor bastards,—as, I think, I have brought up some eleven—Boul't. Ay, to eleven; and brought them down again. But shall I search the market?

Bawd. What else, man! The stuff we have, a strong wind will blow it to pieces, they are so pitifully sodden. 12

Pand. Thou sayest true: they're too unwholesome, o' conscience. The poor Transylvanian is dead, that lay with the little baggage.

Boul't. Ay, she quickly pooped him; she made him roast-meat for worms. But I'll go search the market. [Exit.

Pand. Three or four thousand chequins were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and so give over. 30

Bawd. Why to give over, I pray you! is it a shame to get when we are old?

Pand. O, our credit comes not in like the commodity, nor the commodity wages not with the danger: therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, 'twere not amiss to keep our door hatch'd. Besides, the sore terms we stand upon with the gods will be strong with us for giving over. 39

Bawd. Come, other sorts offend as well as we.

Pand. As well as we! ay, and better too; we offend worse. Neither is our profession any trade; it's no calling. But here comes Boul't.

Re-enter BOULT, with the Pirates and MARINA.

Boul't. [To Marina] Come your ways. My masters, you say she's a virgin!

First Pirate. O, sir, we doubt it not.

Boul't. Master, I have gone through for this piece, you see: if you like her, so; if not, I have lost my earnest.

Bawd. Boul't, has she any qualities? 50

Boul't. She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good clothes: there's no further necessity of qualities can make her be refused.

Bawd. What's her price, Boul't?

Boul't. I cannot be bated one dobt of a thousand pieces.

Pand. Well, follow me, my masters, you shall have your money presently. Wife, take her in; instruct her what she has to do; that she may not be raw in her entertainment. 60

[Exit Pandar and Pirates.
Bawd. Boul't, take you the marks of her, the colour of her hair, complexion, height, age, with warrant of her virginity; and cry 'He that will give most shall have her first.' Such a maiden-head were no cheap thing, if men were as they have been. Get this done as I command you.

Boult. Performance shall follow. [Exit.]

Mar. Alack that Leonine was so slack, so slow! He should have struck, not spoke; or that these pirates,

Not enough barbarous, had not o'erboard thrown me 70

For to seek my mother!

Bawd. Why lament you, pretty one?

Mar. That I am pretty.

Bawd. Come, the gods have done their part in you.

Mar. I accuse them not.

Bawd. You are light into my hands, where you are like to live.

Mar. The more my fault

To scape his hands where I was like to die. 80

Bawd. Ay, and you shall live in pleasure.

Mar. No.

Bawd. Yes, indeed shall you, and taste gentlemen of all fashions: you shall fare well; you shall have the difference of all complexions. What! do you stop your ears?

Mar. Are you a woman?

Bawd. What would you have me be, an I be not a woman? 85

Mar. An honest woman, or not a woman.

Bawd. Marry, whip thee, goading: I think I shall have something to do with you. Come, you're a young foolish sapling, and must be bowed as I would have you.

Mar. The gods defend me!

Bawd. If it please the gods to defend you by men, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men must stir you up. Boult's returned.

Re-enter BOULT.

Now, sir, hast thou cried her through the market? 90

Boult. I have cried her almost to the number of her hairs; I have drawn her picture with my voice.

Bawd. And I prithee tell me, how dost thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?

Boult. Faith, they listened to me as they would have hearkened to their father's testament. There was a Spaniard's mouth so watered, that he went to bed to her very description. 100

Bawd. We shall have him here to-morrow with his best ruff on.

Boult. To-night, to-night. But, mistress, do you know the French knight that cowers in the hams?

Bawd. Who, Monsieur Veroles?

Boult. Ay, he: he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation; but he made a groan at it, and said he would see her to-morrow.

Vell, well; as for him, he brought hither: here he does but repair it. He will come in our shadow, to scatter the weeds.

Boult. Well, if we had of every nation a traveller, we should lodge them with this sign.

Bawd. [To Mar.] Pray you, come hither awhile. You have fortunes coming upon you. Mark me: you must seem to do that fearfully which you commit willingly, despise profit where you have most gain. To weep that you live as ye do makes pity in your lovers; seldom but that pity begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a mere profit.

Mar. I understand you.

Boult. O, take her home, mistress, take her home: these blushes of hers must be quenched with some present practice.

Bawd. Thou sayest true, 't' faith so they must; for your bride seems to that with shame which is her way to go with warrant. 110

Boult. Faith, some do, and some do not. But, mistress, if I have bargained for the joint,— Bawd. Thou mayst cut a morsel off the spit.

Boult. I may so.

Bawd. Who should deny it? Come, young one, I like the manner of your garments well.

Boult. Ay, by my faith, they shall not be changed yet.

Bawd. Boult, spend thou that in the town: report what a sojourner we have; you'll lose nothing by custom. When nature framed this piece, she meant thee a good turn; therefore say what a paragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report.

Boult. I warrant you, mistress, thunder shall not so awake the beds of eels as my giving out her beauty stir up the lewdly-inclined. I'll bring home some to-night.

Bawd. Come your ways; follow me.

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,

Untied I still my virgin knot will keep. 160

Diana, aid my purpose!

Bawd. What have we to do with Diana?

Pray you, will you go with us? [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Tarnus. A room in Cleon's house.

Enter CLEON and DRIONZA.

Dion. Why, are you foolish! Can it be undone?

Cle. O Drionza, such a piece of slaughter The sun and moon ne'er look'd upon!

Dion. I think

You'll turn a child again.

Cle. Were I chief lord of all this spacious world,

I'd give it to undo the deed. O lady, Much less in blood than virtue, yet a princess To equal any single crown o' the earth If the justice of compare! O villain Leonine! Whom thou hast poison'd too: 10

If thou hadst drunk to him, 't had been a kindness

Becoming well thy fact: what canst thou say When noble Pericles shall demand his child?

Dion. That she is dead. Names are not the intent

To foster it, nor ever to preserve.

She died at night; I'll say so. Who can cross it?

Unless you play the pious innocent,
And for an honest attribute cry out
'She died by foul play.'

Cle. O, go to. Well, well,
Of all the faults beneath the heavens, the gods
Do like this worst.

Dion. Be one of those that think as
The petty wrens of Tarsus will fly hence,
And open this to Pericles. I do shame
To think of what a noble strain you are,
And of how coward a spirit.

Cle. To such proceeding
Who ever but his approbation added.
Though not his prime consent, he did not flow
From honourable sources.

Dion. Be it so, then:
Yet none does know, but you, how she came
dead,

Nor none can know, Leonine being gone. 30
She did disdain my child, and stood between
Her and her fortunes: none would look on her,
But cast their gazes on Marina's face;
Whilst ours was blurted at and held a malkin
Not worth the time of day. It pierced me thorough;

And though you call my course unnatural,
You not your child well loving, yet I find
It greets me as an enterprise of kindness
Perform'd to your sole daughter.

Cle. Heavens forgive it!

Dion. And as for Pericles, 40
What should he say? We wept after her hearse,
And yet we mourn: her monument
Is almost finish'd, and her epitaphs
In glittering golden characters express
A general praise to her, and care in us
At whose expense 'tis done.

Cle. Thou art like the harpy,
Which, to betray, doest, with thine angel's face,
Seize with thine eagle's talons.

Dion. You are like one that superstitiously Doth swear to the gods that winter kills the flies: 50

But yet I know you'll do as I advise. [Exit.

SCENE IV.

Enter GOWER, before the monument of MARINA at Tarsus.

Gow. Thus time we waste, and longest leagues make short;

Sail seas in cockles, have an wish but for't;
Making, to take your imagination,
From bourn to bourn, region to region.
By you being pardon'd, we commit no crime
To use one language in each several clime
Where our scenes seem to live. I do beseech
you

To learn of me, who stand i' the gaps to teach
you,

The stages of our story. Pericles
Is now again thwarting the wayward seas, 20
Attended on by many a lord and knight,
To see his daughter, all his life's delight.
Old Escapes, whom Helicanus late Advanced in time to great and high estate,

Is left to govern. Bear you it in mind,
Old Helicanus goes along behind.
Well-sailing ships and bounteous winds have brought

This king to Tarsus,—think his pilot thought;
So with his steerage shall your thoughts grow
on,

To fetch his daughter home, who first is gone.
Like moles and shadows see them move
awhile; 21

Your ears unto your eyes I'll reconcile.

DUMB SHOW.

*Enter PERICLES, at one door, with all his train; CLEON and DIONYZA, at the other.
CLEON shows PERICLES the tomb; whereat
PERICLES makes lamentation, puts on sackcloth, and in a mighty passion departs.
Then exeunt CLEON and DIONYZA.*

See how belief may suffer by foul show!
This borrow'd passion stands for true old woe;
And Pericles, in sorrow all devour'd,
With sighs shot through, and biggest tears
o'erashower'd,
Leaves Tarsus and again embarks. He swears
Never to wash his face, nor cut his hairs:
He puts on sackcloth, and to sea. He bears
A tempest, which his mortal vessel tears, 30
And yet he rides it out. Now please you wit
The epitaph is for Marina writ
By wicked Dionyzia.

[Reads the inscription on Marina's monument.

'The fairest, sweetest, and best lies here,
Who wither'd in her spring of year.
She was of Tyrus the king's daughter,
On whom foul death hath made this slaughter;
Marina was she call'd; and at her birth,
Thetis, being proud, swallow'd some part o'
the earth:

Therefore the earth, fearing to be o'erflow'd,
Hath Thetis' birth-child on the heavens bestow'd: 41

Wherefore she does, and swears she'll never stint,
Make raging battery upon shores of flint.'

No visor does become black villany
So well as soft and tender flattery.
Let Pericles believe his daughter's dead,
And bear his courses to be ordered
By Lady Fortune; while our scene must play
His daughter's woe and heavy wail-a-day
In her unholy service. Patience, then, 50
And think you now are all in Mytilene.

[Exit.

SCENE V. Mytilene. A street before the brothel.

Enter, from the brothel, two Gentlemen.

First Gent. Did you ever hear the like?
Sec. Gent. No, nor never shall do in such a place as this, she being once gone.

First Gent. But to have divinity preached them I did you ever dream of such a thing?

Sec. Gent. No, no. Come, I did see—more bawdy-houses: shall's go hear the vestals sing!

First Gent. I'll do any thing now that is virtuous; but I am out of the road of rutting for ever. [Exeunt. 10

SCENE VI. The same. A room in the brothel.

Enter Pandar, Bawd, and BOULT.

Pand. Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her she had ne'er come here.

Bawd. Fie, fie upon her! she's able to freeze the god Priapus, and undo a whole generation. We must either get her ravished, or be rid of her. When she should do for clients her fitment, and do me the kindness of our profession, she has me her quirks, her reasons, her master reasons, her prayers, her knees; that she would make a puritan of the devil, if he should cheapen a kiss of her. 10

Boult. Faith, I must ravish her, or she'll disfigure us of all our cavaliers, and make our swearers priests.

Pand. Now, the pox upon her green-sickness for me!

Bawd. Faith, there's no way to be rid on't but by the way to the pox. Here comes the Lord Lysimachus disguised.

Boult. We should have both lord and lown, if the peevish baggage would but give way to customers. 25

Enter LYSIMACHUS.

Lys. How now! How a dozen of virginities?

Bawd. Now, the gods to bless your honour!

Boult. I am glad to see your honour in good health.

Lys. You may so; 'tis the better for you that your resorters stand upon sound legs. How now! wholesome iniquity have you that a man may deal withal, and defy the surgeon?

Bawd. We have here one, sir, if she would—but there never came her like in Mytilene. 31

Lys. If she'd do the deed of darkness, thou wouldst say.

Bawd. Your honour knows what 'tis to say well enough.

Lys. Well, call forth, call forth.

Boult. For flesh and blood, sir, white and red, you shall see a rose; and she were a rose indeed, if she had but—

Lys. What, prithee? 40

Boult. O, sir, I can be modest.

Lys. That dignifies the renown of a bawd, no less than it gives a good report to a number to be chaste. [Exit Boult.]

Bawd. Here comes that which grows to the stalk; never plucked yet, I can assure you.

Re-enter BOULT with MARINA.

Is she not a fair creature?

Lys. Faith, she would serve after a long voyage at sea. Well, there's for you: leave us.

Bawd. I beseech your honour, give me leave: a word, and I'll have done presently. 51

Lys. I beseech you, do.

Bawd. [To Marina] First, I would have you note, this is an honourable man.

Mar. I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note him.

Bawd. Next, he's the governor of this country, and a man whom I am bound to.

Mar. If he govern the country, you are bound to him indeed; but how honourable he is in that, I know not. 61

Bawd. Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly? He will line your apron with gold.

Mar. What he will do graciously, I will thankfully receive.

Lys. Ha! you done?

Bawd. My lord, she's not paced yet: you must take some pains to work her to your manage. Come, we will leave his honour and her together. Go thy ways.

[Exeunt Bawd, Pandar, and Boult.]

Lys. Now, prithee one, how long have you been at this trade?

Mar. What trade, sir?

Lys. Why, I cannot name't but I shall offend.

Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade. Please you to name it.

Lys. How long have you been of this profession?

Mar. Ever since I can remember.

Lys. Did you go to't so young? Were you a gamster at five or at seven? 81

Mar. Earlier too, sir, if now I be one.

Lys. Why, the house you dwell in proclaims you to be a creature of sale.

Mar. Do you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into't? I hear say you are of honourable parts, and are the governor of this place.

Lys. Why, hath your principal made known unto you who I am? 90

Mar. Who is my principal?

Lys. Why, your herb-woman; she that sets seeds and roots of shame and iniquity. O, you have heard something of my power, and so stand aloof for more serious wooing. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else look friendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place: come, come.

Mar. If you were born to honour, show it now;

If put upon you, make the judgement good: 100 That thought you worthy of it.

Lys. How's this! how's this! Some more: be sage.

Mar. For me,

That am a maid, though most ungentle fortune Have placed me in this sty, where, since I came,

Diseases have been sold dearer than physic, O, that the gods

Would set me free from this unhallow'd place, Though they did change me to the meanest bird

That flies i' the purer air!

Lys. I did not think Thou couldst have spoke so well; ne'er dream'd thou couldst.

Had I thought hither a corrupted mind, 110

Thy speech had alter'd it. Hold, here's gold for thee:

Persever in that clear way thou goest,
And the gods strengthen thee!

Mar. The good gods preserve you!

Lys. For me, be you thoughten
That I came with no ill intent; for to me
The very doors and windows savour vilely.
Fare thee well. Thou art a piece of virtue, and I doubt not but thy training hath been noble.
Hold, here's more gold for thee. 120

A curse upon him, die he like a thief,
That robs thee of thy goodness! If thou dost
Hear from me, it shall be for thy good.

Re-enter BOULT.

Boult. I beseech your honour, one piece for me.

Lys. Avaunt, thou damned door-keeper!
Your house, but for this virgin that doth propit,
Would sink and overwhelm you. Away! [Exit.]

Boult. How's this? We must take another course with you. If your peevish chastity, which is not worth a breakfast in the cheapest country under the cope, shall undo a whole household, let me be gelded like a spaniel.
Come your ways.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. I must have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman shall execute it.
Come your ways. We'll have no more gentlemen driven away. Come your ways, I say.

Re-enter Bawd.

Bawd. How now! what's the matter? 140

Boult. Worse and worse, mistress; she has here spoken holy words to the Lord Lysimachus.

Bawd. O abominable!

Boult. She makes our profession as it were to stink afore the face of the gods.

Bawd. Marry, hang her up for ever!

Boult. The nobleman would have dealt with her like a nobleman, and she sent him away as cold as a snowball; saying his prayers too. 149

Bawd. Boult, take her away; use her at thy pleasure: crack the glass of her virginity, and make the rest malleable.

Boult. An if she were a thornier piece of ground than she is, she shall be ploughed.

Mar. Hark, hark, you gods!

Bawd. She conjures away with her! Would she had never come within my doors! Marry, hang you! She's born to undo us. Will you not go the way of women-kind? Marry, come up, my dish of chastity with rosemary and bays! [Exit.]

Boult. Come, mistress; come your ways
with me.

Mar. Whither wilt thou have me?

Boult. To take from you the jewel you hold so dear.

Mar. Frithee, tell me one thing first.

Boult. Come now, your one thing.

Mar. What canst thou wish thine enemy to be?

Boult. Why, I could wish him to be my master, or rather, my mistress. 170

Mar. Neither of these are so bad as thou art.

Since they do better thee in their command,
Thou hold'st a place, for which the pains't fend

Of hell would not in reputation change:

Thou art the damned doorkeeper to every

Colstrel that comes inquiring for his Tib;

To the choleric fisting of every rogue

Thy ear is liable; thy food is such

As hath been belch'd on by infected lungs. 179

Boult. What would you have me do? go to the wars, would you? where a man may serve seven years for the loss of a leg, and have not money enough in the end to buy him a wooden
one!

Mar. Do any thing but this thou doest.

Empty

Old receptacles, or common shores, of filth;

Serve by indenture to the common hangman:

Any of these ways are yet better than this;

For what thou professes, a baboon, could he
speak,

Would own a name too dear. O, that the gods

Would safely deliver me from this place! 189

Here, here's gold for thee.

If that thy master would gain by me,

Proclaim that I can sing, weave, sew, and dance,

With other virtues, which I'll keep from boast;

And I will undertake all these to teach.

I doubt not but this populous city will Yield many scholars.

Boult. But can you teach all this you speak of?

Mar. Prove that I cannot, take me home

again,

And prostitute me to the basest groom

That doth frequent your house.

Boult. Well, I will see what I can do for thee: if I can place thee, I will.

Mar. But amongst honest women.

Boult. Faith, my acquaintance lies little amongst them. But since my master and mistress have bought you, there's no going but by their consent: therefore I will make them acquainted with your purpose, and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough. Come,

I'll do for thee what I can; come your ways. [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Marina thus the brothel 'scape, and chances

Into an honest house, our story says.

She sings like one immortal, and she dances

As goddess-like to her admired lays;

Deep clerks she dumbs; and with her needle

composes

Nature's own shape, of bud, bird, branch, or berry,

That even her art sisters the natural roses;

Her ink, silk, twin with the rubied chastity:

That pupils lacks she none of noble men, 9

Who pour their bounty on her; and her gain;

She gives the cursed bawd. Here we her place;

And to her father turn our thoughts again,
Where we left him, on the sea. We there him
lost;

Whence, driven before the winds, he is arrived Here where his daughter dwells; and on this coast.

Suppose him now at anchor. The city strived God Neptune's annual feast to keep: from whence

Lysimachus our Tyrian ship espies,
His banners sable, trimm'd with rich expense;
And to him in his barge with fervour hies. 20
In your supposing once more put your sight
Of heavy Pericles; think this his bark:
Where what is done in action, more, if might,
Shall be discover'd; please you, sit and hark.

[Exit.

SCENE I. On board Pericles ship, off Mytilene.
A close pavilion on deck, with a curtain before it; Pericles within it, reclined on a couch. A barge lying beside the Tyrian vessel.

Enter two Sailors, one belonging to the Tyrian vessel, the other to the barge; to them HELI-CANUS.

Tyr. Sail. [To the Sailor of Mytilene]
Where is lord Helicanus? he can resolve
you.

O, here he is.
Sir, there's a barge put off from Mytilene,
And in it is Lysimachus the governor,
Who craves to come aboard. What is your
will?

Hel. That he have his. Call up some gentlemen.

Tyr. Sail. Ho, gentlemen! my lord calls.

Enter two or three Gentlemen.

First Gent. Doth your lordship call?

Hel. Gentlemen, there's some of worth would come aboard;

I pray ye, greet them fairly. 10

[The Gentlemen and the two Sailors descend, and go on board the barge.]

Enter, from thence, LYSIMACHUS and Lords;
with the Gentlemen and the two Sailors.

Tyr. Sail. Sir,
This is the man that can, in aught you would,
Resolve you.

Lys. Hail, reverend sir! the gods preserve
you!

Hel. And you, sir, to outlive the age I am,
And die as I would do.

Lys. You wish me well.
Being, on shore, honouring of Neptune's

I made to it, to know of whence you are.

Hel. First, what is your place? 20

Lys. I am the governor of this place you lie before.

Hel. Sir,
Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the king;
A man, who for this three months hath not seen any one, nor taken sustenance

But to prorogue his grief.

Lys. Upon what ground is his distemperature?

Hel. 'Twould be too tedious to repeat;
But the main grief springs from the loss
Of a beloved daughter and a wife. 3

Lys. May we not see 'him?

Hel. You may;
But bootless is your sight: he will not speak
To any.

Lys. Yet let me obtain my wish.

Hel. Behold him. [Pericles discovered.]

This was a goodly person,
Till the disaster that, one mortal night,
Drove him to this.

Lys. Sir king, all hail! the gods preserv-
you!

Hail, royal sir!

Hel. It is in vain; he will not speak to you.

First Lord. Sir,

We have a maid in Mytilene, I durst wager,
Would win some words of him.

Lys. 'Tis well bethought

She questionless with her sweet harmony
And other chosen attractions, would allure,
And make a battery through his deafen'd parts
Which now are midway stopp'd;
She is all happy as the fairest of all,
And, with her fellow maids, is now upon
The lenfy shelter that abuts against
The island's side.

[Whispers a Lord, who goes off in the barge of Lysimachus.]

Hel. Sure, all's effectless; yet nothing we'll omit

That bears recovery's name. But, since you kindness

We have stretch'd thus far, let us beseech you
That for our gold we may provision have,
Wherein we are not destitute for want,
But weary for the staleness.

Lys. O, sir, a courtesy
Which if we should deny, the most just gods
For every graff would send a caterpillar, 6
And so afflict our province. Yet once more Let me entreat to know at large the cause
Of your king's sorrow.

Hel. Sit, sir, I will recount it to you
But, see, I am prevented.

Re-enter, from the barge, Lord, with MARINA and a young Lady.

Lys. O, here is
The lady that I sent for. Welcome, fair one!
Is't not a goodly presence?

Hel. She's a gallant lady

Lys. She's such a one, that, were I well assured

Came of a gentle kind and noble stock,
I'd wish no better choice, and think me rarely
wed. 6

Fair one, all goodness that consists in bounty
Expect even here, where is a kindly patient:
If that thy prosperous and artificial feat
Can draw him but to answer thee in sight,
Thy sacred physic shall receive such pay
As thy desires can wish.

Mar. Sir, I will use

My utmost skill in his recovery,
Provided

That none but I and my companion maid
Be suffer'd to come near him.

Lys. Come, let us leave her;
And the gods make her prosperous! 80

[Marina sings.]
Lys. Mark'd he your music!

Mar. No, nor look'd on us.

Lys. See, she will speak to him.

Mar. Hail, sir! my lord, lend ear.

Per. Hum, ha!

Mar. I am a maid.

My lord, that ne'er before invited eyes,
But have been gaz'd on like a comet: she speaks,

My lord, that, may be, hath endured a grief
Might equal yours, if both were justly weigh'd.
Though wayward fortune did malign my state,
My derivation was from ancestors 92

Bound me in servitude. [Aside] I will desist;
But there is something glows upon my cheek,
And whispers in mine ear 'Go not till he speak.'

Per. My fortunes—parentage—good parent-age—
To equal mine!—was it not thus? what say
you?

Mar. I said, my lord, if you did know my parentage, 100

You would not do me violence.

Per. I do think so. Pray you, turn your eyes upon me.

You are like something that—What countrywoman?

Here of these shores?

Mar. No, nor of any shores:
Yet I was mortally brought forth, and am
No other than I appear.

Per. I am great with woe, and shall deliver weeping.

My dearest wife was like this maid, and such a one

My daughter might have been: my queen's square brows;

Her stature to an inch; as wand-like straight;
As silver-voic'd; her eyes as jewel-like 111

And cased as richly; in pace another Juno;
Who starves the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry,

The more she gives them speech. Where do you live?

Mar. Where I am but a stranger: from the deck

You may discern the place.

Per. Where were you bred?
And how achieved you these endowments, which

You make more rich to owe?

Mar. If I should tell my history, it would seem

Like lies diademat'd in the reporting.

Per. Prithee, speak: true
Falseness cannot come from thee; for thou look'st

Modest as Justice, and thou seem'st a palace

For the crown'd Truth to dwell in: I will believe thee,

And make my senses credit thy relation
To points that seem impossible; for thou look'st Like one I loved indeed. What were thy

friends?

Didst thou not say, when I did push thee
back—

Which was when I perceived thee—that thou camest

From good descending?

Mar. So indeed I did.
Per. Report thy parentage. I think thou said'st

Thou hadst been toss'd from wrong to injury,
And that thou thought'st thy griefs might equal mine,

If both were open'd.

Mar. Some such thing
I said, and said no more but what my thoughts
Did warrant me was likely.

Per. Tell thy story;
If thine consider'd prove the thousandth part

Of my endurance, thou art a man, and I
Have suffer'd like a girl: yet thou dost look Like Patience gazing on kings' graves, and smiling

Extremity out of act. What were thy friends?
How lost thou them? Thy name, my most kind virgin! 122

Recount, I do beseech thee: come, sit by me.

Mar. My name is Marina.

Per. O, I am mock'd,
And thou by some incensed god sent hither
To make the world to laugh at me.

Mar. Patience, good sir,
Or here I'll cease.

Per. Nay, I'll be patient.
Thou little know'st how thou dost startle me,
To call thyself Marina.

Mar. The name
Was given me by one that had some power,
My father, and a king.

Per. How! a king's daughter? 135

And call'd Marina?

Mar. You said you would believe me—
But, not to be a troubler of your peace,
I will end here.

Per. But are you flesh and blood?
Have you a working pulse? and are no fairy?

Motion! Well; speak on. Where were you born?

And wherefore call'd Marina?

Mar. Call'd Marina
For I was born at sea.

Per. At sea! what mother?

Mar. My mother was the daughter of a
king;

Who died the minute I was born. 140

As my good nurse Lychorida hath oft Deliver'd weeping.

Per. O, stop there a little!
[Aside] This is the rarest dream that e'er did

Did mock and fool withal; this cannot be:
My daughter's buried. Well: where was you bred?

I'll hear you more, to the bottom of your story,

And never interrupt you.

Mar. You scorn: believe me, 'twere best I did give o'er.

Per. I will believe you by the syllable Of what you shall deliver. Yet, give me leave: How came you in these parts? where were you bred?

Mar. The king my father did in Tarsus leave me;

Till cruel Cleon, with his wicked wife, Did seek to murder me: and having woo'd A villain to attempt it, who having drawn to do't,

A crew of pirates came and rescued me; Brought me to Mytilene. But, good sir, Whither will you have me? Why do you weep?

It may be, You think me an impostor: no, good faith; I am the daughter to King Pericles, 180 If good King Pericles be.

Per. Ho, Helicanus!

Hel. Calls my lord?

Per. Thou art a grave and noble counsellor, Most wise in general: tell me, if thou canst, What this maid is, or what is like to be, That thus hath made me weep!

Hel. I know not; but Here is the regent, sir, of Mytilene Speaks nobly of her.

Lys. She would never tell Her parentage; being demanded that, 190 She would sit still and weep.

Per. O Helicanus, strike me, honour'd sir; Give me a gash, put me to present pain; Lest this great sea of joys rushing upon me O'erbear the shores of my mortality, And drown me with their sweetness. O, come hither,

Thou that beget'st him that did thee beget; Thou that wast born at sea, buried at Tarsus, And found at sea again! O Helicanus, Down on thy knees, thank the holy gods as loud 200

As thunder threatens us: this is Marina. What was thy mother's name? tell me but that, For truth can never be confirm'd enough, Though doubts did ever sleep.

Mar. First, sir, I pray, What is your title?

Per. I am Pericles of Tyre: but tell me now My drown'd queen's name, as in the rest you said

Thou hast been godlike perfect, † The heir of kingdoms and another like To Pericles thy father. 210

Mar. Is it no more to be your daughter than To say my mother's name was Thaisa? Thaisa was my mother, who did end The minute I began.

Per. Now, blessing on thee! rise; thou art my child.

Give me fresh garments. Mine own, Helicanus; She is not dead at Tarsus, as she should have been,

By savage Cleon: she shall tell thee all; When thou shalt kneel, and justify in know-

She is thy very princess. Who is this? 220

Hel. Sir, 'tis the governor of Mytilene, Who, hearing of your melancholy state, Did come to see you.

Per. I embrace you. Give me my robes. I am wild in my beholding.

O heavens bless my girl! But, hark, what music!

Tell Helicanus, my Marina, tell him O'er, point by point, for yet he seems to doubt, How sure you are my daughter. But, what music!

Hel. My lord, I hear none.

Per. None! 230

The music of the spheres! List, my Marina.

Lys. It is not good to cross him; give him way.

Per. Rarest sounds! Do ye not hear?

Lys. My lord, I hear. [Music.]

Per. Most heavenly music! It nips me unto listening, and thick slumber Hangs upon mine eyes: let me rest. [Sleeps.]

Lys. A pillow for his head:

So, leave him all. Well, my companion friends, If this but answer to my just belief,

I'll well remember you. 240

[Exeunt all but Pericles.]

DIANA appears to PERICLES as in a vision.

Dia. My temple stands in Ephesus: hie thee thither,

And do upon mine altar sacrifice.

There, when my maiden priests are met together,

Before the people all, Reveal how thou at sea didst lose thy wife:

To mourn thy crosses, with thy daughter's, call And give them repetition to the life.

Or perform my bidding, or thou livest in woe; Do it, and happy; by my silver bow!

Awake, and tell thy dream. [Disappears.] 250

Per. Celestial Dian, goddess argentine, I will obey thee. Helicanus!

Re-enter HELICANUS, LYSIMACHUS, and MARINA.

Hel. Sir!

Per. My purpose was for Tarsus, there to strike

The inhospitable Cleon; but I am For other service first: toward Ephesus

Turn our blown sails; erelong I'll tell thee why.

[To Lysimachus] Shall we refresh us, sir, upon your shore,

And give you gold for such provision As our intents will need!

Lys. Sir, 260

With all my heart; and, when you come ashore,

I have another suit.

Per. You shall prevail, Were it to woo my daughter: for it seems

You have been noble towards her.

Lys. Sir, lend me your arm.

Per. Come, my Marina. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Enter GOWER, before the temple of DIANA at Ephesus.

Gow. Now our sands are almost run;
More a little, and then dumb.
This, my last boon, give me,
For such kindness must relieve me,
That you aptly will suppose
What pagenry, what feats, what shows,
What minstrelsy, and pretty din,
The regent made in Mytilene
To greet the king. So he thrived,
That he is promised to be wived
To fair Marina; but in no wise
Till he had done his sacrifice,
As Dian bade: whereto being bound,
The interim, pray you, all confound.
In feather'd briefness sails are fill'd,
And wishes fall out as they're will'd.
At Ephesus, the temple see,
Our king and all his company.
That he can hither come so soon,
Is by your fancy's thankful doom. [Exit. 20]

SCENE III. The temple of Diana at Ephesus; THAISA standing near the altar, as high priestess; a number of Virgins on each side; CERIMON and other Inhabitants of Ephesus attending.

Enter PERICLES, with his train; LYSIMACHUS, HELICANUS, MARINA, and a Lady.

Per. Hail, Dian! to perform thy just command,

I here confess myself the king of Tyre;
Who, frighted from my country, did wed
At Pentapolis the fair Thaisa.
At sea in childhood died she, but brought forth
A maid-child call'd Marina; who, O goddess, Wears yet thy silver livery. She at Tarsus
Was nursed with Cleon; who at fourteen years
He sought to murder; but her better stars
Brought her to Mytilene; 'gainst whose shore
Riding, her fortunes brought the maid aboard us, 11

Where, by her own most clear remembrance,
she

Made known herself my daughter.

Thai. Voice and favour!
You are, you are—O royal Pericles! [Faints.]

Per. What means the nun! she dies! help, gentlemen!

Cer. Noble sir,
If you have told Diana's altar true,
This is your wife.

Per. Reverend appearer, no;
I throw her overboard with these very arms.

Cer. Upon this coast, I warrant you.

Per. 'Tis most certain. 20
Cer. Look to the lady; O, she's but o'erjoy'd.

Early in blustering morn this lady was Thrown upon this shore. I oped the coffin, Found there rich jewels; recover'd her, and placed her

Here in Diana's temple.

Per. May we see them!

Cer. Great sir, they shall be brought to you my house,
Whither I invite you. Look, Thaisa is Recovered.

Thai. O, let me look!
If he be none of mine, my sanctity
Will to my sense bend no licentious ear, 30
But curb it, spite of seeing. O, my lord,
Are you not Pericles? Like him you speak,
Like him you are: did you not name a tempest,
A birth, and death!

Per. The voice of dead Thaisa!

Thai. That Thaisa am I, supposed dead
And drown'd.

Per. Immortal Dian!

Thai. Now I know you better.
When we with tears parted Pentapolis,
The king my father gave you such a ring.

[Shows a ring.]

Per. This, this: no more, you gods! your present kindness 40

Makes my past miseries sports: you shall do
well,

That on the touching of her lips I may Melt and no more be seen. O, come, be buried
A second time within these arms.

Mar. My heart
Leaps to be gone into my mother's bosom.

[Kneels to Thaisa.]

Per. Look, who kneels here! Flesh of thy flesh, Thaisa;
Thy burden at the sea, and call'd Marina
For she was yielded there.

Thai. Blest, and mine own!

Hel. Hail, madam, and my queen!

Thai. I know you not.

Per. You have heard me say, when I did fly from Tyre, 50

I left behind an ancient substitute:
Can you remember what I call'd the man?
I have named him oft.

Thai. 'Twas Helicanus then.

Per. Still confirmation:
Embrace him, dear Thaisa; this is he.

Now do I long to hear how you were found;

How possibly preserved; and who to thank,

Besides the gods, for this great miracle.

Thai. Lord Cerimon, my lord; this man.

Through whom the gods have shown their power; that can 60

From first to last resolve you.

Per. Reverend sir,

The gods can have no mortal officer

More like a god than you. Will you deliver

How this dead queen re-lives!

Cer. I will, my lord.

Beseech you, first go with me to my house,

Where shall be shown you all was found with

her;

How she came placed here in the temple;

No needful thing omitted.

Per. Pure Dian, bless thee for thy vision! I

Will offer night-oblations to thee. Thaisa, 70

This prince, the fair-betroth'd of your daughter,

Shall marry her at Pentapolis. And now,

This ornament

Makes me look dismal will I clip to fast;

And what this fourteen years no man touch'd,

To grace thy marriage-day, I'll beautify.

That, Lord Cerimon hath letters of good credit, sir,

My father's dead.

Per. Heavens make a star of him! Yet there, my queen,

We'll celebrate their nuptials, and ourselves so Will in that kingdom spend our following days:

Our son and daughter shall in Tyre reign.

Lord Cerimon, we do our loving stay

To hear the rest untold: sir, lead's the way.

[Exeunt.]

Enter Gowen.

Gow. In Antiochus and his daughter you have heard

Of monstrous lust the due and just reward:

In Pericles, his queen and daughter, seen.

Although assail'd with fortune fierce and keen,

Virtue preserved from fell destruction's blast, Led on by heaven, and crown'd with joy at last:

In Helicanus may you well descry

A figure of truth, of faith, of loyalty:

In reverend Cerimon there well appears

The worth that learned charity eyes wear:

For wicked Cleon and his wife, when fame Had spread their cursed deed, and honour'd name

Of Pericles, to rage the city turn,

That him and his they in his palace burn:

The gods for murder seemed so content To punish them; although not done, but meant.

So, on your patience evermore attending,

New joy waits on you! Here our play has ending.

VENUS AND ADONIS

'Vilia miretur vulgus; mihi flavus Apollo
Pocula Castalia plena ministret aqua.'

TO THE

RIGHT HONOURABLE HENRY WRIOTHESLY,

RIGHT HONOURABLE

I KNOW not how I shall offend in dedicating my unpolished lines to your lordship, nor how the world will censure me for choosing so strong a prop to support so weak a burden: only if your honour seem but pleased, I account myself highly praised, and vow to take advantage of all idle hours, till I have honoured you with some graver labour. But if the first heir of my invention prove deformed, I shall be sorry it had so noble a god-father, and never after ear so barren a land, for fear it yield me still so bad a harvest. I leave it to your honourable survey, and your honour to your heart's content; which I wish may always answer your own wish and the world's hopeful expectation.

Your honour's in all duty,

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

EVEN as the sun with purple-colour'd face
Had ta'en his last leave of the weeping morn,
Rose-cheek'd Adonis hied him to the chase;
Hunting he loved, but love he laugh'd to scorn;
Sick-thoughted Venus makes amain unto
him,
And like a bold-faced suitor 'gins to woo him.

'Thrice-fairer than myself,' thus she began,
'The field's chief flower, sweet above compare,
Stain to all nymphs, more lovely than a man,
More white and red than doves or roses are;
Nature that made thee, with herself at strife,
Saith that the world hath ending with thy life.

'Vouchsafe, thou wonder, to alight thy steed,
And rein his proud head to the saddle-bow;
If thou wilt dign this favour, for thy meed
A thousand honey secrets shalt thou know:
Here come and sit, where never serpent hisses,
And being set, I'll smother thee with kisses;

'And yet not cloy thy lips with loathed satiety,
But rather furnish them amid their plenty, so
Making them red and pale with fresh variety,
Ten kisses short as one, one long as twenty:
A summer's day will seem an hour but short,
Being wasted in such time-beguiling sport.'

With this she seimeth on
The precedent of pith and

And trembling in her passion, calls it balm,
Earth's sovereign salve to do a goddess good:
Being so enraged, desire doth lend her force
Courageously to pluck him from his horse.

Over one arm the lusty courser's rein,
Under her other was the tender boy,
Who blush'd and pouted in a dull disdain,
With leaden appetite, unapt to toy;
She red and hot as coals of glowing fire,
He red for shame, but frosty in desire.

The studded bridle on a ragged bough
Numbly she fastens:—O, how quick in love!—
The steed is stalled up, and even now
To tie the rider she begins to prove:
Backward she push'd him, as she would be thrust,
And govern'd him in strength, though not in lust.

So soon was she along as he was down,
Each leaning on their elbows and their hips:
Now doth she stroke his cheek, now doth he frown,
And gins to chide, but soon she stops his lips:
And kissing speaks, with lustful language broken.

'If thou wilt chide, thy lips shall never cease.'
He burns with bashful shame: she with her
tears
Doth quench the maiden burning of his cheeks;

Then with her windy sighs and golden hairs 51
To fan and blow them dry again she seeks:
He saith she is immodest, blames her 'miss;
What follows more she murders with a kiss

Even as an empty eagle, sharp by fast,
Tires with her beak on feathers, flesh and bone,
Shaking her wings, devouring all in haste,
Till either gorge be stuff'd or prey be gone;
Even so she kissed his brow, his cheek, his chin.

And where she ends she doth anew begin. 60

Forced to content, but never to obey,
Fainting he lies and breatheth in her face;
She feedeth on the steam as on a prey,
And calls it heavenly moisture, air of grace;
Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of
flowers,
So they were dew'd with such distilling
showers.

Look, how a bird lies tangled in a net,
So fasten'd in her arms Adonis lies;
Pure shame and awed resistance made him fret,
Which bred more beauty in his angry eyes: 70
Rain added to a river that is rank
Perforce will force it overflow the bank.

Still she entreats, and prettily entreats,
For to a pretty ear she tunes her tale;
Still is he sullen, still he lours and frets,
Twixt crimson shame and anger ashy-pale:
Being red, she loves him best; and being white,
Her best is better'd with a more delight.

Look how he can, she cannot choose but love;
And by her fair immortal hand she swears, 80
From his soft bosom never to remove,
Till he take truce with her contending tears,
Which long have rain'd, making her cheeks
all wet;
And one sweet kiss shall pay this countless debt.

As the young dove in oil, quick as quick,
So offers he to give what she did crave;
But when her lips were ready for his pay,
He winks, and turns his lips another way. 90

Never did passenger in summer's heat
More thirst for drink than she for this good turn.

Her help she sees, but help she cannot get;
She bathes in water, yet her fire must burn:
'O, pity,' can she cry, 'flint-hearted boy!
'Tis but a kiss I beg; why art thou coy?

'I have been woo'd, as I entreat thee now,
Even by the stern and direful god of war,
Whose snowy neck in battle ne'er did bow,
Who conquers where he comes in every jar; 100
Yet hath he been my captive and my slave,
And begg'd for that which thou unask'd

'Over my altars hath he hung his lance,
His batter'd shield, his uncontrolled crest,
And for my sake hath learn'd to sport and
dance,

To toy, to wanton, dally, smile and jest,
Scorning his churlish drum and ensign red,
Making my arms his field, his tent my bed.

'Thus he that overruled I o' y'd,
Leading him prisoner in a r chain: 110
Strong-temper'd steel his per strength
obey'd,

Yet was he servile to my coy disdain.
O, be not proud, nor brag not of thy might,
For mastering her that foil'd the god of fight!

'Touch but my lips with those fair lips of
thine,—
Though mine be not so fair, yet are they red—
The kiss shall be thine own as well as mine.
What seest thou in the ground? hold up thy
head:
Look in mine eye-balls, there thy beauty lies;
Then why not lips on lips, since eyes in eyes!

'Art thou ashamed to kiss? then wink again,
And I will wink; so shall the day seem night;
Love keeps his revels where there are but twain;
Be bold to play, our sport is not in sight:
These blue-vein'd violets whereon we lean Never can blab, nor know not what we mean.

'The tender spring upon thy tempting lip Shows thee unripe; yet mayst thou well be tasted:
Make use of time, let not advantage slip;
Beauty within itself should not be wasted: 130 Fair flowers that are not gather'd in their prime
Rot and consume themselves in little time.

'Were I hard-favour'd, foul, or wrinkled-old,
Ill-nurtured, crooked, churlish, harsh in voice,
O'erworm, despised, rheumatic and cold,
Thick-sighted, barren, lean and lacking juice,
Then mightst thou pause, for then I were not for thee;
But having no defects, why dost abhor me!

'Thou canst not see one wrinkle in my brow;
Mine eyes are gray and bright and quick in turning; 140
My beauty as the spring doth yearly grow,
My flesh is soft and plump, my narrow burning;
My smooth moist hand, were it with thy hand felt,
Would in thy palm dissolve, or seem to melt.

'Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear,
Or, like a fairy, trip upon the green,
Or, like a nymph, with long dishevell'd hair,
Dance on the sands, and yet no footing seen:
Love is a spirit all compact of fire,
Not gross to sink, but light, and will aspire.

'Witness this primrose bank whereon I lie: 151
These forceless flowers like sturdy trees support
me;

Two strengthless doves will draw me through the sky,
From morn till night, even where I list to sport
me:

Is love so light, sweet boy, and may it be
That thou shouldst think it heavy unto thee!

'Is thine own heart to thine own face affected?
Can thy right hand seize love upon thy left?
Then woo thyself, be of thyself rejected,
Steal thine own freedom and complain on theft.
Narcissus so himself himself forsook, 161
And died to kiss his shadow in the brook.

'Torches are made to light, jewels to wear,
Dainties to taste, fresh beauty for the use,
Herbs for their smell, and sappy plants to bear;
Things growing to themselves are growth's
abuse:

Seeds spring from seeds and beauty breedeth
beauty;
Thou wast begot; to get it is thy duty.

'Upon the earth's increase why shouldst thou
feed,
Unless the earth with thy increase be fed? 170
By law of nature thou art bound to breed,
That thine may live when thou thyself art
dead;
And so, in spite of death, thou dost survive,
In that thy likeness still is left alive.'

By this the love-sick queen began to sweat,
For where they lay the shadow had forsook
them,
And Titan, tired in the mid-day heat,
With burning eye did hotly overlook them;
Wishing Adonis had his team to guide,
So he were like him and by Venus' side. 180

And now Adonis, with a lazy spright,
And with a heavy, dark, disliking eye,
His lowering brows o'erwhelming his fair sight,
Like misty vapours when they blot the sky,
Souring his cheeks cries 'Fie, no more of
love!

The sun doth burn my face; I must remove.'

'Ay me,' quoth Venus, 'young, and so unkind!
What bare excuses makest thou to be gone!
I'll sigh celestial breath, whose gentle wind
Shall cool the heat of this descending sun: 190
I'll make a shadow for thee of my hairs;
If they burn too, I'll quench them with my
tears.

'The sun that shines from heaven shines but warm,
And, lo, I lie between that sun and thee:
The heat I have from thence doth little harm,
Thine eye darts forth the fire that burneth me;
And were I not immortal, life were done
Between this heavenly and earthly sun.

'Art thou obstinate, flinty, hard as steel,
Nay, more than flint, for stone at rain relenteth?
Art thou a woman's son, and canst not feel?
What 'tis to love! how want of love tormenteth!

O, had thy mother borne so hard a mind,
She had not brought forth thee, but died unkind.

'What am I, that thou shouldst condemn me
this!

Or what great danger dwells upon my suit?
What were thy lips the worse for one poor kiss?
Speak, fair; but speak fair words, or else be mute:

Give me one kiss, I'll give it thee again, 200
And one for interest, if thou wilt have twain.

'Fie, lifeless picture, cold and senseless stone,
Well-painted idol, image dull and dead,
Statue contenting but the eye alone,
Thing like a man, but of no woman bred!
Thou art no man, though of a man's complexion,
For men will kiss even by their own direction.'

This said, impatience chokes her pleading
tongue,

And swelling passion doth provoke a pause;
Red cheeks and fiery eyes blaze forth her wrong;
Being judge in love, she cannot right her cause:
And now she weeps, and now she fain would
speak, 210
And now her sobs do her intendments break.

Sometimes she shakes her head and then his
hand,

Now gazeth she on him, now on the ground;
Sometimes her arms infold him like a band;
She would, he will not in her arms be bound;
And when from thence he struggles to be gone, 220
"ly fingers one in one.

'Fondling,' she saith, 'since I have hemm'd thee here

Within the circuit of this ivory pale, 230
I'll be a park, and thou shalt be my deer;
Feed where thou wilt, on mountain or in dale:
Graze on my lips; and if those hills be dry,
Stray lower, where the pleasant fountains lie.

'Within this limit is relief enough,
Sweet bottom-grass and high delightful plain,
Round rising hillocks, brakes obscure and
rough,
To shelter thee from tempest and from rain:
Then be my deer, since I am such a park;
No dog shall rouse thee, though a thousand
bark. 240

At this Adonis smiles as in disdain,
That in each cheek appears a pretty dimple:
Love made those hollows, if himself were slain,
He might be buried in a tomb so simple;
Foreknowing well, if there he came to lie,
Why, there Love lived and there he could not die.

These lovely caves, these round enchanting pits,
Open'd their mouths to swallow Venus' liking.
Being mad before, how doth she now for wits?
Struck dead at first, what needs a second striking! 250

Poor queen of love, in thine own law forlorn,
To love a cheek that smiles at thee in scorn!

Now which way shall she turn? what shall she say?

Her words are done, her woes the more increasing;
The time is spent, her object will away,
And from her twining arms doth urge releasing.
'Pity,' she cries, 'some favour, some remorse!
Away he springs and hasteth to his horse.

But, lo, from forth a copse that neighbours by,
A breeding jennet, lusty, young and proud, 260
Adonis' trampling courser doth espy,
And forth she rushes, snorts and neighs aloud:
The strong-neck'd steed, being tied unto a tree,
Breaketh his rein, and to her straight goes he.

Imperiously he leaps, he neighs, he bounds,
And now his woven girths he breaks asunder;
The bearing earth with his hard hoof he wounds,

Whose hollow womb resounds like heaven's
thunder;

The iron bit he crusheth 'tween his teeth,
Controlling what he was controlled with. 270

His ears up-prick'd; his braided hanging mane
Upon his compass'd crest now stand on end;
His nostrils drink the air, and forth again,
As from a furnace, vapours doth he send:
His eye, which scornful glisters like fire,
Shows his hot courage and his high desire.

Sometime he trots, as if he told the steps,
With gentle majesty and modest pride;
Anon he rears upright, curvets and leaps,
As who should say 'Lo, thus my strength is tried, 280

And this I do to captivate the eye
Of the fair breeder that is standing by.'

What reckoneth he his rider's angry stir,
His flattering 'Holla,' or his 'Stand, I say'!
What cares he now for curb or pricking spur?
For rich caparisons or trapping gay?

He sees his love, and nothing else he sees,
For nothing else with his proud sight agrees.

Look, when a painter would surpass the life,
In limning out a well-proportion'd steed, 290
His art with nature's workmanship at strife,
As if the dead the living should exceed;
So did this horse excel a common one
In shape, in courage, colour, pace and bone.

Round-head'd, short-jointed, fetlocks shag and
long,

Broad breast, full eye, small head and nostril
wide,

High crest, short ears, straight legs and passing strong,

This mane, thick tail, broad buttock, tender neck!

What a horse should have he did not lack,

Here a pated rider on so proud a back. 300

Sometime he scuds far off and there he stares;
Anon he starts at stirring of a feather;
To bid the wind a base he now prepares,
And whether he run or fly they know not whether;

For through his mane and tail the high wind
sings,
Fanning the hairs, who wave like feather'd wings.

He looks upon his love and neighs unto her;
She answers him as if she knew his mind:
Being proud, as females are, to see him woo her,
She puts on outward strangeness, seems unkind, Spurns at his love and scorning the heat he feels, 310
Beating his kind embracements with her heels.

Then, like a melancholy malcontent,
He vails his tail that, like a falling plume,
Cool shadow to his melting buttock lent:
He stamps and bites the poor flies in his fume.
His love, perceiving how he is enraged,
Grew kinder, and his fury was assuaged.

His teasy master goeth about to take him;
When, lo, the unback'd breeder, full of fear, 320
Jealous of catching, swiftly doth forsake him,
With her the horse, and left Adonis there:
As they were mad, unto the wood they hide
them,
Out-stripping crows that strive to over-fly
them.

All swoln with chafing, down Adonis sits,
Banning his bolterous and unruly beast:
And now the happy season once more fits,
That love-sick Love by pleading may be blast;
For lovers say, the heart hath treble wrong
When it is barr'd the aidance of the tongue.

An oven that is stopp'd, or river stay'd, 330
Burneth more hotly, swelleth with more rage:
So of concealed sorrow may be said;
Free vent of words love's fire doth assuage;
But when the heart's attorney once is mute,
The client breaks, as desperate in his suit.

He sees her coming, and begins to glow,
Even as a dying coal revives with wind,
And with his bonnet hides his angry brow;
Looks on the dull earth with disturbed mind,
Taking no notice that she is so nigh, 340
For all askance he holds her in his eye.

O, what a sight it was, wistly to view
How she came stealing to the wayward boy!
To note the fighting conflict of her hue,
How white and red each other did destroy!
But now her cheek was pale, and by and by
It flash'd forth fire, as lightning from the sky.

Now was she just before him as he sat,
And like a lowly lover down she kneels; 350
With one fair hand she heaveth up his hat,
Her other tender hand his fair cheek feels:
His tenderer cheek receives her soft hand's
print,
As apt as new-fall'n snow takes any dint.

O, what a war of looks was then between them!
Her eyes petitioners to his eyes suing;
His eyes saw her eyes as they had not seen
them;

Her eyes woo'd still, his eyes disdain'd the wooing;

And all this dumb play had his acts made plain

With tears, which, chorus-like, her eyes did
rain. 360

Full gently now she takes him by the hand,
A hly prison'd in a gaol of snow,
Or ivory in an alabaster band;

So white a friend engirts so white a foe:
This beauteous combat, wilful and unwilling,
Show'd like two silver doves that sit a-billing.

Once more the engine of her thoughts began:
'O fairest mover on this mortal round,

Would thou wert as I am, and I a man,
My heart all whole as thine, thy heart my
wound; 370

For one sweet look thy help I would assure thee, Though nothing but my body's bane would cure thee.'

'Give me my hand,' saith he, 'why dost thou feel it?'

'Give me my heart,' saith she, 'and thou shalt have it;

O, give it me, lest thy hard heart do steel it,
And being steel'd, soft sighs can never grave it:
Then love's deep groans I never shall regard,
Because Adonis' heart hath made mine hard.'

'For shame,' he cries, 'let go, and let me go;
My day's delight is past, my horse is gone, 380

And 'tis your fault I am bereft him so:
I pray you hence, and leave me here alone;

For all my mind, my thought, my busy care,
Is how to get my palfrey from the mare.'

Thus she replies: 'Thy palfrey, as he should,
Welcomes the warm approach of sweet desire:

Affection is a coal that must be cool'd:
Else, suffer'd, it will set the heart on fire:

The sea hath bounds, but deep desire hath
none;

Therefore no marvel though thy horse be
gone. 390

'How like a jade he stood, tied to the tree,
Servilely master'd with a leathern rein!

But when he saw his love, his youth's fair fee,
He held such petty bondage in disdain:

Throwing the bridle from his bending
crest,

Enfranchising his mouth, his back, his breast.

'Who sees his true-love in her naked bed,
Teaching the sheets a whiter hue than white,

But, when his glutton eye so full hath fed,
His other agents aim at like delights! 400

Who is so faint, that dares not be so bold
To touch the fire, the weather being cold?

'Let me excuse thy course, I
And learn of him, I heartily'

To take advantage on Though I were dumb, yet ^{ing} teach
thee:

O, learn to love; the lesson is but plain,
And once made perfect, never lost again.'

'I know not love,' quoth he, 'nor will not
know it,

Unless it be a boar, and then I chase it; 420
'Tis much to borrow, and I will not owe it;

My love to love is love but to disgrace it;
For I have heard it is a life in death,

That laughs and weeps, and all but with a
breath.

'Who wears a garment shapeless and unfinish'd?
Who plucks the bud before one leaf put forth!

If springing things be any jot diminish'd,
They wither in their prime, prove nothing
worth:

The colt that's back'd and burden'd being young

Loseth his pride and never waxeth strong. 430

'You hurt my hand with wringing; let us part,
And leave this idle theme, this bootless chat;

Remove your siege from my unyielding heart;
To love's alarms it will not ope the gate'

Dismiss your vows, your fainted tears, your flatery;

For where a heart is hard they make no
battery.'

'What! canst thou talk?' quoth she, 'hast thou a tongue?

O, would thou hadst not, or I had no hearing!
Thy mermaid's voice hath done me double
wrong;

I had my load before, now press'd with bearing;
Melodious discord, heavenly tune harsh-sounding, 435

Ear's deep-sweet music, and heart's deep-sore wounding.

'Had I no eyes but ears, my ears would love
That inward beauty and invisible;

Or were I deaf, thy outward parts would move
Each part in me that were but sensible;

Though neither eyes nor ears, to hear nor see,
Yet should I be in love by touching thee.

'Say, that the sense of feeling were bereft me,
And that I could not see, nor hear, nor touch,

And nothing but the very smell were left me,
Yet would my love to thee be still as much;

For from the stillitory of thy face exceeding Comes breath perfum'd that breedeth love by smelling.

'But, O, what banquet wert thou to the taste,
Being nurse and feeder of the other four!

Would they not wish the feast might ever last,
And bid Suspicion double-lock the door,

Lest Jealousy, that sour unwelcome guest,
Should, by his stealing in, disturb the feast?

Once more the
Which to his ^{did honey passages yield:}

Like a red morn, that ever yet betoken'd
Wreck to the seaman, tempest to the field,
Sorrow to shepherds, woe unto the birds,
Gusta and foul flaws to herdmen and to herds.

This ill presage advisodly she marketh :
Even as the wind is hush'd before it raineth,
Or as the wolf doth grin before he barketh,
Or as the berry breaks before it staineth, 460
Or like the deadly bullet of a gun,
His meaning struck her ere his words begun.

And at his look she flatly falleth down,
For looks kill love and love by looks reviveth ;
A smile recures the wounding of a frown ;
But blessed bankrupt, that by love so thriveth !
The silly boy, believing she is dead,
Claps her pale cheek, till clapping makes it red ;

And all amazed brake off his late intent,
For sharply he did think to reprehend her, 470
Which cunning love did wittily prevent :
Fair fall the wit that can so well defend her !
For on the grass she lies as she were slain,
Till his breath breatheth life in her again.

He wrings her nose, he strikes her on the cheeks,
He bends her fingers, holds her pulses hard,
He chafes her lips ; a thousand ways he seeks
To mend the hurt that his unkindness marr'd :
He kisses her ; and she, by her good will,
Will never rise, so he will kiss her still. 480

The night of sorrow now is turn'd to day :
Her two blue windows faintly she up-heaveth,
Like the fair sun, when in his fresh array
He cheers the morn and all the earth relieveth ;
And as the bright sun glorifies the sky,
So is her face illumined with her eye ;

Whose beams upon his hairless face are fix'd,
As if from thence they borrow'd all their shine.
Were never four such lamps together mix'd,
Had not his clouded with his brow's repine ; 490
But hers, which through the crystal tears gave light,
Shone like the moon in water seen by night.

'O, where am I?' quoth she, 'in earth or heaven,
Or in the ocean drench'd, or in the fire !
What hour is this ? or morn or weary even ?
Do I delight to die, or life desire ?
But now I lived, and life was death's annoy ;
But now I died, and death was lively joy.

'O, thou didst kill me : kill me once again :
Thy eyes shrewd tutor, that hard heart of thine, 500
Hath taught them scornful tricks and such disdain
That they have murder'd this poor heart of mine ;
And these mine eyes, true leaders to their But leeches lips no more had seen.

'Long may they kiss each other, for this cure !
O, never let their crimson liveries wear !
And as they last, their verdure still endure,
To drive infection from the dangerous year !
That the star-gazers, having writ on death,
May say, the plague is banish'd by thy breath. 510 lips, sweet seals in my soft lips imprinted,

What bargains may I make, still to be sealing !
To sell myself I can be well contented,
So thou wilt buy and pay and use good dealing :
Which purchase if thou make, for fear of slips
Set thy seal-manual on my wax-red lips.

'A thousand kisses buys my heart from me ;
And pay them at thy leisure, one by one.
What is ten hundred touches unto thee ?
Are they not quickly told and quickly gone ?
Say, for non-payment that the debt should double, 520
Is twenty hundred kisses such a trouble !'

'Fair queen,' quoth he, 'if any love you owe me,
Measure my strangeness with my unripe years :
Before I know myself, seek not to know me ;
No fisher but the ungrown fry forbears :
The mellow plum doth fall, the green sticks fast,
Or being early pluck'd is sour to taste.

'Look, the world's comforter, with weary gait,
His day's hot task hath ended in the west ; 530
The owl, night's herald, shrieks, "This very late."
The sheep are gone to fold, birds to their nest,
And coal-black clouds that shadow heaven's light
Do summon us to part and bid good night.

'Now let me say "Good night," and so say you ;
If you will say so, you shall have a kiss.'
'Good night,' quoth she, and, ere he says
'Adieu,

The honey fee of parting tender'd is :
Her arms do lend his neck a sweet embrace ;
Incorporate then they seem ; face grows to face. 540

Till, breathless, he disjoin'd, and backward drew
The heavenly moisture, that sweet coral mouth,
Whose precious taste her thirsty lips well knew,
Whereon they surfeit, yet complain on drouth :
He with her plenty press'd, she faint with dearth,
Their lips together glued, fall to the earth.

Now quick desire hath caught the yielding prey,
And glutton-like she feeds, yet never filleth ;
Her lips are conquerors, his lips obey,
Paying what ransom the insular wilth ; 550
Whose culture thought doth pitch the price so high,
That she will draw his lips' rich treasure dry'

And having felt the sweetness of the spoil,
With blindfold fury she begins to forage;
Her face doth reek and smoke, her blood doth boil,
And careless lust stirs up a desperate courage;
Planting oblivion, healing reason back,
Forgetting shame's pure blush and honour's
wrack.

Hot, faint, and weary, with her hard embracing,
Like a wild bird being tamed with too much handling, ⁵⁶⁰
Or as the fleet-foot roe that's tired with chasing,
Or like the froward infant still'd with dandling,
He now obeys, and now no more resisteth,
While she takes all she can, not all she listeth.

What wax so frozen but dissolves with tempering,
And yields at last to very light impression?
Things out of hope are compass'd oft with venturing,
Chiefly in love, whose leave exceeds commission:
Affection faints not like a pale-faced coward,
But then woos best when most his choice is froward. ⁵⁷⁰

When he did frown, O, had she then gave over,
Such nectar from his lips she had not suck'd.
Foul words and frowns must not repel a lover;
What though the rose have prickles, yet 'tis pluck'd:
Were beauty under twenty locks kept fast,
Yet love breaks through and picks them all at last.

For pity now she can no more detain him;
The poor fool prays her that he may depart:
She is resolved no longer to restrain him; ⁵⁷⁰
Bids him farewell, and look well to her heart,
The which, by Cupid's bow she doth protest,
He carries thence incaged in his breast.

'Sweet boy,' she says, 'this night I'll waste in sorrow
For my sick heart commands mine eyes to watch.
Tell me, Love's master, shall we meet tomorrow!
Say, shall we? shall we? wilt thou make the match?'
He tells her, no; to-morrow he intends
To hunt the boar with certain of his friends.

'The boar!' quoth she; whereat a sudden pale,
Like lawn being spread upon the blushing
rose, ⁵⁸⁰
Ursues her cheek; she trembles at his tale,
And on his neck her yoking arms she throws:
She sinketh down, still hanging by his neck,
He on her belly falls, she on her back.

Now is she in the very lists of love,
Her champion mounted for the hot encounter:
All is imaginary she doth prove,
He will not manage her, although he mount her;

That worse than Tantalus' is her annoy,
To clip Elysium and to lack her joy. ⁶⁰⁰

Even as poor birds, deceived with painted grapes,
Do surfeit by the eye and pine the maw,
Even so she languisheth in her misshape,
As those poor birds that helpless berries saw.
The warm effects which she in him finds missing
She seeks to kindle with continual kissing.

But all in vain; good queen, it will not be;
She hath assay'd as much as may be proved;
Her pleading hath deserved a greater fee; ⁶⁰⁰
She's Love, she loves, and yet she is not loved.
'Fie, fie,' he says, 'you crush me; let me go;
You have no reason to withhold me so.'

'Thou hadst been gone,' quoth she, 'sweet boy,
ere this,
But that thou told'st me thou wouldst hunt
the boar.
O, be advis'd! thou know'st not what it is
With javelin's point a churlish swine to gore,
Whose tusches never sheathed he whetteth
still,
Like to a mortal butcher bent to kill.

On his bow-back he hath a battle set
Of bristly pikes, that ever threat his foes; ⁶⁰⁰
His eyes, like glow-worms, shine when he doth fret;
His snout digs sepulchres where'er he goes;
Being moved, he strikes whate'er is in his
way,
And whom he strikes his crooked tusches
slay.

'His brawny sides, with hairy bristles arm'd,
Are better proof than thy spear's point can enter;
His short thick neck cannot be easily harm'd;
Being ireful, on the lion he will venture:
The thorny brambles and embracing bushes,
As fearful of him, part, through whom he rushes. ⁶³⁰

'Alas, he nought esteems that face of thine,
To which Love's eyes pay tributary gazes;
Nor thy soft hands, sweet lips and crystal cyne,
Whose full perfection all the world amazes;
But having thee at vantage,—wondrous dread!—
Would root these beauties as he roots the mead.

'O, let him keep his loathsome cabin still;
Beauty hath nought to do with such foul
Come not within his danger by thy will;
They that thrive well take counsel of their friends. ⁶⁴⁰
When thou didst name the boar, not to dis-
semble,
I fear'd thy fortune, and my joints did tremble.

'Didst thou not mark my face? was it not white!

Sawst thou not signs of fear lurk in mine eye?
Grew I not faint? and fell I not downright?

Within my bosom, whereon thou dost lie,
My bodied heart pants, beats, and takes no

rest,
But, like an earthquake, shakes thee on my breast.

'For where Love reigns, disturbing Jealousy
Doth call himself Affection's sentinel; 650
Gives false alarms, suggesteth mutiny,
And in a peaceful hour doth cry "Kill, kill!"

Distemp'ring gentle Love in his desire,
As air and water do abate the fire.

'This sour informer, this bate-breeding spy,
This canker that eats up Love's tender spring,
This carry-tale, disemulous Jealousy,
That sometime true news, sometime false doth

bring,
Knocks at my heart and whispers in mine

ear 659
That if I love thee, I thy death should fear:

'And more than so, presenteth to mine eye
The picture of an angry-chafing boar,
Under whose sharp fangs on his back doth lie
An image like thyself, all stain'd with gore;

Whose blood upon the fresh flowers being shed
Doth make them droop with grief and hang the head.

'What should I do, seeing thee so indeed,
That tremble at the imagination?
The thought of it doth make my faint heart
bleed,

And fear doth teach it divination: 670
I prophesy thy death, my living sorrow,
If thou encounter with the boar to-morrow.

'But if thou needs wilt hunt, be ruled by me;
Uncouple at the timorous flying hare,
Or at the fox which lives by subtlety,
Or at the roe which no encounter dare:

Pursue these fearful creatures o'er the downs,
And on thy well-breath'd horse keep with thy hounds.

'And when thou hast on foot the purblind hare, 679

Mark the poor wretch, to overthrow his troubles
How he outruns the wind and with what care
He cranks and crosses with a thousand doubles:
The many mazes through the which he goes
Are like a labyrinth to amaze his foes.

'Sometime he runs among a flock of sheep,
To make the cunning hounds mistake their smell,

And sometime where earth-delving conies keep,
To stop the loud pursuers in their yell,

And sometime scorcheth with a herd of deer:
Danger deviseth shifts; wit waits on fear: 690

'For there his smell with others being mingled,
The hot scent-snuffing hounds are driven to
doubt,

Ceasing their clamorous cry till they have singled
With much ado the cold fault cleanly out;

Then do they spend air mouths: Echo
replies,

As if another chase were: the skies.

'By this, poor Wat, far off upon a hill,
Stands on his hinder legs with listening ear,
To hearken if his foes pursue him still:
Anon their loud alarms he doth hear; 700
And now his grief may be compared well
To one sore sick that hears the passing-bell.

'Then shalt thou see the dew-bedabbled wretch
Turn, and return, indenting with the way;
Each envious brier his weary legs doth scratch,
Each shadow makes him stop, each murmur

stay:
For misery is trodden on by many,
And being low never relieved by any.

'Lie quietly, and hear a little more: 709
Nay, do not struggle, for thou shalt not rise:
To make thee hate the hunting of the boar,
Unlike myself thou hearest me moralize,
Applying this to that, and so to so;
For love can comment upon every woe.

'Where did I leave?' 'No matter where;' 710
quoth he,

'Leave me, and then the story aptly ends:
The night is spent.' 'Why, what of that?'
quoth she.

'I am,' quoth he, 'expected of my friends:
And now 'tis dark, and going I shall fall.'
'In night,' quoth she, 'desire sees best of all.

'But if thou fall, O, then imagine this, 721
The earth, in love with thee, thy footing trips,
And all is but to rob thee of a kiss.
Rich preys make true men thieves; so do thy lips
Make modest Dian cloudy and forlorn,
Lest she should steal a kiss and die forsworn.

'Now of this dark night I perceive the reason:
Cynthia for shame obscures her silver shine,
Till forging Nature be condemn'd of treason,
For stealing moulds from heaven that were
divine: 730

Wherein she framed thee in high heaven's despita,

To shame the sun by day and her by night.

'And therefore hath she bribed the Destinies
To cross the curious workmanship of nature,
To mingle beauty with infirmities,
And pure perfection with impure deformity,
Making it subject to the tyranny
Of mad mischances and moody misery;

'As burning fevers, agues pale and faint,
LIFE-poisoning pestilence and frumies wood,
The marrow-eating sickness, whose attained 741
Disorder breeds by hunting of the blood:

Surfeits, imposthumes, grief, and damn'd despair,
Swear Nature's death for framing thee so
fair.

'And not the least of all these maladies
But in one minute's light brings beauty under:
Both favour, savour, hue and qualities,
Whereat the impartial gazer late did wonder,
Are on the sudden wasted, thaw'd and done,
As mountain-snow melts with the midday
sun. 750

'Therefore, despite of fruitless chastity,
Love-lacking vestals and self-loving nuns,
That on the earth would breed a scarcity
And barren dearth of daughters and of sons,
Be prodigal: the lamp that burns by night
Dries up his oil to lend the world his light.

'What is thy body but a swallowing grave,
Seeming to bury that posterity
Which by the rights of time thou needs must
have, 759
If thou destroy them not in dark obscurity?
If so, the world will hold thee in disdain,
Sith in thy pride so fair a hope is slain.

'So in thyself thyself art made away;
A mischief worse than civil home-bred strife,
Or theirs whose desperate hands themselves do
slay,
Or butcher-sire that reaves his son of life.
Foul-cankering rust the hidden treasure frets,
But gold that's put to use more gold begets.

'Nay, then,' quoth Adon, 'you will fall again
Into your idle over-handled theme: 770
The kiss I gave you is bestow'd in vain,
And all in vain you strive against the stream;
For, by this black-faced night, desire's foul nurse,
Your treatise makes me like you worse and worse.

'If love have lent you twenty thousand tongues,
And every tongue more moving than your own,
Bewitching like the wanton mermaid's songs,
Yet from mine ear the tempting tune is blown;
For know, my heart stands armed in mine
ear,
And will not let a false sound enter there;

'Lest the deceiving harmony should run 781
Into the quiet closure of my breast;
And then my little heart were quite undone,
In his bedchamber to be barr'd of rest.
No, lady, no; my heart longs not to groan,
But soundly sleeps, while now it sleeps alone.

'What have you urged that I cannot reprove?
The path is smooth that leadeth on to danger: 789
I hate not love, but your device in love,
That lends embracements unto every stranger.
You do it for increase: O strange excuse!
What reason is the cause to hurt's abuse!

'Call it not love, for Love to heaven is fled,
Since sweating Lust on earth usurp'd his name;
Under whose simple semblance he hath fed
Upon fresh beauty, blotting it with blame;
Which the hot tyrant stains and soon
bereaves,
As caterpillars do the tender leaves.

'Love comforteth like sunshine after rain,
But Lust's effect is tempest after sun: 800
Love's gentle spring doth always fresh remain,
Lust's winter comes ere summer half be done:
Love surfeits not, Lust like a glutton dies;
Love is all truth, Lust full of forged lies.

'More I could tell, but more I dare not say;
The text is old, the orator too green.
Therefore, in sadness, now I will away:
My face is full of shame, my heart of teen;
Mine ears, that to your wanton talk attended,
Do burn themselves for having so offended.

With this, he breaketh from the sweet embrace
Of those fair arms which bound him to her
breast,
And homeward through the dark laund runs apace:
Leaves Love upon her back deeply distressed.
Look, how a bright star shooteth from the sky,
So glides he in the night from Venus' eye;

Which after him she darts, as one on shore
Gazing upon a late-embarked friend,
Till the wild waves will have him seen no more,
Whose ridges with the meeting clouds contend:
So did the merciless and pitchy night 822
Fold in the object that did feed her sight.

Whereat amazed, as one that unaware
Hath dropp'd a precious jewel in the flood,
Or stonish'd as night-wanderers often are,
Their light blown out in some mistrustful
wood,
Even so confounded in the dark she lay,
Having lost the fair discovery of her way.

And now she beats her heart, whereat it groans,
That all the neighbour caves, as seeming troubled, 830
Make verbal repetition of her moans:
Passion on passion deeply is redoubled:
'Ay me!' she cries, and twenty times 'Woe,
woe!
And twenty echoes twenty times cry so.

She marking them begins a wailing note
And sings extemporally a woeful
How love makes young men thrall as doe;
How love is wise in folly, foolish-witty:
Her heavy anthem still concludes in woe,
And still the choir of echoes answer so. 840

Her song was tedious and outwore the night,
For lovers' hours are long, though seeming
short:
If pleased themselves, others, they think delight
In such-like circumstances, with such-like sport

Their copious stories oftentimes begun
And without audience and are never done.

For who hath she to spend the night withal
But idle sounds resembling parasites,
Like shrill-tongued tapsters answering every call.

Soothing the humour of fantastic wits? 850
She says 'Tis so:' they answer all 'Tis so;
And would say after her, if she said 'No.'

Lo, here the gentle lark, weary of rest,
From his moist cabinet mounts up on high,
And wakes the morning, from whose silver
breast

The sun ariseth in his majesty;
Who doth the world so gloriously behold
That cedar-tops and hills seem burnish'd
gold.

Venus salutes him with this fair good-morrow:
'O thou clear god, and patron of all light, 860
From whom each lamp and shining star doth borrow

The beauteous influence that makes him bright,
There lives a son that suck'd an earthly mother.

May lend thee light, as thou dost lend to other.'

This said, she hasteth to a myrtle grove,
Musing the morning is so much o'erworn,
And yet she hears no tidings of her love;
She hearkens for his hounds and for his horn:
Anon she hears them chant it lustily,
And all in haste she coasteth to the cry. 870

And as she runs, the bushes in the way
Some catch her by the neck, some kiss her face,
Some twine about her thigh to make her stay:
She wildly breaketh from their strict embrace,
Like a milch doe, whose swelling dugs do ache,
Hasting to feed her fawn hid in some brake.

By this, she hears the hounds are at a bay;
Whereat she starts, like one that spies an adder
Wreathed up in fatal folds just in his way,
The fear whereof doth make him shake and shudder; 880

Even so the timorous yelping of the hounds
Appeals her senses and her spirit confounds.

For now she knows it is no gentle chase,
But the blunt boar, rough bear, or lion proud,
Because the cry remaineth in one place,
Where fearfully the dogs exclaim aloud:
Finding their enemy to be so curst,
They all strain courtesy who shall cope him first.

This dismal cry rings sadly in her ear, 889
Through which it enters to surprise her heart;
Who, overcome by doubt and bloodless fear,
With cold-pale weakness numbs each feeling yield,

They hastily fly and dare not stay the field.

Thus stands she in a trembling ecstasy;
Till, cheering up her senses all dismay'd,
She tells them 'tis a causeless fantasy,
And childish error, that they are afraid;
Bids them leave quaking; bids them fear no
more:—
And with that word she spies the hunted boar, 900

Whose frothy mouth, bepaint'd all with red,
Like milk and blood being mingled both together,
A second fear through all her sinews spread,
Which madly hurries her she knows not whither:
This way she runs, and now she will no
further,
But back retires to rate the boar for murder.

A thousand splicens bear her a thousand ways;
She treads the path that she untreads again;
Her more than haste is mated with delays,
Like the proceedings of a drunken brain, 910
Full of respects, yet nought at all respecting;
In hand with all things, nought at all effecting.

Here kennell'd in a brake she finds a hound,
And asks the weary caltiff for his master,
And there another licking of his wound,
'Gainst venom'd sores the only sovereign plaster;
And here she meets another sadly scowling,
To whom she speaks, and he replies with howling.

When he hath ceased his ill-resounding noise,
Another flap-mouth'd mourner, black and grim,
Against the welkin volleys out his voice; 920
Another and another answer him,
Clapping their proud tails to the ground
below,
Shaking their scratch'd ears, bleeding as they go.

Look, how the world's poor people are amazed
At apparitions, signs and prodigies, Whereon with fearful eyes they long have gazed,
Infusing them with dreadful prophecies;
So she at these sad signs draws up her breath
And sighing it again, exclaims on Death. 930

'Hard-favour'd tyrant, ugly, meagre, lean,
Hateful divorce of love,—thus chides she
Death,—
'Grim-grinning ghost, earth's worm, what dost thou mean
To stifle beauty and to steal his breath,
Who when he lived, his breath and beauty set
Gloss on the rose, smell to the violet!

'If he be dead,—O no, it cannot be,
Seeing his beauty, thou shouldst strike at it:—
O yes, it may; thou hast no eyes to see,
But hastily at random dost thou hit. 940

Thy mark is feeble age, but thy false dart
Mistakes that aim and cleaves an infant's
heart.

Hadst thou but bid beware, then he had spoke,
And, hearing him, thy power had lost his
power.

The Destinies will curse thee for this stroke;
They bid thee crop a weed, thou pluck'st a flower:

Love's golden arrow at him should have fled,
And not Death's ebon dart, to strike him
dead.

'Dost thou drink tears, that thou provokest such weeping?

What may a heavy groan advantage thee? 950

Why hast thou cast into eternal sleeping

Those eyes that taught all other eyes to see?

Now Nature cares not for thy mortal vigour,
Since her best work is ruin'd with thy rigour.

Here overcome, as one full of despair,
She vall'd her eyelids, who, like sluices, stopp'd
The crystal tide that from her two cheeks fair
In the sweet channel of her bosom dropt;

But through the flood-gates breaks the silver
rain, 959

And with his strong course opens them again.

O, how her eyes and tears did lend and borrow!

Her eyes seen in the tears, tears in her eye;

Both crystals, where they view'd each other's sorrow,

Sorrow that friendly sighs sought still to dry;

But like a stormy day, now wind, now rain,
Sighs dry her cheeks, tears make them wet
again.

Variable passions throng her constant woe,
As striving who should best become her grief;
All entertain'd, each passion labours so,

That every present sorrow seemeth chief, 970

But none is best: then join they all together,
Like many clouds consulting for foul weather.

By this, far off she hears some huntsman hollo

A nurse's song ne'er pleased her babe so well:

The dire imagination she did follow

This sound of hope doth labour to expel;

For now reviving joy bids her rejoice,

And flatters her it is Adonis' voice.

Whereat her tears began to turn their tide,

Being prison'd in her eye like pearls in glass;

Yet sometimes falls an orient drop beside, 98

Which her cheek melts, as scorning it should

pass,

To wash the foul face of the sluttish ground,

Who is but drunken when she seemeth

drown'd.

O hard-believing love, how strange it seems

Not to believe, and yet too credulous!

Thy weal and woe are both of them extremes;

Despair and hope makes thee ridiculous:

The one doth flatter thee in thoughts unlikely,

In likely thoughts the other kills thee quickly.

Now she unweaves the web that she hath wrought; 992

Adonis lives, and Death is not to blame;

It was not she that call'd him all-to-naught;

Now she adds honours to his hateful name;

She clepes him king of graves and grave for

king,

Imperious supreme of all mortal things.

No, no,' quoth she, 'sweet Death, I did but jest;

Yet pardon me I felt a kind of fear

When as I met the boar, that bloody beast,

Which knows no pity, but is still severe; 1000

Then, gentle shadow,—truth I must confess,—

I rail'd on thee, fearing my love's decease.

'Tis not my fault: the boar provoked my

tongue;

Be wreak'd on him, invisible commander;

'Tis he, foul creature, that hath done thee

wrong;

I did but act, be's author of thy slander:

Grief hath two tongues, and never woman

yet

Could rule them both without ten women's

wit.

Thus hoping that Adonis is alive,

Her rash suspect she doth extenuate; 1020

And that his beauty may the better thrive,

With Death she humbly doth insinuate;

Tells him of trophies, statues, tombs, and stories

His victories, his triumphs and his glories.

'O Jove,' quoth she, 'how much a fool was I

To be of such a weak and silly mind

To wail his death who lives and must not die

Till mutual overthrow of mortal kind!

For he being dead, with him is beauty slain,

And, beauty dead, black chaos comes again.

Fie, fie, fond love, thou art so full of fear 1025

As one with treasure laden, hemm'd with thieves;

Trifles, unwithnessed with eye or ear,

Thy coward heart with false bethinking grieves.'

Even at this word she hears a merry horn,

Whereat she leaps that was but late forlorn.

As falcon to the lure, away she flies;

The grass stoops not, she treads on it so light;

And in her haste unfortunately spies

The foul boar's conquest on her fair delight;

Which seen, her eyes, as murder'd with the view, 1032

Like stars ashamed of day, themselves withdrew;

Or, as the snail, whose tender horns being hit,

Shrinks backward in his shelly cave with pain,

And there, all smother'd up, in shade doth sit,

Long after fearing to creep forth again;

So, at his bloody view, her eyes are hid

Into the deep dark cabins of her head:

Where they resign their office and their light.

To the disposing of her troubled brain? 1035

Who bids them still consort with ugly night,
And never wound the heart with looks again;
Who, like a king perplexed in his throne,
By their suggestion gives a deadly groan.

Whereas each tributary subject quakes;
As when the wind, imprison'd in the ground,
Struggling for passage, earth's foundation shakes.

Which with cold terror doth men's minds confound.

This mutiny each part doth so surprise
That from their dark beds once more leap her
eyes; 1050

And, being open'd, threw unwilling light
Upon the wide wound that the boar had trench'd

In his soft flank; whose wonted lily white
With purple tears, that his wound wept, was drench'd:

No flower was nigh, no grass, herb, leaf, or weed,

But stole his blood and seem'd with him to bleed.

This solemn sympathy poor Venus noteth;
Over one shoulder doth she hang her head;
Dumbly she passions, frantically she doteth; 1050
She thinks he could not die, he is not dead:

Her voice is stopt, her joints forget to bow;
Her eyes are mad that they have wept till
now.

Upon his hurt she looks so steadfastly,
That her sight dazzling makes the wound seem three;

And then she reprehends her mangling eye,
That makes more gashes where no breach
should be:

His face seems twain, each several limb is doubled;

For oft the eye mistakes, the brain being troubled.

'My tongue cannot express my grief for one,
And yet,' quoth she, 'behold two Adons dead!
My eyes are blown away, my salt tears gone,
Mine eyes are turn'd to fire, my heart to lead:
Heavy heart's lead, melt at mine eyes' red fire!

So shall I die by drops of hot desire.

'Alas, poor world, what treasure hast thou lost!
What face remains alive that's worth the viewing!

Whose tongue is music now! what canst thou
best

Of things long since, or any thing ensuing!
The flowers are sweet, their colours fresh and trim;

But true-sweet beauty lived and died with
him. 1060

'Bonnet nor veil henceforth no creature wear!
Nor stut nor wind will ever strive to kiss you:
Having no hair to lose, you need not fear;
The sun doth scorn you and the wind doth hiss
you.'

But when Adonis lived, sun and sharp air Lark'd like two thieves, to rob him of his fair:

'And therefore would he put his bonnet on,
Under whose brim the giddy sun would peep;
The wind would blow it off and, being gone,
Play with his locks: then would Adonis weep;
And straight, in pity of his tender years, 1060
They both would strive who first should dry his tears.

'To see his face the lion walk'd along Behind some hedge, because he would not fear
him;

To recreate himself when he hath sung,
The tiger would be tame and gently hear him;
If he had spoke, the wolf would leave his prey
And never fright the silly lamb that day.

'When he beheld his shadow in the brook,
The fishes spread on it their golden gills; 1100
When he was by, the birds such pleasure took,
That some would sing, some other in their bills
Would bring him mulberries and ripe-red cherries;
He fed them with his sight, they him with berries.

'But this foul, grim, and urchin-smout'd boar,
Whose downward eye still looketh for a grave,
Ne'er saw the beauteous livery that he wore:
Witness the entertainment that he gave:
If he did see his face, why then I know
He thought to kiss him, and hath kill'd him
so. 1110

'Tis true, 'tis true; thus was Adonis slain:
He ran upon the boar with his sharp spear,
Who did not whet his teeth at him again,
But by a kiss thought to persuade him there;
And nuzzling in his flank, the loving swine
Sheathed unaware the tusk in his soft groin.

'Had I been tooth'd like him, I must confess,
With kissing him I should have kill'd him first;
But he is dead, and never did he bless 1120
My youth with his: the more am I accurst!
With this, she falleth in the place she stood,
And stains her face with his congealed blood.

She looks upon his lips, and they are pale;
She takes him by the hand, and that is cold;
She whispers in his ears a heavy tale,
As if they heard the woeful words she told;
She lifts the coffer-lids that close his eyes,
Where, lo, two lamps, burnt out, in darkness
lies;

Two glasses, where herself herself beheld 1130
A thousand times, and now no more reflect;
Their virtue lost, wherein they late excell'd,
And every beauty robb'd of his effect:
'Wonder of time,' quoth she, 'this is my spite,
That, though being dead, the day should yet be
light.

'Since thou art dead, lo, here I prophesy :
Sorrow on love hereafter shall attend :
It shall be waited on with jealousy,

wos.

match his 1140

'It shall be fickle, false and full of fraud,
Bud and be blasted in a breathing-while ;
The bottom poison, and the top o'erstraw'd
With sweets that shall the truest sight beguile :
The strongest body shall it make most weak, Strike the wise dumb and teach the fool to
speak.

'It shall be sparing and too full of riot,
Teaching decrepit age to tread the measures ;
The staring ruffian shall it keep in quiet,
Puck down the rich, enrich the poor with treasures ;
It shall be raging-mad and silly-mild,
Make the young old, the old become a child.

'It shall suspect where is no cause of fear ;
It shall not fear where it should most mistrust ;
It shall be merciful and too severe,
And most deceiving when it seems most just ;
Pervcræ it shall be where it shows most toward,
Put fear to valour, courage to the coward.

'It shall be cause of war and dire events,
And set dimension 'twixt the son and sire ; 1160
Subject and servile to all discontents,
As dry combustions matter is to fire :
Sith in his prime Death doth my love destroy,
They that love best their loves shall not enjoy.'

By this, the boy that by her side lay kill'd
Was melted like a vapour from her sight,

And in his blood that on the ground lay spill'd,
A purple flower sprung up, chequer'd with
white,
Resembling well his pale cheeks and the blood
Which in round drops upon their whiteness stood. 1170

She bows her head, the new-sprung flower to
smell,
Comparing it to her Adonis' breath,
And says, within her bosom it shall dwell,
Since he himself is left from her by death :
She crops the stalk, and in the breach appears
Green dropping sap, which she compares to
tears.

'Poor flower,' quoth she, 'this was thy father's guise—
Sweet issue of a more sweet-smelling sire—
For every little grief to wet his eyes :
To grow unto himself was his desire, 1180
And so 'tis thine ; but know, it is as good
To wither in my breast as in his blood.

'Here was thy father's bed, here in my breast ;
Thou art the next of blood, and 'tis thy right :
Lo, in this hollow cradle take thy rest,
My throbbing heart shall rock thee day and
night :
There shall not be one minute in an hour
Wherein I will not kiss my sweet love's
flower.'

Thus weary of the world, away she hies,
And yokes her silver doves ; by whose swift aid
Their mistress mounted through the empty
skies 1190
In her light chariot quickly is convey'd ; Holding their course to Paphos, where their
queen
Means to immure herself and not be seen.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

RIGHT HONOURABLE HENRY WRIOTHESLEY,

EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON OF TICHFIELD.

THE love I dedicate to your lordship is without end ; whereof this pamphlet, without beginning, is but a superfluous moiety. The warrant I have of your honourable disposition, not the worth of my untutored lines, makes it assured of acceptance. What I have done is yours ; what I have to do is yours ; being part in all I have, devoted yours. Were my worth greater, my duty would show greater ; meantime, as it is, it is bound to your lordship, to whom I wish long life, still lengthened with all happiness.

Your lordship's in all duty,

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

THE ARGUMENT

LUCIUS TARQUINIUS, for his excessive pride surnamed Superbus, after he had caused his own father-in-law Servius Tullius to be cruelly murdered, and, contrary to the Roman laws and customs, not requiring or staying for the people's suffrages, had possessed himself of the kingdom, went, accompanied with his sons and other noblemen of Rome, to besiege Ardea. During which siege the principal men of the army meeting one evening at the tent of Sextus Tarquinius, his own sudden arrival, In that to make trial of that which every one had before avouched, only Collatinus finds his wife, though it were late in the night, spinning amongst her maids : the other ladies were all found dancing and revelling, or in several disports. Whereupon the noblemen yielded Collatinus the victory, and his wife the fame. At that time Sextus Tarquinius being inflamed with Lucrece's beauty, yet smothering his passions for the present, departed with the rest back to the camp ; from whence he shortly after privily withdrew himself, and was, according to his estate, royally entertained and lodged by Lucrece at Collatium. The same night he treacherously stoleth into her chamber, violently ravished her, and early in the morning speedeth away. Lucrece, in this lamentable plight, hastily dispatcheth messengers, one to Rome for her father, another to the camp for Collatine. They came, the one accompanied with Junius Brutus, the other with Publius Valerius ; and finding Lucrece attired in mourning habit, demanded the cause of her sorrow. She, first taking an oath of them for her revenge, revealed the actor, and whole manner of his dealing, and withal suddenly stabbed herself. Which done, with one consent they all vowed to root out the whole hated family of the Tarquins ; and bearing the dead body to Rome, Brutus acquainted the people with the doer and manner of the vile deed, with a bitter invective against the tyranny of the king : wherewith the people were so moved, that with one consent and a general acclamation the Tarquins were all exiled, and the state government changed from kings to consuls.

FROM the besieged Ardea all in post,
Borne by the trustless wings of false desire,
Lust-breathed Tarquin leaves the Roman host,
And to Collatine bears the lightless fire
Which, in his smother'd hid, lurks to aspire
And gapes with embracing flames the waist
Of Collatine's fair love, Lucrece the chaste.

Haply that name of 'chaste' unhappily set
This baseless edge on his keen appetite ;
When Collatine unwisely did not let
To praise the clear unmatched red and white
Which triumph'd in that sky of his delight,
Where mortal stars, as bright as heaven's beauties,
With pure aspects did him peculiar duties.

For he the night before, in Tarquin's tent,
Unlock'd the treasure of his happy state;
What priceless wealth the heavens had him lent
In the possession of his beauteous mate;
Reckoning his fortune at such high-proud rate,
That kings might be espoused to more fame,
But king nor peer to such a peerless dame. 21

O happiness enjoy'd but of a few!
And, if possess'd, as soon decay'd and done
As is the morning's silver-melting dew
Against the golden splendour of the sun!
An expired date, cancell'd ere well begun:
Honour and beauty, in the owner's arms,
Are weakly fortress'd from a world of harms.

Beauty itself doth of itself persuade
The eyes of men without an orator;
What needeth then apologies be made,
To set forth that which is so singular?
Or why is Collatine the publisher
Of that rich jewel he should keep unknown
From thievish ears, because it is his own!

Perchance his boast of Lucrece' sovereignty
Suggested this proud issue of a king;
For by our ears our hearts oft tainted be:
Perchance that envy of so rich a thing,
Braving compare, disdainfully did sting
His high-pitch'd thoughts, that meaner men should vaunt
That golden hap which their superiors want.

But some untimely thought did instigate
His all-too-timeless speed, if none of those:
His honour, his affairs, his friends, his state,
Neglected all, with swift intent he goes
To quench the coal which in his liver glows.
O rash false heat, wrapp'd in repentant cold,
Thy hasty spring still blasts, and ne'er grows old!

When at Collatium this false lord arrived, 50
Well was he welcomed by the Roman dame,
Within whose face beauty and virtue strived
Which of them both should underprop her fame:
When virtue bragg'd, beauty would blush for
shame;
When beauty boasted blushes, in despite
Virtue would stain that o'er with silver white.

But beauty, in that white intitled,
From Venus' doves doth challenge that fair field:
Then virtue claims from beauty beauty's red,
Which virtue gave the golden age to gild 60
Their silver cheeks, and call'd it then their shield:
Teaching them thus to use it in the fight,
When shame assail'd, the red should fence
the white.

This heraldry in Lucrece' face was seen,
Argued by beauty's red and virtue's white:
Of either's colour was the other's sign;
Proving from world's minority
Yet their ambition makes them still to

The sovereignty of either being so great,
That oft they interchange each other's seat.

Their silent war of lilies and of roses, 71
Which Tarquin view'd in her fair face's field,
In their pure ranks his traitor eye encloses;
Where, lest between them both it should be
kill'd,

The coward captive vanquish'd doth yield
To those two armies that would let him go,
Rather than triumph in so false a foe.

Now thinks he that her husband's shallow
tongue,—
The niggard prodigal that praised her so,—
In that high task hath done her beauty wrong,
Which far exceeds his barren skill to show: 81
Therefore that praise which Collatine doth owe Enchanted Tarquin answers with surmise,
In silent wonder of still-gazing eyes.

This earthly saint, adored by this devil,
Little suspecteth the false worshipper;
For unstrain'd thoughts do seldom dream on
evil;

Birds never limed no secret bushes fear:
So guiltless she securely gives good cheer 89
And reverend welcome to her princely guest,
Whose inward ill no outward harm express'd:

For that he colour'd with his high estate,
Hiding base sin in plaits of majesty;
That nothing in him seem'd inordinate,
Save sometime too much wonder of his eye,
Which, having all, all could not satisfy;
But, poorly rich, so wanteth in his store,
That, cloy'd with much, he pineth still for
more.

But she, that never coped with stranger eyes,
Could pick no meaning from their prating
looks, 100
Nor read the subtle-shining secrecies
Writ in the glassy margents of such books:
She touch'd no unknown baits, nor fear'd no
books;
Nor could she moralize his wanton sight,
More than his eyes were open'd to the light.

He stories to her ears her husband's fame,
Won in the fields of fruitful Italy;
And decks with praises Collatine's high name,
Made glorious by his manly chivalry
With bruised arms and wreaths of victory: 110
Her joy with heaved-up hand she doth ex-wordless, so greets heaven for his success.

Far from the purpose of his coming hither,
He makes excuses for his being there:
No cloudy show of stormy blustering weather
Doth yet in his fair welkin once appear;
Till sable Night, mother of Dread and Fear,
Upon the world dim darkness doth display,
And in her vaulty prison stows the Day.

For then is Tarquin brought unto his bed, 120
Intending restlessness with heavy sleep;

Huge rocks, high winds, strong pirates,
shelves and sands,
The merchant fears, ere rich at home he lands.

Now is he come unto the chamber door,
That shuts him from the heaven of his thought,
Which with a yielding latch, and with no more,
Hath barr'd him from the blessed thing he sought. 340

So from himself impiety hath wrought,
That for his prey to pray he doth begin,
As if the heavens should countenance his sin.

But in the midst of his unfruitful prayer,
Having solicited th' eternal power
That his foul thoughts might compass his fair
fair,

And they would stand auspicious to the hour,
Even there he starts: quoth he, 'I must de-
flower:

The powers to whom I pray abhor this fact,
How can they then assist me in the act! 350

'Then Love and Fortune be my gods, my guide!

My will is back'd with resolution:
Thoughts are but dreams till their effects be tried:

The blackest sin is clear'd with absolution;
Against love's fire fear's frost hath dissolution.
The eye of heaven is out, and misty night
Covers the shame that follows sweet delight.

This said, his guilty hand pluck'd up the latch,
And with his knee the door he opens wide.
The dove sleeps fast that this night-owl will catch: 360

Thus treason works ere traitors be espied.
Who sees the lurking serpent steps aside;
But she, sound sleeping, fearing no such

Lies at the mercy of his mortal sting.

Into the chamber wickedly he stalks,
And gazeth on her yet unstained bed.
The curtains being close, about he walks,
Rolling his greedy eyeballs in his head:
By their high treason in his heart mislead;

Which gives the watch-word to his hand full
soon 370
To draw the cloud that hides the silver moon.

Look, as the fair and fiery-pointed sun,
Rushing from forth a cloud, bereaves our

Even so, the curtain drawn, his eyes begun
To wink, being blinded with a greater light:
Whether it is that she reflects so bright,
That dazzleth them, or else some shame sup-

But blind they are, and keep themselves enclosed.

G. had they in that darkness prison died!
Then had they seen the period of their ill; 380

Then Collatine again, by Lucrece's side,
In his clear bed might have reposed still:
But they must ope, this blessed league to kill;
And holy-thoughted Lucrece to their sight Must sell her joy, her life, her world's delight.

Her lily hand her rosy cheek lies under,
Cozening the pillow of a lawful kiss;
Who, therefore angry, seems to part in sunder,
Swelling on either side to want his bliss:
Between whose hills her head entombed is: 390
Where, like a virtuous monument, she lies,
To be admired of lewd unshadow'd eyes.

Without the bed her other fair hand was,
On the green coverlet; whose perfect white
Show'd like an April daisy on the grass,
With pearly sweat, resembling dew of night.
Her eyes, like marigolds, had sheathed their
light,
And canopied in darkness sweetly lay,
Till they might open to adorn the day.

Her hair, like golden threads, play'd with her
breath; 400

O modest wantons! wanton modesty!
Showing life's triumph in the map of death,
And death's dim look in life's mortality:
Each in her sleep themselves so beautify,
As if between them twain there were no strife.

But that life lived in death, and death in life.

Her breasts, like ivory globes circled with blue,
A pair of maiden worlds unconquered,
Save of their lord no bearing yoke they knew,
And him by oath they truly honoured. 410
These worlds in Tarquin new ambition bred;
Who, like a foul usurper, went about
From this fair throne to heave the owner out.

What could he see but mightily he noted!
What did he note but strongly he desired!
What he beheld, on that he firmly doted,
And in his will his wilful eye he tired.
With more than admiration he admired
Her azure veins, her alabaster skin,
Her coral lips, her snow-white dimpled chin.

As the grim lion fawneth o'er his prey, 420
Sharp hunger by the conquest satisfied,
So o'er this sleeping soul doth Tarquin stay,
His rage of lust by gazing qualified;
Slack'd, not suppress'd; for standing by her
side,

His eye, which late this mutiny restrains,
Unto a greater uproar tempts his veins:

And they, like straggling slaves for pillage
fighting,
Obdurate vessels fell exploits effecting,
In bloody death and ravishment delighting,
Nor children's tears nor mothers' groans respect-
ing. 430

Swell in their pride, the onset still expecting:
Anon his beating heart, alarm striking,
Gives the hot charge and bids them do their liking.

His drumming heart cheers up his burning
eye,
His eye commends the leading to his hand;
His hand, as proud of such a dignity,
Smoking with pride, march'd on to make his
stand
On her bare breast, the heart of all her land;
Whose ranks of blue veins, as his hand did scale,
Left their round turrets destitute and pale. 440

They, mustering to the quiet cabinet
Where their dear governess and lady lies,
Do tell her she is dreadfully beset,
And fright her with confusion of their cries:
She, much amazed, breaks ope her lock'd-up
eyes,
Who, peeping forth this tumult to behold,
Are by his flaming torch dimm'd and con-troll'd.

Imagine her as one in dead of night
From forth dull sleep by dreadful fancy waking,
That thinks she hath beheld some ghastly
sprite, 451
Whose grim aspect sets every joint a-shaking:
What terror 'tis! but she, in worse taking,
From sleep disturbed, heedfully doth view
The sight which makes supposed terror true.

Wrapp'd and confounded in a thousand fears,
Like to a new-kill'd bird she trembling lies;
She dares not look; yet, winking, there appears
Quick-shifting antics, ugly in her eyes:
Such shadows are the weak brain's forgeries;
Who, angry that the eyes fly from their lights, 461
In darkness daunts them with more dreadful sights.

His hand, that yet remains upon her breast,—
Rude ram, to batter such an ivory wall!—
May feel her heart—poor citizen!—distress'd,
Wounding itself to death, rise up and fall,
Beating her bulk, that his hand shakes withal.
This moves in him more rage and lesser pity,
To make the breach and enter this sweet city.

First, like a trumpet, doth his tongue begin 470
To sound a parley to his heartless foe;
Who o'er the white sheet peers her whiter
chin,
The reason of this rash alarm to know,
Which he by dumb demeanour seeks to show;
But she with vehement prayers urgeth still Under what colour he commits this ill.

Thus he replies: 'The colour in thy face,
That even for anger takes the lily pale,
And the red seen blush at her own disgrace,
Shall plead for me and tell my loving tale: 480
Under that colour as I come to scale
Thy never-conquer'd fort: the fault is thine,
For those thine eyes betray thee unto mine.

'Thus I forecastall thee, if thou mean to chide:
Thy beauty hath ensnared thee to this night,

Where thou with patience must my will abide;
My will that marks thee for my earth's de-
light,
Which I to conquer sought with all my might;
But as reproof and reason beat it dead,
By thy bright beauty was it newly bred. 490

I see what crosses my attempt will bring;
I know what thorns the growing rose defends;
I think the honey guarded with a sting;
All this beforehand counsel comprehends:
But will is deaf and hears no heedful friends;
Only he hath an eye to gaze on beauty
And dotes on what he looks, 'gainst law or duty.

I have debated, even in my soul,
What wrong, what shame, what sorrow I shall breed;
But nothing can affection's course control, 500
Or stop the headlong fury of his speed.
I know repentant tears ensue the deed,
Reproach, disdain, and deadly enmity;
Yet strive I to embrace mine infamy.

This said, he shakes aloft his Roman blade,
Which, like a falcon towering in the skies,
Coucheth the fowl below with his wings' shade,
Whose crooked beak threatens if he mount he
dies:
So under his insulting falchion lies Harmless Lucretia, marking what he tells With trembling fear, as fowl hear falcon's bells. 511

'Lucrece,' quoth he, 'this night I must enjoy
thee:
If thou deny, then force must work my way.
For in thy bed I purpose to destroy thee:
That done, some worthless slave of thine I'll
slay,
To kill thine honour with thy life's decay;
And in thy dead arms do I mean to place
him,
Swearing I slew him, seeing thee embrace
him.

'So thy surviving husband shall remain
The scornful mark of every open eye; 520
Thy kinsmen hang their heads at this disdain,
Thy issue blurr'd with nameless bastardy:
And thou, the author of thy obloquy,
Shalt have thy trespass cited up in rhymes,
And sung by children in succeeding times.

'But if thou yield, I rest thy secret friend:
The fault unknown is as a thought unacted;
A little harm done to a great good end
For lawful policy remains enacted.
The poisonous simple sometimes is compacted in a pure compound, being so applied. 531
His venom in effect is purified.

'Then, for thy husband and thy children's sake,
Tender my suit; bequeath not to their loss
The shame that from them no device can take,
The blemish that will never be forgot:
Worse than a slavish wife or birth-hour's blot:

For marks deemed in man's nativity
Are nature's faults, not their own infamy.'

Here with a cockatrice' dead-killing eye 540
He rouseth up himself and makes a pause;
While she, the picture of pure piety,
Like a white hind under the gripe's sharp
claws,

Pleads, in a wilderness where are no laws,
To the rough beast that knows no gentle right,
Nor ought obeys but his foul appetite.

But when a black-faced cloud the world doth threat,

In his dim mist the aspiring mountains hiding,
From earth's dark womb some gentle gust doth get,

Which blows these pitchy vapours from their hiding. 550

Hindering their present fall by this dividing;
So his unhallo'd haste her words delays,
And moody Pluto winks while Orpheus plays.

Yet, foul night-waking cat, he doth but dally,
While in his hold-fast foot the weak mouse
panteth:

Her sad behaviour feeds his vulture folly,
A swallowing gulf that even in plenty wanteth:
His ear her prayers admits, but his heart
granteth

No penetrable entrance to her plaining:
Tears harden lust, though marble wear with raining. 560

Her pity-pleading eyes are sadly fixed
In the remorseless wrinkles of his face;
Her modest eloquence with sighs is mixed,
Which to her oratory adds more grace.

She puts the period often from his place;
And midst the sentences so her accent breaks,
That twice she doth begin ere once she speaks.

She conjures him by high almighty Jove,
By knighthood, gentry, and sweet friendship's oath,

By her untimely tears, her husband's love, 570
By holy human law, and common troth,
By heaven and earth, and all the power of
both,

That to his borrow'd bed he make retire,
And sleep to honour, not to foul desire.

Quoth she, 'Beward net hospitality
With such black payment as thou hast protended:

Mud not the fountain that gave drink to thee;
Nor not the thing that cannot be amended;
Nad thy sin before thy shoot be ended;
He is no woodman that doth bend his bow
To smite a poor unreasonable doe. 581

'My husband is thy friend; for his sake spare his anger; for thine own sake leave

Myself a weakling; do not then ensnare me.
Thou look'st not like deceit; do not deceive me.
My sighs, like whirlwinds, labour hence to heave thee:

If ever man were moved with woman's moans,
Be moved with my tears, my sighs, my groans:

'All which together, like a troubled ocean,
Beat at thy rocky and wreck-threatening heart,
To soften it with their continual motion; 591
For stones dissolved to water do convert.
O, if no harder than a stone thou art,
Melt at my tears, and be compassionate!
Soft pity enters at an iron gate.

'In Tarquin's likeness I did entertain thee:
Hast thou put on his shape to do him shame?
To all the host of heaven I complain me,
Thou wrong'st his honour, wound'st his princely
name.

'Thou art not what thou seem'st; and if the same, 600
Thou seem'st not what thou art, a god, a
king;
For kings like gods should govern every thing.

'How will thy shame be seeded in thine age,
When thus thy vices bud before thy spring!
If in thy hope thou dar'st do such outrage,
What dar'st thou not when once thou art a
king?
O, be remember'd, no outrageous thing
From vassal actors can be wiped away;
Then kings' misdeeds cannot be hid in clay.

'Thine deed will make thee only loved for fear; 610
But happy monarchs still are fear'd for love:
With foul offenders thou perforce must bear,
When they in thee the like offences prove:
If but for fear of this, thy will remove;
For princes are the glass, the school, the
book,
Where subjects' eyes do learn, do read, do look.

'And wilt thou be the school where Lust shall learn?
Must he in thee read lectures of such shame?
Wilt thou be glass wherein it shall discern Authority for sin, warrant for blame, 620
To privilege dishonour in thy name?
Thou back'st reproach against long-living
land,
And mak'st fair reputation but a bawd.

'Hast thou command? by him that gave it
thee,
From a pure heart command thy rebel will:
Draw not thy sword to guard iniquity.
For it was lent thee all that brood to kill.
Thy princely office how canst thou fulfil,
When, pattern'd by thy fault, foul sin may
say,
He learn'd to sin, and thou didst teach the
way! 630

Think but how vile a spectacle it were,
To view thy present trespass in another.
Men's faults do seldom to themselves appear;
Their own transgressions partially they smother:
This guilt would seem death-worthy in thy brother.

O, how are they wrapp'd in with infamies
That from their own misdeeds asakance their eyes!

To thee, to thee, my heaved-up hands appeal,
Not to seducing lust, thy rash rellier:
I sue for exiled majesty's repeal: 640
Let him return, and flattering thoughts retire:
His true respect will prison false desire,
And wipe the dim mist from thy dotting eye,
That thou shalt see thy state and pity mine.'

'Have done,' quoth he: 'my uncontrolled tide
Turns not, but swells the higher by this let.
Small lights are soon blown out, huge fires abide,

And with the wind in greater fury fret:
The petty streams that pay a daily debt
To their salt sovereign, with their fresh falls
haste 650
Add to his flow, but alter not his taste.'

'Thou art,' quoth she, 'a sea, a sovereign king;
And lo, there falls into thy boundless flood
Black lust, dishonour, shame, misgoverning,
Who seek to stain the ocean of thy blood.
If all these petty ill shall change thy good,
Thy sea within a puddle's womb is hearsed,
And not the puddle in thy sea dispersed.

'So shall these slaves be king, and thou their
slave;
Thou nobly base, they basely dignified; 660
Thou their fair life, and they thy fouler grave:
Thou loathed in their shame, they in thy
pride:

The lesser thing should not the greater hide:
The cedar stoops not to the base shrub's feet,
But low shrubs wither at the cedar's root.

'So let thy thoughts, low vassals to thy state—

'No more,' quoth he; 'by heaven, I will not hear thee:

Yield to my love; if not, enforced hate,
Instead of love's coy touch, shall rudely tear
thee;

That done, despitefully I mean to bear thee 670
Unto the base bed of some rascal groom,
To be thy partner in this shameful doom.'

This said, he sets his foot upon the light,
For light and lust are deadly enemies:
Shame folded up in blind concealing night,
When most unseen, then most doth tyrannise.
The wolf hath seized his prey, the poor lamb
cries;

Till with her own white scars her voice controlled

Extends her outcry in her last sweet fold:

'or with the nightly thren that she wears 680
He pens her piteous clamours in her head;
Cooling his hot face in the chaste tears
That ever modest eyes with sorrow shed.
) that prone lust should stain so pure a bed!
The spots whereof could weeping purify,
Her tears should drop on them perpetually.

But she hath lost a dearer thing than life,
And he hath won what he would lose again:
This forced league doth force a fruitless strife;
This momentary joy breeds months of pain;
This hot desire converts to cold disdain: 690
Pure Chastity is rifled of her store,
And Lust, the thief, far poorer than before.

Look, as the full-fed hound or gorged hawk,
Unapt for tender smell or speedy flight,
Make slow pursuit, or altogether balk
The prey wherein by nature they delight:
So surfeit-taking Tarquin fares this night:
His taste delicious, in digestion searing,
Devours his will, that lived by foul devouring.

O, deeper sin than bottomless conceit 700
Can comprehend in still imagination!
Drunken Desire must vomit his receipt,
Ere he can see his own abomination.
While Lust is in his pride, no exclamation
Can curb his heat or rein his rash desire,
Till like a jade Self-will himself doth tire.

And then with lank and lean discolour'd
cheek,
With heavy eye, knit brow, and strengthless pace,
Feebly Desire, all recreant, poor, and meek, 710
Like to a bankrupt beggar waits his case:
The flesh being proud, Desire doth fight with Grace,
For there it revels; and when that decays,
The guilty rebel for remission prays.

So fares it with this fawful lord of Rome,
Who this accomplishment so hotly chased;
For now against himself he sounds this doom,
That through the length of times he stands
disgraced:

Besides, his soul's fair temple is defaced; 720
To whose weak ruins musters troops of cares,
To ask the spotted princess how she fares.

She says, her subjects with foul insurrection
Have batter'd down her consecrated wall,
And by their mortal fault brought in subjection

Her immortality, and made her small
To living death and pain perpetual:
Which in her presidency she controlled still,
But her foresight could not forestall their
will.

Even in this thought through the dark night he stealth,
A captive victor that hath lost in Bearing away the wound that not
The year that will, despite of cure, remain;
Leaving his spoil perpetually in greater gain.

She bears the load of lust he left behind,
And he the burthen of a guilty mind.

He like a thievish dog creeps sadly thence;
She like a wearied lamb lies panting there;
He scowls and hates himself for his offence;
She, desperate, with her nails her flesh doth tear.

He faintly flies, sweating with guilty fear; 740
She stays, exclaiming on the direful night;
He runs, and chides his vanish'd, loathed
delight.

He thence departs a heavy convertite;
She there remains a hopeless castaway;
He in his speed looks for the morning light;
She prays she never may behold the day.
'For day,' quoth she, 'night's scapes doth open
lay,

And my true eyes have never practised how
To cloak offences with a cunning brow.

'They think not but that every eye can see 750
The same disgrace which they themselves behold;

And therefore would they still in darkness be,
To have their unseen sin remain untold;
For they their guilt with weeping will unfold,
And grave, like water that doth eat in steel,
Upon my cheeks what helpless shame I feel.'

Here she exclaims against repose and rest,
And bids her eyes hereafter still be blind.
She wakes her heart by beating on her breast,
And bids it leap from thence, where it may find
Some purer chest to close so pure a mind. 761 Frantic with grief thus breathes she forth her spite

Against the unseen secrecy of night:

'O comfort-killing Night, image of hell!
Dim register and notary of shame!
Black stage for tragedies and murders fell!
Vast sin-concealing chaos! nurse of blame!
Blind muffled bawd! dark harbour for defame!
Grim cave of death! whispering conspirator
With close-tongued treason and the raviager!

'O hateful, vaporous, and foggy Night! 771
Since thou art guilty of my cureless crime,
Muster thy mists to meet the eastern light,
Make war against proportion'd course of time;
Or if thou wilt permit the sun to climb
His wonted height, yet ere he go to bed,
Knit poisonous clouds about his golden
head.

'With rotten damps ravish the morning air;
Let their exhaled unwholesome breaths make sick

The life of purity, the supreme fair, 780
Ere he arrive his weary noon-tide prick;
And let thy misty vapours march so thick,
That in their smoky ranks his smother'd
light

May set at noon and make perpetual night.

'Were Tarquin Night, as he is but Night's
The green he would detain;

Her twinkling handmaids too, by him defiled,
Through Night's black bosom should not peep
again:

So should I have co-partners in my pain;
And fellowship in woe doth woe assuage, 790
As palmers' chat makes short their pilgrimage.

'Where now I have no one to blush with me,
To cross their arms and hang their heads with
mine,

To mask their brows and hide their infamy;
But I alone alone must sit and pine,
Seasoning the earth with showers of silver
brine.

Mingling my talk with tears, my grief with groans,
Poor wasting monuments of lasting moans.

'O Night, thou furnace of foul-reeking smoke,
Let not the jealous Day behold that face 800
Which underneath thy black all-hiding cloak
Immediately lies martyr'd with disgrace!
Keep still possession of thy gloomy place,
That all the faults which in thy reign an
made

May likewise be sepulchred in thy shade!

'Make me not object to the tell-tale Day!
The light will show, character'd in my brow,
The story of sweet chastity's decay,
The impious breach of holy wedlock vow:
Yea, the illiterate, that know not how 810
To cipher what is writ in learned books,
Will quote my loathsome trespass in my looks.

'The nurse, to still her child, will tell my story,
And fright her crying babe with Tarquin's
name;

The orator, to deck his oratory,
Will couple my reproach to Tarquin's shame;
Feast-finding minstrels, tuning my defame,
Will tie the hearers to attend each line,
How Tarquin wronged me, I Collatine.

'Let my good name, that senseless reputation,
For Collatine's dear love be kept unspotted: 820
If that be made a theme for disputation,
The branches of another root are rotted,
And undeserved reproach to him allotted
That is as clear from this stain of mine
As I, ere this, was pure to Collatine.

'O unseen shame! invisible disgrace!
O unfelt sore! crest-wounding, private scar!
Reproach is stamp'd in Collatine's face,
And Tarquin's eye may read the mot afar, 830
How he in peace is wounded, not in war.
Alas, how many bear such shameful blows,
Which not themselves, but he that gives them knows!

'H, Collatine, thine honour lay in me,
From me by strong assault it is bereft.
My honey lost, and I, a drone-like bee,
Have no perfection of my summer left,
But robb'd and smother'd by injurious theft:

In thy weak hive a wandering wasp hath crept,
 And suck'd the honey which thy chaste bee kept. 840

'Yet am I guilty of thy honour's wrack;
 Yet for thy honour did I entertain him;
 Coming from thee, I could not put him back,
 For it had been dishonour to disdain him:
 Besides, of weariness he did complain him,
 And talk'd of virtue: O unlook'd-for evil,
 When virtue is profaned in such a devil!

'Why should the worm intrude the maiden bud?
 Or hateful cuckoos hatch in sparrows' nests?
 Or toads infect fair founts with venom mud?
 Or tyrant folly lurk in gentle breasts? 851
 Or kings be breakers of their own behests?
 But no perfection is so absolute,
 That some impurity doth not pollute.

'The aged man that coffers-up his gold
 Is plagued with cramps and gouts and painful fits;
 And scarce hath eyes his treasure to behold,
 But like still-pining Tantalus he sits,
 And useless burns the harvest of his wits;
 Having no other pleasure of his gain 860
 But torment that it cannot cure his pain.

'So then he hath it when he cannot use it,

..... they too strong,
 To hold their cursed-blessed fortune long.
 The sweets we wish for turn to loathed sours
 Even in the moment that we call them ours.

'Unruly blasts wait on the tender spring;
 Unwholesome weeds take root with precious
 flowers; 870
 The adder biases where the sweet birds sing;
 What virtue breeds iniquity devours:
 We have no good that we can say is ours,
 But ill-annexed Opportunity
 Or kills his life or else his quality.

'O Opportunity, thy guilt is great!
 'Tis thou that executest the traitor's treason:
 Thou set'st at the wolf where he the lamb may get,
 Whoever plots the sin, thou point'st the season;
 'Tis thou that spurn'st at right, at law, 880
 reason;
 And in thy shady cell, where none may spy
 him,
 Sits Sin, to seize the souls that wander by
 him.

'Thou makest the vestal violate her oath;
 Thou blow'st the fire when temperance thaw'd;
 Thou smother'st honesty, thou murder'st truth
 Thou foul abettor! thou notorious bawd!
 Thou plantest scandal and displacest land;
 Thou ravisher, thou traitor, thou false thief,
 Thy honey turns to gall, thy joy to grief!

Thy secret pleasure turns to open shame, 890
 Thy private feasting to a public fast,
 Thy smoothing titles to a ragged name,
 Thy sugar'd tongue to bitter wormwood taste:
 Thy violent vanities can never last.

How comes it then, vile Opportunity,
 Being so bad, such numbers seek for thee?

When wilt thou be the humble suppliant's
 friend,
 And bring him where his suit may be obtain'd?
 When wilt thou sort an hour great strifes to
 end?

Or free that soul which wretchedness hath chain'd? 900
 Give physic to the sick, ease to the pain'd?
 The poor, lame, blind, halt, creep, cry out for
 thee;
 But they ne'er meet with Opportunity.

The patient dies while the physician sleeps;
 The orphan pines while the oppressor feeds;
 Justice is feasting while the widow weeps;
 Advice is sporting while infection breeds:
 Thou grant'st no time for charitable deeds:
 Wrath, envy, treason, rape, and murder's rages,
 Thy heinous hours wait on them as their pages. 910

When Truth and Virtue have to do with thee,
 A thousand crosses keep them from thy aid:
 They buy thy help; but Sin ne'er gives a fee,
 He gratis comes; and thou art well appaid
 As well to hear as grant what he hath said.
 My Collatine would else have come to me
 When Tarquin did, but he was stay'd by
 thee.

'Guilty thou art of murder and of theft,
 Guilty of perjury and subornation,
 Guilty of treason, forgery, and shift, 920
 Guilty of incest, that abomination;
 An accessory by thine inclination
 To all sins past, and all that are to come.
 From the creation to the general doom.

'Mis-shapen Time, copesmate of ugly Night,
 Swift subtle post, carrier of grisly care,
 Eater of youth, false slave to false delight,
 Base watch of woes, sin's pack-horse, virtue's
 snare;
 Thou nurrest all and murder'st all that are:
 O, hear me then, injurious, shifting Time!
 Be guilty of my death, since of my crime. 931

'Why hath thy servant, Opportunity,
 Betray'd the hours thou gavest me to repose,
 Cancell'd my fortunes, and enchain'd me
 To endless date of never-ending woes?
 Time's office is to fine the hate of foes;
 To eat up errors by opinion bred,
 Not spend the dowry of a lawful bed.

'Time's glory is to calm contending kings,
 To unmask falsehood and bring truth to light,
 To stamp the seal of time in aged things, 941
 To wake the morn and sentinel the night,
 To wrong the wronger till he render right,

To relate proud buildings with thy hour,
And smear with dust their glittering golden towers;

'To fill with worm-holes stately monuments,
To feed oblivion with decay of things,
To blot old books and alter their contents,
To pluck the quills from ancient ravens' wings,
To dry the old oak's sap and cherish springs,
To spoil antiquities of hammer'd steel, 95
And turn the giddy round of Fortune's wheel;

'To show the beldam daughters of her daughter,
To make the child a man, the man a child,
To slay the tiger that doth live by slaughter,
To tame the unicorn and lion wild,
To mock the subtle in themselves beguiled,
To cheer the ploughman with increaseful crops,
And waste huge stones with little water-drops.

'Why work'st thou mischief in thy pilgrimage,
Unless thou couldst return to make amends?
One poor retiring minute in an age
Would purchase thee a thousand thousand
friends,
Lending him wit that to bad debtors lends:
O, this dread night, wouldst thou one hour
come back,
I could prevent this storm and shun thy
wrack!

Thou ceaseless lackey to eternity,
With some mischance cross Tarquin in his flight:

Devise extremes beyond extremity,
To make him curse this cursed criminal night:
Let ghastly shadows his lewd eyes affright; 97
And the dire thought of his committed evil
Shape every bush a hideous shapeless devil.

'Disturb his hours of rest with restless trances,
Afflict him in his bed with bedrid groans;
Let there bechance him pitiful mischance,
To make him moan; but pity not his moans:
Stone him with harden'd hearts, harder than stones;
And let mild women to him lose their mild-
ness,
Wildier to him than tigers in their wildness.

'Let him have time to tear his curled hair, 98
Let him have time against himself to rave,
Let him have time of Time's help to despair,
Let him have time to live a loathed slave,
Let him have time a beggar's orts to crave,
And time to see one that by aims doth live
Disdain to him disdained scraps to give.

'Let him have time to see his friends his foes,
And merry fools to mock at him resort;
Let him have time to mark how slow time goes
In time of sorrow, and how swift and short 99
His time of folly and his time of sport;
And ever let his unrecalling crime
Have time to work up stinging of his time.

'O Time, show tutor both to good and bad, Teach me to curse him that thou taught'st this ill!

At his own shadow let the

For who so base would such office have 99

That makes him honour'd, or begets him hate;
For greatest scandal waits on greatest state.
The moon being clouded presently is rais'd,
But little stars may hide them when they list.

'The crow may bathe his coal-black wings in mire,
And unperceived fly with the filth away; 100
But if the like the snow-white swan desire,
The stain upon his silver down will stay.
Poor grooms are sightless night, kings glorious
day:
Gnats are unnoted whereso'er they fly,
But eagles gazed upon with every eye.

'Out, idle words, servants to shallow fools!
Unprofitable sounds, weak arbitrators!
Busy yourselves in skill-contenting schools;
Debate where leisure serves with dull debates;
To trembling clients be you mediators: 100
For me, I force not argument a straw,
Since that my case is past the help of law.

'In vain I rail at Opportunity,
At Time, at Tarquin, and uncheerful Night;
In vain I cavil with mine infamy,
In vain I spurn at my confirm'd despite:
This helpless smoke of words doth me no right.
The remedy indeed to do me good
Is to let forth my foul-defiled blood.

'Poor hand, why quiver'st thou at this decree?
Honour thyself to rid me of this shame; 101
For if I die, my honour lives in thee;
But if I live, thou livest in my defame:
Since thou couldst not defend thy loyal dame,
And wast afraid to scratch her wicked foe,
Kill both thyself and her for yielding so.

This affidavit, from her be-tumbled couch she starteth,
To find some desperate instrument of death:
But this no slaughterhouse no tool imparteth
To make more vent for passage of her breath;
Which, thronging through her lips, so vanishes
As smoke from Aetna, that in air consumes,
Or that which from discharged cannon fumes.

'In vain,' quoth she, 'I live, and seek in vain
Some happy mean to end a hapless life.
I fear'd by Tarquin's falcon to be slain,
Yet for the self-same purpose seek a knife:
But when I fear'd I was a loyal wife:
So am I now: O no, that cannot be; 102
Of that true type hath Tarquin mist me.'

O, that is gone for which I sought to live,
And therefore now I need not fear to die.
To clear this spot by death, at least I give
A badge of fame to slander's livery;
A dying life to living infamy:

Poor helpless help, the treasure stol'n away,
To burn the guiltless casket where it lay!

Well, well, dear Collatine, thou shalt not
know

The stained taste of violated troth;
[I will not wrong thy true affection so, 1060
To flatter thee with an infringed oath;
This bastard graft shall never come to growth:
He shall not boast who did thy stock pollute
That thou art dotting father of his fruit.

'Nor shall he smile at thee in secret thought,
Nor laugh with his companions at thy state;
But thou shalt know thy interest was not bought
Basely with gold, but stol'n from forth thy gate.
For me, I am the mistress of my fate, 1069
And with my trespasses never will dispense,
Till life to death acquit my forced offence.

'I will not poison thee with my attaint,
Nor fold my fault in cleanly-coin'd excuses;
My sable ground of sin I will not paint,
To hide the truth of this false night's abuses.
My tongue shall utter all; mine eyes, like sunbeams,
As from a mountain-spring that feeds a dale,
Shall gush pure streams to purge my impure tale.'

By this, lamenting Philomel had ended 1079
The well-tuned warble of her nightly sorrow,
And solemn night with slow sad gait descended
To ugly hell; when, lo, the blushing morrow Lends light to all fair eyes that light will borrow:
But cloudy Lucrece shames herself to see,
And therefore still in night would cloister'd
be.

Revealing day through every cranny spies,
And seems to point her out where she sits weepin'.

To wail, sobbing speaks: 'O eye of Why pry at thou through my window!
thy peeping:
Mock with thy tickling beams eyes that are sleeping: 1080
Brand not my forehead with thy piercing
light,
For day hath nought to do what's done by
night.'

Thus evils she with every thing she sees:
True grief is fond and teasy as a child,
Who wayward once, his mood wish nought agrees:
Old woes, not infant sorrows, bear their mild
Continuance tames the one: the other wild,
Like an unpractised swimmer plunging skill,
With too much labour drowns for want of skill.

So she, deep-drenched in a sea of care, 1100
Holds disputation with each thing she views,
And to herself all sorrow doth compare;
No object but her passion's strength renews;
And as one shifts, another straight ensues:
Sometimes her grief is dumb and hath no
words;

Sometimes 'tis mad and too much talk affords.

The little birds that tune their morning's joy
Make her moans mad with their sweet melody:
For mirth doth search the bottom of annoy;
Sad souls are slain in merry company; 1110
Grief best is pleased with grief's society:
True sorrow then is feelingly sufficed
When with like semblance it is sympathized.

'Tis double death to drown in ken of shore;
He ten times pines that pines beholding food;
To see the salve doth make the wound ache
more;
Great grief grieves most at that would do it
good;
Deep woes roll forward like a gentle flood,
Who, being stopp'd, the bounding banks overflow;
Grief dallied with nor law nor limits knows.

You mocking birds,' quoth she, 'your tunes
entomb 1122
Within your hollow-swellings feather'd breasts,
And in my hearing be you mute and dumb:
My restless discord loves no stops nor rests;
My restless hostess brooks not merry guests:
A woeless hostess brooks not merry guests:
Relish your nimble notes to pleasing ears;
Distress likes dumps when time is kept with
tears.

'Come, Philomel, that sing'st of ravishment,
Make thy sad grove in my dishevel'd hair:
As the dank earth weeps at thy languishment,
So I at each sad strain will strain a tear, 1131
And with deep groans the dissonance bear;
For burden-wise I'll hum on Targuin still,
While thou on Tereus descant'st better skill.

'And whiles against a thorn thou hear'st thy
part,
To keep thy sharp woes waking, wretched I,
To imitate thee well, against my heart
Will fix a sharp knife to affright mine eye;
Who, if it wink, shall thereon fall and die.
These means, as frets upon an instrument,
Shall tune our heart-strings to true languish-
ment. 1141

'And for, poor bird, thou sing'st not in the day,
As shaming any eye should thee behold,
Some dark deep desert, coasted from the way,
That knows not parching heat nor freezing
cold,
Will we find out; and there we will unfold
To creatures stern and tame, to change their kinds:
Since men prove beasts; let beasts bear gentle minds.'

As the poor frightened deer, that stands at gaze,
Wildly determining which way to fly, 1150

Or one encompass'd with a winding mase,
That cannot tread the way out readily;
So with herself is she in mutiny,
To live or die which of the twain were better,
When life is shamed, and death reproach's
debtor.

'To kill myself,' quoth she, 'alack, what were it,
But with my body my poor soul's pollution?
They that lose half with greater patience bear it
Than they whose whole is swallow'd in confusion.
That mother tries a merciless conclusion 1160
Who, having two sweet babes, when death takes one,
Will slay the other and be nurse to none.

'My body or my soul, which was the dearer,
When the one pure, the other made divine?
Whose love of either to myself was nearer,
When both were kept for heaven and Collatine?
Ay me! the bark peel'd from the lofty pine,
His leaves will wither and his sap decay;
So must my soul, her bark being peel'd away.

'Her house is sack'd, her quiet interrupted,
Her mansion batter'd by the enemy; 1171
Her sacred temple spotted, spoil'd, corrupted,
Grossly engirt with daring intamy:
Then let it not be call'd impiety,
If in this blemish'd fort I make some hole
Through which I may convey this troubled soul.

'Yet die I will not till my Collatine
Have heard the cause of my untimely death;
That he may vow, in that sad hour of mine,
Revenge on him that made me stop my breath.
My stained blood to Tarquin I'll bequeath,
Which by him tainted shall for him be spent,
And as his due writ in my testament.

'My honour I'll bequeath unto the knife
That wounds my body so dishonoured.
'Tis honour to deprive dishonour'd life:
The one will live, the other being dead:
So of shame's ashes shall my fame be bred;
For in my death I murder shameful scorn:
My shame so dead, mine honour is new-born.

'Dear lord of that dear jewel I have lost, 1191
What legacy shall I bequeath to thee?
My resolution, love, shall be thy boast,
By whose example thou revenged mayst be.
How Tarquin must be used, read it in me:
Myself, thy friend, will kill myself, thy foe.
And for my sake serve thou false Tarquin so.

'This brief abridgement of my will I make:
My soul and body to the skies and ground;
My resolution, husband, do thou take; 1200
Mine honour be the knife's that makes my
wound;
My shame be his that did my fame confound;
And all my fame that lives disburied be
To those that live, and think no shame of me.

'Thou, Collatine, shalt oversee this will;
How was I overseen that thou shalt see it!

My blood shall wash the slander of mine ill;
My life's foul doel, my life's fair end shall free it.

Faint not, faint heart, but stoutly say "So be
it:"

Yield to my hand; my hand shall conquer
thee: 1210
Thou dead, both die, and both shall victors
be.

This plot of death when sadly she had laid,
And wiped the brinish pearl from her bright
eyes,
With untuned tongue she hoarsely calls her
maid,
Whose swift obedience to her mistress hies;
For fleet-wing'd duty with thought's feathers
flies.

Poor Lucrece' cheeks unto her maid seem so As winter meads when sun doth melt their snow.

Her mistress she doth give demure good-
morrow,
With soft-alow tongue, true mark of modesty,
And sorts a sad look to her lady's sorrow, 1221
For why her face wore sorrow's livery;
But durst not ask of her audaciously
Why her two suns were cloud-eclipsed so,
Nor why her fair cheeks over-wash'd with
woe.

But as the earth doth weep, the sun being set,
Each flower moisten'd like a melting eye;
Even so the maid with swelling drops gan wet
Her circled eyes, enforced by sympathy
Of those fair suns set in her mistress' sky, 1230
Who in a salt-waved ocean quench their light,
Which makes the maid weep like the dewy
night.

A pretty while these pretty creatures stand,
Like ivory conduits coral cisterns filling:
One justly weeps; the other takes in hand
No cause, but company, of her drops spilling:
Their gentle sex to weep are often willing;
Grieving themselves to guess at others'
smarts,
And then they drown their eyes or break
their hearts. 1239

For men have marble, women waxen, minds,
And therefore are they form'd as marble will:
The weak oppress'd, the impression of strange
kinds
Is form'd in them by force, by fraud, or skill:
Then call them not the authors of their ill.
No more than wax shall be accounted evil
Wherein is stamp'd the semblance of a devil.

Their smoothness, like a goodly champain
plain,
Lays open all the little worms that creep;
In men, as in a rough-grown grove, remain
Cave-keeping evils that obscurely sleep: 1250
Through crystal walls each little mote will peep:
Though men can cover crimes with bold stern looks,
Poor women's faces are their own faults'
books.

No man inveigh against the wither'd flower,
But chide rough winter that the flower hath
kill'd;

Not that devour'd, but that which doth devour,
Is worthy blame. O, let it not be hid
Poor women's faults, that they are so fulfill'd

With men's abuses: those proud lords, to blame,

Make weak-made women tenants to their
shame. 1260

The precedent whereof in Lucrece view,
Assail'd by night with circumstances strong
Of present death, and shame that might ensue
By that her death, to do her husband wrong:
Such danger to resistance did belong,

That dying fear through all her body spread;
And who cannot abuse a body dead!

By this, mild patience bid fair Lucrece speak
To the poor counterfeit of her complaining:
'My girl,' quoth she, 'on what occasion break
Those tears from thee, that down thy cheeks are raining? 1271

If thou dost weep for grief of my sustaining, Know gentle wench, it small avails my mood:

If tears could help, mine own would do me
good.

'But tell me, girl, when went'—and there she stay'd

Till after a deep groan—'Tarquin from hence!'
'Madam, ere I was up,' replied the maid,

'The more to blame my sluggish negligence:
Yet with the fault I thus far can dispense;

Myself was stirring ere the break of day, 1280
And, ere I rose, was Tarquin gone away.

'But, lady, if your maid may be so bold,
She would request to know your heaviness.'

'O, peace!' quoth Lucrece: 'if it should be told,

The repetition cannot make it less;
For more it is than I can well express:

And that deep torture may be call'd a hell
When more is felt than one hath power to tell.

'Go, get me hither paper, ink, and pen:
I'll save that labour, for I have them here. 1300

What should I say? One of my husband's men
Bid thou be ready, by and by, to bear

A letter to my lord, my love, my dear:
Bid him with speed prepare to carry it;

The cause craves haste, and it will soon be writ.'

Her maid is gone, and she prepares to write,
First hovering o'er the paper with her quill:

Conceit and grief an eager combat fight;
What wit sets down is blotted straight with
will:

This is too curious-good, this blunt and ill:
Much like a press of people at a door, 1320

Through her inventions, which shall go before.

At last she thus begins: 'Thou worthy lord
Of that unworthy wife that greeteth thee,

Health to thy person! next vouchsafe to afford—
If ever, love, thy Lucrece thou wilt see—

Some present speed to come and visit me.
So, I commend me from our house in grief:

My woes are tedious, though my words are brief.'

Here folds she up the tenour of her wee, 1310
Her certain sorrow writ uncertainly.

By this short schedule Collatine may know
Her grief, but not her grief's true quality:

She dares not thereof make discovery,
Lest he should hold it her own gross abuse,

Ere she with blood had stain'd her stain'd

Besides, the life and feeling of her passion
She hoards, to spend when he is by to hear her:

When sighs and groans and tears may grace
the fashion

Of her disgrace, the better so to clear her 1320
From that suspicion which the world might bear her.

To shun this blot, she would not blot the
letter

With words, till action might become them better.

To see sad sights moves more than hear them
told:

For then the eye interprets to the ear
The heavy motion that it doth behold,

When every part a part of woe doth bear.
'Tis but a part of sorrow that we hear:

Deep sounds make lesser noise than shallow
fords,

And sorrow ebbs, being blown with wind of
words. 1330

Her letter now is seal'd, and on it writ
'At Ardea to my lord with more than haste.'

The post attends, and she delivers it,
Charging the sour-faced groom to his as fast

As lagging fowls before the northern blast:
Speed more than speed but dull and slow she deems:

Extremity still urgeth such extremes.

The homely villain court'ies to her low;
And, blushing on her, with a steadfast eye

Receives the scroll without or yea or no, 1340
And forth with bashful innocence doth hide.

But they whose guilt within their bosoms lies
Imagine every eye beholds their blame;

For Lucrece thought he blush'd to see her
shame:

When, silly groom! God wot, it was defect
Of spirit, life, and bold audacity.

Such harmless creatures have a true respect
To talk in deeds, while others naively

Promise more speed, but do it leisurely:
Even so this pattern of the worn-out age 1350

Pawn'd honest looks, but laid no words to gaze.

His kindled duty kindled her mistrust,
That two red fires in both their faces blazed;

She thought he blush'd, as knowing Tarquin's
lust,

And, blushing with him, wistly on him gazed;
Her earnest eye did make him more amazed:

The more she saw the blood his cheeks replenish,

The more she thought he spied in her some blush.

But long she thinks till he return again,
And yet the duteous vassal scarce is gone. 1360
The weary time she cannot entertain,
For now 'tis stale to sigh, to weep, and groan:
So woe hath wearied woe, moan tired moan,

That she her plaints a little while doth stay,
Pausing for means to mourn some newer
way.

At last she calls to mind where hangs a piece
Of skilful painting, made for Priam's Troy;
Before the which is drawn the power of Greece,
For Helen's rape the city to destroy. 1369
Threatening cloud-kissing Ilion with annoy;
Which the conceited painter drew so proud,
As heaven, it seem'd, to kiss the turret's
bow'd.

A thousand lamentable objects there,
In scorn of nature, art gave lifeless life:
Many a dry drop seem'd a weeping tear,
Shed for the slaughter'd husband by the wife;
The red blood reek'd, to show the painter's
strife;

And dying eyes gleam'd forth their ashy
lights,

Like dying coals burnt out in tedious nights.

There might you see the labouring pioneer 1380
Begrimed with sweat, and smeared all with dust;

And from the towers of Troy there would appear

The very eyes of men through loop-holes thrust,
Gazing upon the Greeks with little lust:

Such sweet observance in this work was had,
That one might see those far-off eyes look sad.

In great commanders grace and majesty
You might behold, triumphing in their faces;
In youth, quick bearing and dexterity;

And here and there the painter interlaces 1390
Pale cowards, marching on with trembling paces;

Which heartless peasants did so well resemble,

That one would swear he saw them quake and tremble.

In Ajax and Ulysses, O, what art
Of physiognomy might one behold!
The face of either cipher'd either's heart;
Their face their manners most expressly told:
In Ajax' eyes blunt rage and rigour roll'd;

But the mild glance that ay Ulysses lent
Show'd a deep regard and smiling government.

There pleading might you see grave Nestor
stand, 1401

As 'twere encouraging the Greeks to fight;
Making such other action with his hand,

That it beguiled attention, charm'd the sight:
In speech, it seem'd, his beard, all silver white,
Wagg'd up and down, and from his lips did fly Thin winding breath, which pur'd up to the sky.

About him were a press
Which seem'd to swallow up his sound advice;
All jointly listening, but with several grace,
As if some mermaid did their ears entice. 1411
Some high, some low, the painter was so nice;
The scalp of many, almost hid behind,
To jump up higher seem'd, to mock the
mind.

Here one man's hand lean'd on another's head
His nose being shadow'd by his neighbour's
ear;

Here one being throng'd bears back, all boll
and red;

Another smother'd seems to pelt and swear;
And in their rage such signs of rage they bear

As, but for loss of Nestor's golden words, 1421
It seem'd they would debate with angry swords.

For much imaginary work was there;
Conceit deceitful, so compact, so kind,
That for Achilles' image stood his spear,
Griped in an armed hand; himself, behind,
Was left unseen, save to the eye of mind:
A hand, a foot, a face, a leg, a head,
Stood for the whole to be imagined.

And from the walls of strong-besieged Troy
When their brave hope, bold Hector, march'd to field, 1431

Stood many Trojan mothers, sharing joy
To see their youthful sons bright weapon wield;

And to their hope they such odd action yield,
That through their light joy seem'd to appear,

Like bright things stain'd, a kind of heav,
fear.

And from the strand of Dardan, where the
fought,

To Simois' reedy banks the red blood ran,
Whose waves to imitate the battle sought
With swelling ridges; and their ranks began
To break upon the galled shore, and then 1441

Retire again, till, meeting greater ranks,
They join and shoot their foam at Simois
banks.

To this well-painted piece is Lucrece come,
To find a face where all distress is stoll'd.

Many she sees where cares have carved some,
But none where all distress and dolor dwell'd

Till she despairing Hebe beheld,
Staring on Priam's wounds with her old eyes

Which bleeding under Pyrrhus' sword had lied.

In her the painter had anatomiz'd 1451

Time's ruin, beauty's wreck, and grim reign:

Her cheeks with chops and wrinkles were disguised;
Of what she was no semblance did remain:
Her blue blood changed to black in every vein,
Wanting the spring that those shrunk pipes
 had fed,
Show'd life imprison'd in a body dead.

On this sad shadow Luorece spends her eyes,
And shapes her sorrow to the beldam's woes,
Who nothing wants to answer her but cries,
And bitter words to ban her cruel foes: 1460
The painter was no god to lend her those;
And therefore Luorece swears he did her
 wrong,
To give her so much grief and not a tongue.

'Poor instrument,' quoth she, 'without a sound,
I'll tune thy woe with my lamenting tongue;
And drop sweet balm in Priam's painted wound,
And rail on Pyrrhus that hath done him wrong;
And with my tears quench Troy that burns so
 long;

And with my knife scratch out the angry
 1469
Of all the Greeks that are thine enemies.

Show me the trumpet that began this stir,
That with my nails her beauty I may tear.
By heat of lust, fond Paris, did incur
This load of wrath that burning Troy doth
 bear;
By eye kindled the fire that burneth here;
And here in Troy, for trespass of thine eye,
The sire, the son, the dame, and daughter die.

Why should the private pleasure of some one
Become the public plague of many more?
Of sin, alone committed, light alone 1480
Upon his head that hath transgressed so;
Of guiltless souls be freed from guilty woe;
For one's offence why should so many fall,
To plague a private sin in general?

'Lo, here weeps Hecuba, here Priam dies,
Here manly Hector faints, here Troilus wounds,
Here friend by friend in bloody channel lies,
And friend to friend gives unadvised wounds,
And one man's lust these many lives confounds:
Had dotting Priam check'd his son's desire, Troy had been bright with fame and not with
 fire.' 1491

Here feelingly she weeps Troy's painted woes:
For sorrow, like a heavy-hanging bell,
Once set on ringing, with his own weight goes
When little strength rings out the doleful knell:
 set a-work, and tales doth tell of penitence and colour'd sorrow between words, and she their looks doth borrow.

She throws her eyes about the painting round,
And whom she finds forlorn she doth lament.
At last she sees a wretched image bound, 1500
That piteous looks to Phrygian shepherds lent:
His face, though full of cares, yet show'd content;

Onward to Troy with the blunt swains he goes,
So mild, that Patience seem'd to scorn his woes.

In him the painter labour'd with his skill
To hide deceit, and give the harmless show
An humble gait, calm looks, eyes waiting still,
A brow unbent, that seem'd to welcome woe;
Cheeks neither red nor pale, but mingled so
That blushing red no guilty instance gave,
Nor ashy pale the fear that false hearts have.

But, like a constant and confirmed devil,
He entertain'd a show so seeming just,
And therein so ensconced his secret evil,
That jealousy itself could not mistrust
False-creeping craft and perjury should thrust
Into so bright a day such black-faced storms,
Or blot with hell-born sin such saint-like forms. 1509

'The well-skill'd workman this mild image drew
For perjured Sinon, whose enchanting story
The credulous old Priam after slew;
Whose words like wildfire burnt the shining
 glory
Of rich-built Ilion, that the skies were sorry,
And little stars shot from their fixed places,
When their glass fell wherein they view'd their faces.

This picture she advis'dly perused,
And chid the painter for his wondrous skill,
Saying, some shape in Sinon's was abused;
So fair a form lodged not a mind so ill: 1530
And still on him she gazed; and gazing still,
Such signs of truth in his plain face she spied,
That she concludes the picture was belied.

It cannot be,' quoth she, 'that so much guile'—
She would have said 'can lurk in such a look';
But Tarquin's shape came in her mind the while,
And from her tongue 'can lurk' from 'cannot'
 took:
It cannot be' she in that sense forsook.
And turn'd it thus, 'It cannot be, I find,
But such a face should bear a wicked mind:

'For even as subtle Sinon here is painted, 1541
So sober-sad, so weary, and so mild,
As if with grief or travail he had faint'd,
To me came Tarquin armed; so beruffled
With outward honesty, but yet deadly
With inward vice: as Priam him did cherish,
So did I Tarquin; so my Troy did perish.

'Look, look, how listening Priam wets his
 eyes,
To see those borrow'd tears that Sinon sheds!
Priam, why art thou old and yet not wise? 1550
For every tear he falls a Trojan bleeds:
His eye drops fire, no water thence proceeds;
Those round clear pearls of his, that move
 And
 speechless fire to burn his city.

'Such devils steal effects from lightless hell;
For Sinon in his fire doth quake with cold,
And in that cold hot-burning fire doth dwell;
These contraries such unity do hold,
Only to flatter fools and make them bold:
So Priam's trust false Sinon's tears doth flatter, 1560
That he finds means to burn his Troy with water.'

Here, all enraged, such passion her assails,
That patience is quite beaten from her breast.
She tears the senseless Sinon with her nails,
Comparing him to that unhappy guest
Whose deed hath made herself herself detest:
At last she smilingly with this gives o'er;
'Fool, fool!' quoth she, 'his wounds will not be sore.'

Thus ebbs and flows the current of her sorrow,
And time doth weary time with her complain-
ing. 1570
She looks for night, and then she longs for
morrow,
And both she thinks too long with her remaining:
Short time seems long in sorrow's sharp sustaining:
Though woe be heavy, yet it seldom sleeps;
And they that watch see time how slow it creeps.

Which all this time hath overslipp'd her thought,
That she with painted images hath spent;
Being from the feeling of her own grief brought
By deep surmise of others' detriment;
Losing her woes in shows of discontent. 1580
It easeth some, though none it ever cures,
To think their dolour others have endured.

But now the mindful messenger, come back,
Brings home his lord and other company:
Who finds his Lucrece clad in mourning black:
And round about her tear-dained eye
Blue circles stream'd, like rainbows in the sky:

These water-galls in her dim element
Foretell new storms to those already spent.

Which when her sad-beholding husband saw,
Amazed in her sad face he stares: 1591
Her eyes, though sad in tears, look'd red and raw,
Her lively colour kill'd with deadly cares.
He hath no power to ask her how she fares:
Both stood, like old acquaintance in a trance,
Met far from home, wondering each other's chance.

At last he takes her by the bloodless hand,
And thus begins: 'What uncouth ill event
Hath thee befall'n, that thou dost trembling
stand!

Sweet love, what spite hath thy fair colour
spent! 1600

Why art thou thus attired in discontent
Unmark, dear dear, this moody heaviness,
And tell thy grief, that we may give redress.'

Three times with sighs she gives her sorrow
fire,
Ere once she can discharge one word of woe:
At length address'd to answer his desire,
She modestly prepares to let them know
Her honour is ta'en prisoner by the foe;
While Collatine and his consorted lords 1609
With sad attention long to hear her words.

And now this pale swan in her watery nest
Begins the sad dirge of her certain ending:
'Few words,' quoth she, 'shall fit the trespass
best,
Where no excuse can give the fault amending:
In me moe woes than words are now depending;
And my laments would be drawn out too
long,
To tell them all with one poor tired tongue.

'Then be this all the task it hath to say:
Dear husband, in the interest of thy bed
A stranger came, and on that pillow lay 1620
Where thou wast wont to rest thy weary head;
And what wrong else may be imagined
By foul enforcement might be done to me,
From that, alas, thy Lucrece is not free.

'For in the dreadful dead of dark midnight,
With shining falchion in my chamber came
A creeping creature, with a flaming light,
And softly cried "Awake, thou Roman dame,
And entertain my love; else lasting shame
On thee and thine this night I will inflict,
If thou my love's desire do contradict. 1631

"For some hard-favour'd groom of thine," quoth he,
"Unless thou yoke thy liking to my will,
I'll murder straight, and then I'll slaughter
thee
And swear I found you where you did fulfil
The loathsome act of lust, and so did kill
The lechers in their deed: this act will be My fame and thy perpetual infamy."

'With this, I did begin to start and cry;
And then against my heart he sets his sword,
Swearing, unless I took all patiently, 1641
I should not live to speak another word;
So should my shame still rest upon record,
And never be forgot in mighty Rome
Th' adulterate death of Lucrece and her groom.

'Mine enemy was strong, my poor self weak,
And far the weaker with so strong a fear: . . .

That my poor beauty had purloin'd his eyes;
And when the judge is robb'd the prisoner
dies. 1650

'O, teach me how to make mine own excuse!
Or at the least this refuge let me find:
Though my gross blood be stain'd with this
abuse,

Immaculate and spotless is my mind ;
That was not forced ; that never was inclined
To accessory yieldings, but still pure
Doth in her poison'd closet yet endure.'

Lo, here, the hopeless merchant of this loss,
With head declined, and voice damm'd up with
woe, 1661
With sad set eyes, and wretched arms across,
From lips new-waxen pale begins to blow
The grief away that stops his answer so :
But, wretched as he is, he strives in vain ;
What he breathes out his breath drinks up
again.

As through an arch the violent roaring tide
Outruns the eye that doth behold his haste,
Yet in the eddy boundeth in his pride 1669
Back to the strait that forced him on so fast ;
In rage sent out, recall'd in rage, being past :
Even so his sighs, his sorrows, make a saw,
To push grief on, and back the same grief
draw.

Which speechless woe of his poor she attendeth,
And his untimely frenzy thus awaketh :
'Dear lord, thy sorrow to my sorrow lendeth
Another power ; no flood by raining slaketh.
My woe too sensible thy passion maketh
More feeling-painful : let it then suffice
To drown one woe, one pair of weeping
eyes. 1680

'And for my sake, when I might charm thee so
For she that was thy Lucrece, now attend me :
Be suddenly revenged on my foe,
Thine, mine, his own : suppose thou dost defend me
From what is past : the help that thou shalt lend me
Comes all too late, yet let the traitor die ;
For sparing justice feels iniquity.

'But ere I name him, you fair lords,' quoth
she,
Speaking to those that came with Collatine,
'Shall plight your honourable faiths to me, 1690
With swift pursuit to venge this wrong of
mine ;
For 'tis a meritorious fair design
To chase injustice with revengeful arms :
Knights, by their oaths, should right poor ladies harm.'

At this request, with noble disposition
Each present lord began to promise aid,
As bound in knighthood to her imposition,
Longing to hear the hateful foe bewray'd.
But she, that yet her sad task hath not said,
The protestation stops. 'O, speak,' quoth
she, 1700
'How may this forced stain be wiped from
me !

'What is the quality of mine offence,
Being constrain'd with dreadful circumstance ?
May my pure mind with the foul act dispense,
My low-declined honour to advance ?

'May any terms acquit me from this chance ?
The poison'd fountain clears itself again ;
And why not I from this compelled stain ?'

With this, they all at once began to say. 1709
Her body's stain her mind untainted clears ;
While with a joyless smile she turns away
The face, that map which deep impression bears
Of hard misfortune, carved in it with tears.
'No, no,' quoth she, 'no dame, hereafter living,
By my excuse shall claim excuse's giving.'

Here with a sigh, as if her heart would break,
She throws forth Tarquin's name : 'He, he,'
she says,
But more than 'he' her poor tongue could not
speak ;
Till after many accents and delays,
Untimely breathings, sick and short assays, 1730
She utters this, 'He, he, fair lords, 'tis he,
That guides this hand to give this wound to
me.'

Even here she sheathed in her harmless breast
A harmful knife, that thence her soul unsheathed :
That blow did bail it from the deep unrest
Of that polluted prison where it breathed :
Her contrite sighs unto the clouds bequeathed
Her winged sprite, and through her wounds doth fly
Life's lasting date from cancell'd destiny.

Stone-still, astonish'd with this deadly deed,
Stood Collatine and all his lordly crew ; 1731
Till Lucrece's father, that beholds her blood,
Himself on her self-slaughter'd body threw ;
And from the purple fountain Brutus drew
The murderous knife, and, as it left the place,
Her blood, in poor revenge, held it in chase ;

And bubbling from her breast, it doth divide
In two slow rivers, that the crimson blood
Circles her body in on every side,
Who, like a late-sack'd island, vastly stood 1740
Bare and unpeopled in this fearful flood.
Some of her blood still pure and red remain'd,
And some look'd black, and that false Tarquin stain'd.

About the mourning and congealed face
Of that black blood a watery rigol goes,
Which seems to weep upon the tainted place :
And ever since, as pitying Lucrece's woes,
Red blood some watery token shows ;
Blood untainted still doth red abide,
Washing at that which is so putrified. 1750

'Daughter, dear daughter,' old Lucretius cries,
'That life was mine which thou hast here deprived.
If in the child the father's image lies,
Where shall I live now Lucrece is untid ?

Thou wast not to this and from me derived.
If children yet descend progenitors,
We are their offspring, and they none of ours.

'Poor broken glass, I often did behold
In thy sweet semblance my old age new born;
But now that fair fresh mirror, dim and old,
Shows me a hare-boned death by time outworn
O, from thy cheeks my image thou hast torn,
And shiver'd all the beauty of my glass,
That I no more can see what once I was!

'O time, cease thou thy course and last no longer,
If thy surcease to be that should survive.
Shall rotten death make conquest of the stronger
And leave the faltering feeble souls alive?
The old bees die, the young possess their hive:
Then live, sweet Lucrece, live again and see
Thy father die, and not thy father thee!' 1771

By this, starts Collatine as from a dream,
And bids Lucretius give his sorrow place;
And then in key-cold Lucrece' bleeding stream
He falls, and bathes the pale fear in his face,
And counterfeits to die with her a space;
Till manly shame bids him possess his breath
And live to be revenged on her death.

The deep vexation of his inward soul 1775
Hath served a dumb arrest upon his tongue;
Who, mad that sorrow should his use control,
Or keep him from heart-easing words so long,
Begins to talk; but through his lips do throng Weak words, so thick come in his poor heart's aid,
That no man could distinguish what he said.

Yet sometime 'Tarquin' was pronounced plain,
But through his teeth, as if the name he tore.
This windy tempest, till it blow up rain,
Held back his sorrow's tide, to make it more;
At last it rains, and busy winds give o'er: 1790
Then son and father weep with equal strife
Who should weep most, for daughter or for wife.

The one doth call her his, the other his,
Yet neither may possess the claim they lay.
The father says 'She's mine.' 'O, mine she is,'
Replies her husband: 'do not take away
My sorrow's interest; let no mourner say
He weeps for her, for she was only mine,
And only must be wail'd by Collatine.'

'O' quoth Lucretius, 'I did give that life 1800
Which she too early and too late hath spill'd.'
'Woe, woe,' quoth Collatine, 'she was my wife,
I owed her, and 'tis mine that she hath kill'd.'
'My daughter' and 'my wife' with clamours fill'd.

The dispassion'd air, who, holding Lucrece' life,
Answer'd their cries, 'my daughter' and 'my wife.'

Brutus, who pluck'd the knife from Lucrece' side,
Seeing such animation in their woe,
Began to clothe his wit in state and pride,
Burying in Lucrece' wound his folly's show.
He with the Romans was esteem'd so 1811
As silly-jeering idiots are with kings,
For sportive words and uttering foolish things:

But now he throws that shallow habit by,
Wherein deep policy did him
And arm'd his long-hid wits MANLY words,
To check the tears in Collatinus' eyes.
'Thou wronged lord of Rome,' quoth he, 'arise:
Let my unsounded self, supposed a fool,
Now set thy long-experienced wit to school.

'Why, Collatine, is woe the cure for woe? 1821
Do wounds help wounds, or grief help grievous deeds?

Is it revenge to give thyself a blow
For his foul act by whom thy fair wife bleeds?
Such childish humour from weak minds proceeds:
Thy wretched wife mistook the matter so,
To slay herself, that should have slain her foe.

'Courageous Roman, do not steep thy heart
In such relenting dew of lamentations; 1829
But kneel with me and help to bear thy part,
To rouse our Roman gods with invocations,
That they will suffer these abominations,
Since Rome herself in them doth stand
disgraced,
By our strong arms from forth her fair streets chased.

'Now, by the Capitol that we adore,
And by this chaste blood so unjustly stain'd,
By heaven's fair sun that breeds the fat earth's store,
By all our country rights in Rome maintain'd,
And by chaste Lucrece' soul that late complain'd
Her wrongs to us, and by this bloody knife,
We will revenge the death of this true wife.

His said, he struck his hand upon his breast,
And kiss'd the fatal knife, to end his vow;
And to his protestation urged the rest,
Who, wondering at him, did his words allow:
Then jointly to the ground their knees they bow;
And that deep vow, which Brutus made
before,
He doth again repeat, and that they swore.

When they had sworn to this advised doom,
They did conclude to bear dead Lucrece thence;
To show her bleeding body thorough Rome,
And so to publish Tarquin's foul offence:
Which being done with speedy diligence,
The Romans plausibly did give consent
To Tarquin's evading banishment.

T. T.

I.

FROM fairest creatures we desire increase,
That thereby beauty's rose might never die,
But as the ripen should by time decaie,
His tender heir might bear his memory;
But thou, contracted to thine own bright eyes,
Feed'st thy light's flame with self-substantial fuel,
Making a famine where abundance lies,
Thyself thy foe, to thy sweet self too cruel.
Thou that art now the world's fresh ornament
And only herald to the gaudy spring,
Within thine own bud buriest thy content
And, tender churl, makest waste in niggarding.
Pity the world, or else this glutton be,
To eat the world's due, by the grave and thee.

III.

Look in thy glass, and tell the face thou viewest
Now is the time that face should form another;
Whose fresh repair if now thou not renewest,
Thou dost beguile the world, unbless some mother.
For where is she so fair whose uncar'd womb
Disdains the tillage of thy husbandry?
Or who is he so fond will be the tomb
Of his self-love, to stop posterity?
Thou art thy mother's glass, and she in thee
Calls back the lovely April of her prime:
So thou through windows of thine age shalt
see
Respite of wrinkles this thy golden time.
But if thou live, remember'd not to be,
Die single, and thine image dies with thee.

IV.

When forty winters shall besiege thy brow,
And dig deep trenches in thy beauty's field,
Thy youth's proud livery, so gazed on now,
Will be a tatter'd weed, of small worth held:
Then being ask'd where all thy beauty lies,
Where all the treasure of thy lusty days,
To say, within thine own deep-sunken eyes,
Were an all-eating shame and thriftless praise.
How much more praise deserved thy beauty's use,
If thou couldst answer, 'This fair child of mine
Shall sum my count and make my old excuse,'
Proving his beauty by succession thine!
This were to be new made when thou art old,
And see thy blood warm when thou feel'st it
cold.

Unthrifty loveliness, why dost thou spend
Upon thyself thy beauty's legacy?
Nature's bequest gives nothing but doth lend,
And being frank she lends to those are free.
Then, beautiful niggard, why dost thou abuse
The bounteous largess given thee to give?
Profitless usurer, why dost thou use
So great a sum of sums, yet canst not live?
For having traffic with thyself alone,
Thou of thyself thy sweet self dost deprive.
Then how, when nature calls thee to be gone,
What acceptable audit canst thou leave?
Thy unaged beauty must be toss'd with
Which, used, lives th' ancestor to be.

V.

Those hours, that with gentle work did frame
The lovely gaze where every eye doth dwell,
Will play the tyrants to the very same
And that unfair which fairly doth excel;
For never-resting time leads summer on
To hideous winter and confounds him there;
Sap check'd with frost and lustry leaves quite
gone,

Beauty o'er-snow'd and bareness every where:
Then, were not summer's distillation left,
A liquid prisoner pent in walls of glass,
Beauty's effect with beauty were bereft,
Nor it nor no remembrance what it was:
But flowers distill'd, though they with winter
meet,
Leese but their show; their substance still lives sweet.

VI.

Then let not winter's ragged hand deface
In thee thy summer, ere thou be distill'd:
Make sweet some vial; treasure thou some place
With beauty's treasure, ere it be self-kill'd.
That use is not forbidden usury
Which happies those that pay the willing loan;
That's for thyself to breed another thee,
Or ten times happier, be it ten for one;
Ten times thyself were happier than thou art,
If ten of thine ten times refigured thee:
Then what could death do, if thou shouldst
depart,
Leaving thee living in posterity!
Be not self-will'd, for thou art much too fair
To be death's conquest and make worms thine heir.

Lo! in the orient when the gracious light
Lifts up his burning head, each under eye
Doth homage to his new-appearing sight,
Serving with looks his sacred majesty;
And having clim'd the steep-up heavenly hill,
Resembling strong youth in his middle age,
Yet mortal looks adore his beauty still,
Attending on his golden pilgrimage;
But when from highest pitch, with weary car,
Like feeble age, he reeleth from the day,
The eyes, fore duteous, now converted are
From his low tract and look another way:
So thou, thyself out-going in thy noon,
Unlook'd on diest, unless thou get a son.

VIII.

Mute to hear, why hear'st thou music sadly?
Sweets with sweets war not, joy delights in Joy

Why thou that which thou receivest not
Or else receivest with pleasure thine annoy!
If the true concord of well-tuned sounds,
By unions married, do offend thine ear,
They do but sweetly chide thee, who confound

In singleness the parts that thou shouldst
bear.

Mark how one string, sweet husband to another,
Strikes each in each by mutual ordering,
Resembling sire and child and happy mother
Who all in one, one pleasing note do sing:
Whose speechless song, being many, seeming
one,
Sings this to thee: 'thou single wilt prove none.'

IX.

Is it for fear to wet a widow's eye,
That thou consumest thyself in single life?
Ah! if thou issueless shalt hap to die,
The world will wall thee, like a makeless wife;
The world will be thy widow and still weep
That thou no form of thee hast left behind,
When every private widow well may keep
By children's eyes her husband's shape in
mind.
Look, what an unthrif in the world doth spend Shifts but his place, for still the world enjoys
it;
But beauty's waste hath in the world an end,
And kept unused, the user so destroys it.
No love toward others in that bosom sits
That on himself such murderous shame commits.

For shame! deny that thou bear'st love to any,
Who for thyself art so unprovident.
Grant, if thou wilt, thou art beloved of many,
But that thou none lovest is most evident;
For thou art so possess'd with murderous hate
That 'gainst thyself thou stick'st not to conspire,
Seeking that beauteous roof to ruinate
Which to repair should be thy chief desire.
O, change thy thought, that I may change my
mind!
Shall hate be fairer lodged than gentle love?
Be, as thy presence is, gracious and kind,
Or to thyself at least kind-hearted prove:
Make thee another self, for love of me,
That beauty still may live in thine or thee.

XI.

As fast as thou shalt wane, so fast thou growest
In one of thine, from that which thou de-stest
that fresh blood which youngly thou bestowest
Thou mayest call thine when thou from youth convertest.
Herein lives wisdom, beauty and increase;
Without this, folly, age and cold decay:
If all were minded so, the times should cease
And threescore year would make the world
away.
Let those whom Nature hath not made for
store,
Harsh, featureless and rude, barrenly perish:

Look, whom she best endow'd she gave the
more;
Which bounteous gift thou shouldst in bounty cherish:
She carved thee for her seal, and meant thereby
Thou shouldst print more, not let that copy die.

XII.

When I do count the clock that tells the time,
And see the brave day sunk in hideous night;
When I behold the violet past prime,
And sable curls all silver'd o'er with white;
When lofty trees I see barren of leaves
Which erst from heat did canopy the herd,
And summer's green all girded up in sheaves
Borne on the bier with white and bristly beard,
Then of thy beauty do I question make,
That thou among the wastes of time must go,
Since sweets and beauties do themselves forsake

And die as fast as they see others grow;
And nothing 'gainst Time's scythe can make defence
Save breed, to brave him when he takes thee
hence.

XIII.

O, that you were yourself! but, love, you are
No longer yours than you yourself here live:
Against this coming end you should prepare,
And your sweet semblance to some other give.
So should that beauty which you hold in lease
Find no determination; then you were Yourself again after yourself's decease,
When your sweet issue your sweet form should bear.

Who lets so fair a house fall to decay,
Which husbundry in honour might uphold
Against the stormy gusts of winter's day
And barren rage of death's eternal cold?
O, none but unthrifs! Dear my love, you
know

You had a father: let your son say so.

XIV.

Not from the stars do I my judgement pluck;
And yet methinks I have astronomy,
But not to tell of good or evil luck,
Of plagues, of dearths, or seasons' quality;
Nor can I fortune to brief minutes tell,
Pointing to each his thunder, rain and wind,
Or say with princes if it shall go well,
By oft predict that I in heaven find:
But from thine eyes my knowledge I derive,
And, constant stars, in them I read such art
As truth and beauty shall together thrive,
If from thyself to store thou wouldst convert;
Or else of thee this I prognosticate:
Thy end is truth's and beauty's doom and data.

XV.

When I consider every thing that grows
Holds in perfection but a little moment,
That this huge stage presenteth nought but shows
Whereon the stars in secret influence comment;

When I perceive that men as plants increase,
Cheered and check'd even by the self-same
sky,
Sunt in their youthful sap, at height decrease,
And wear their brave state out of memory;
Then the conceit of this inconstant stay
Sets you most rich in youth before my sight,
Where wasteful Time debateth with Decay,
To change your day of youth to sullied night;
And all in war with Time for love of you,
As he takes from you, I engraft you new.

XVI.

But wherefore do not you a mightier way
Make war upon this bloody tyrant, Time?
And fortify yourself in your decay
With means more blessed than my barren rhyme?
Now stand you on the top of happy hours,
And many maiden gardens yet unset
With virtuous wish would bear your living
flowers.

Much liker than your painted counterfeit:
So should the lines of life that life repair,
Which this, Time's pencil, or my pupil pen,
Neither in inward worth nor outward fair,
Can make you live yourself in eyes of men.
To give away yourself keeps yourself still,
And you must live, drawn by your own sweet skill.

XVII.

Who will believe my verse in time to come,
If it were fill'd with your most high deserts?
Though yet, heaven knows, it is but as a tomb
Which hides your life and shows not half your parts.

If I could write the beauty of your eyes
And in fresh numbers number all your graces,
The age to come would say 'This poet lies;
Such heavenly touches ne'er touch'd earthly

So should my papers yellow'd with their age
Be scorn'd like old men of less truth than
tongue,

And your true rights be term'd a poet's rage
And stretched metre of an antique song:
But were some child of yours alive that time,
You should live twice; in it and in my rhyme.

XVIII.

Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?
Thou art more lovely and more temperate;
Rough winds do shake the darling buds of
May,
And summer's lease hath all too short a date:
Sometime too hot the eye of heaven shines,
And often is his gold complexion dimm'd;
And every fair from fair sometime declines,
By chance or nature's changing course untrimm'd;

But thy eternal summer shall not fade
Nor lose possession of that fair thou owest;
Nor shall Death brag thou wander'st in his shade,
When in eternal lines to time thou growest:

So long as men can breathe or eyes can see,
So long lives this and this gives life to thee.

XX.

Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paw,
And make the earth devour her own sweet
blood;
Pluck the keen teeth from the fierce tiger's
jaws,
And burn the long-lived phoenix in her blood;
Make glad and sorry seasons as thou fleets,
And do whate'er thou wilt, swift-footed Time,
To the wide world and all her fading sweets;
But I forbid thee one most heinous crime:
O, carve not with thy hours my love's fair
brow,
Nor draw no lines there with thine antique
pen;
Him in thy course untainted do allow
For beauty's pattern to succeeding men.
Yet, do thy worst, old Time: despite thy
wrong,
My love shall in my verse ever live young.

XXI.

A woman's face with Nature's own hand painted
Hast thou, the master-mistress of my passion;
A woman's gentle heart, but not acquainted With shifting change, as is false women's fashion;
An eye more bright than theirs, less false in rolling,
Cliking the object whereupon it gazeth;
A man in hue, all 'hues' in his controuling,
Which steals men's eyes and women's souls amazeth.
And for a woman wert thou first created;
Till Nature, as she wrought thee, fell a-doting,
And by addition me of thee defeated,
By adding one thing to my purpose nothing.
But since she prick'd thee out for women's
pleasure,
Mine be thy love and thy love's use their treasure.

XXII.

So is it not with me as with that Muse
Sitr'd by a painted beauty to his verse,
Who heaven itself for ornament doth use
And every fair with his fair doth rehearse;
Making a complement of proud compare,
With sun and moon, with earth and sea's rich
gems,
With April's first-born flowers, and all things
rare
That heaven's air in this huge pendure hangs.
O, let me true in love, but truly write,
And, when I sailers see, my love is as fair
As any mother's child, though not so bright
As yonder golden candle fix'd in heaven's air:
Let them say more that like of hearsay well;
For I am sworn that purpose not to sell.

XXIII.

My glass shall not persuade me I am old;
No sun shall seem to burn and thou art of one date;

But when in thee time's furrows I behold,
Then look I death my days should expiate.
For all that beauty that doth cover thee
Is but the seemly raiment of my heart,
Which in thy breast doth live, as thine in me:
How can I then be elder than thou art?
O, therefore, love, be of thyself so wary
As I, not for myself, but for thee will;
Bearing thy heart, which I will keep so chary
As tender nurse her babe from faring ill.
Presume not on thy heart when mine is slain;
Thou gavest me thine, not to give back again.

XXIII.

As an imperfect actor on the stage
Who with his fear is put besides his part,
Or some fierce thing replete with too much rage,
Whose strength's abundance weakens his own
heart,
So I, for fear of trust, forget to say
The perfect ceremony of love's rite,
And in mine own love's strength seem to decay,
O'ercharged with burden of mine own love's might.
O, let my books be then the eloquence
And dumb presagers of my speaking breast,
Who plead for love and look for recompense
More than that tongue that more hath more express'd.
O, learn to read what silent love hath writ:
To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine wit.

XXIV.

Mine eye hath play'd the painter and hath stell'd
Thy beauty's form in table of my heart;
My body is the frame wherein 'tis held,
And perspective it is best painter's art.
For through the painter must you see his skill,
To find where your true image pictured lies;
Which in my bosom's shop is hanging still,
That hath his windows glazed with thine eyes.
Now see what good turns eyes for eyes have
done:
Mine eyes have drawn thy shape, and thine
for me
Are windows to my breast, where-through the sun
Delights to peep, to gaze therein on thee;
Yet eyes this cunning want to grace their art;
They draw but what they see, know not the
heart.

XXV.

Let those who are in favour with their stars
Of public honour and proud titles boast
Whilst I, whom fortune of such triumph bars,
Unlook'd for joy in that I honour most.
Great princes' favourites their fair leaves spread
But as the marigold at the sun's eye,
And in themselves their pride lies buried,
For at a frown they in their glory die.
The painful warrior famoused for After a thousand victories once for
Is from the book of honour rased quite,
And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd;
Then happy I, that love and am beloved,
Where I may not remove nor be removed.

XXVI.

Lord of my love, to whom in vanalage
Thy mark hath my duty strongly knit,
To thee I send this written emassage,
To witness duty, not to show my wit:
Duty so great, which wit as poor as mine
May make seem base, in wanting words to show it.

But that I hope some good conceit of thine
In thy soul's thought, all naked, will bestow it;
Till whatsoever star that guides my moving
Points on me graciously with fair aspect
And puts apparel on my tatter'd loving,
To show me worthy of thy sweet respect:

Then may I dare to boast how I do love thee;
Till then not show my head where thou mayst prove me.

XXVII.

Wearied with toil, I hate me to my bed,
The dear repose for limbs with travel tired;
But then begins a journey in my head,
To work my mind, when body's work's expired:

For then my thoughts, from far where I abide,
Intend a zealous pilgrimage to thee,
And keep my drooping eyelids open wide,
Looking on darkness which the blind do see:
Save that my soul's imaginary sight
Presents thy shadow to my sightless view,
Which, like a jewel hung in ghastly night,
Makes black night beautiful and her old new.

Lo! thus, by day my limbs, by night my
mind,
For thee and for myself no quiet find.

XXVIII.

How can I then return in happy plight,
That am debarr'd the benefit of rest?
When day's oppression is not eased by night,
But day by night, and night by day, oppress'd?
And each, though enemies to either's reign,
Do in consent shake hands to torture me;
The one by toil, the other to complain
How far I toil, still further off from thee.
I tell the day, to please him thou art bright
And dost him grace when clouds do blot the
heaven:

So flatter I the swart-complexion'd night,
When sparkling stars twine not thou gild'st the even.

But day doth daily draw my sorrows longer
And night doth nightly make grief's strength seem stronger.

XXIX.

When, in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes,
I all alone beweep my outcast state
And trouble deaf heaven with my bootless
cries

And look upon myself and curse my fate,
Wishing me like to one more rich in hope,
Featured like him, like him with friends
possess'd,

Denying this man's art and that man's scope,
With what I most enjoy contented least;

Yet in these thoughts myself almost despising,
Happy I think on thee, and then my state,
Like to the lark at break of day arising
From sullen earth, sings hymns at heaven's gate;

For thy sweet love remember'd such wealth
That then I scorn to change my state with

XXX.

When to the sessions of sweet silent thought
I summon up remembrance of things past,
I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought,
And with old woes new wail my dear time's waste:

Then can I drown an eye, unused to flow,
For precious friends hid in death's dateless
night,
And weep a fresh love's long since cancell'd woe,
And mean the expense of many a vanish'd
sight:

Then can I grieve at grievances foregone,
And heavily from woe to woe tell o'er
The sad account of fore-bemoaned moan,
Which I new pay as if not paid before.
But if the while I think on thee, dear friend,
All losses are restored and sorrows end.

XXXI.

Thy bosom is endeared with all hearts,
Which I by lacking have supposed dead,
And there reigns love and all love's loving parts,
And all those friends which I thought buried.
How many a holy and obsequious tear
Hath dear religious love stol'n from mine eye
As interest of the dead, which now appear
But things removed that hidden in thee lie!
Thou art the grave where buried love doth live,
Hung with the trophies of my lovers gone,
Who all their parts of me to thee did give;
That due of many now is thine alone:
Their images I loved I view in thee,
And thou, all they, hast all the all of me.

XXXII.

If thou survive my well-contented day,
When that eternal Death my bones with dust shall cover,
And shalt by fortune once more re-survey
These poor rude lines of thy deceased lover,
Compare them with the bettering of the time,
And though they be outstripp'd by every pen,
Reserve them for my love, not for their rhyme,
Exceeded by the height of happier men,
O, then vouchsafe me but this loving thought:
Had my friend's Muse grown with this growing
age,

A dearer birth than this his love had brought,
To march in ranks of better couplets;
But since he died, and poets better prove,
Theirs for their style I'll read, his for his love.

XXXIII.

Fall many a glorious morning have I seen
Flatter the mountain-tops with sovereign eye,

Kissing with golden face the meadows green,
Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchemy;
Anon permit the basest clouds to ride
With ugly rack on his celestial face,
And from the forlorn world his visage hide,
Stealing unseen to west with this disgrace:
Even so my sun one early morn did shine
With all-triumphant splendour on my brow;
But out, alack! he was but one hour mine;
The region cloud hath mask'd him from me
now.

Yet him for this my love no whit disdaineth;
Suns of the world may stain when heaven's sun staineth.

XXXIV.

Why didst thou promise such a beauteous day
And make me travel forth without my cloak,
To let base clouds o'ertake me in my way,
Hiding thy bravery in their rotten smoke?
'Tis not enough that through the cloud thou break,

To dry the rain on my storm-beaten face,
For no man well of such a salve can speak
That heals the wound and cures not the disgrace;

Nor can thy shame give physic to my grief;
Though thou repent, yet I have still the loss:
The offender's sorrow lends but weak relief
To him that bears the strong offence's cross.

Ah! but those tears are pearl which thy love

And they are rich and ransom all ill deeds.

No more be grieved at that which thou hast
done:

Roses have thorns, and silver fountains mud;
Clouds and eclipses stain both moon and sun,
And loathsome canker lives in sweetest bud.
All men make faults, and even I in this,
Authorizing thy trespass with compare,
Myself corrupting, salving thy amiss,
Excusing thy sins more than thy sins are;
For to thy sensual fault I bring in sense—
Thy adverse party is thy advocate—
And 'gainst myself a lawful plea commence:
Such civil war is in my love and hate

That I an accessory needs must be To that sweet thief which sourly robs from me.

XXXV.

Let me confess that we two must be twain,
Although our undivided loves are one;
So shall those blots that do with me remain
Without thy help by me be borne alone.
In our two loves there is but one respect,
Though in our lives a separable spite,
Which though it alter not love's sole effect,
Yet doth it steal sweet hours from love's delight.
I may not evermore acknowledge thee,
Lest my bewailed guilt should do thee shame,
Nor thou with public kindness honour me,
Unless thou take that honour from my name:
But do not so; I love thee in such sort
As, thou being mine, mine is thy good respect.

XXXVII.

As a decrepit father takes delight
To see his active child do deeds of youth,
So I, made lame by fortune's dearest spite,
Take all my comfort of thy worth and truth.
For whether beauty, birth, or wealth, or wit,
Or any of these all, or all, or more,
Entitled in thy parts do crowned sit,
I make my love engrafted to this store:
So then I am not lame, poor, nor despised,
Whilst that this shadow doth such substance give

That I in thy abundance am i-
And by a part of all thy glory live.

Look, what is best, that best I wish in thee:
This wish I have; then ten times happy me!

XXXVIII.

How can my Muse want subject to invent,
While thou dost breathe, that pour'st into my verse

Thine own sweet argument, too excellent
For every vulgar paper to rehearse?
O, give thyself the thanks, if aught in me
Worthy perusal stand against thy sight;
For who's so dumb that cannot write to thee,
When thou thyself dost give invention light?
Be thou the tenth Muse, ten times more in
worth

Than those old nine which rhymers invoke;
And he that calls on thee, let him bring forth
Eternal numbers to outlive long date.

If my slight Muse do please these curious days,

The pain be mine, but thine shall be the praise.

XXXIX.

O, how thy worth with manners may I sing,
When thou art all the better part of me!
What can mine own praise to mine own self
bring?

And what is't but mine own when I praise
thee?

Even for this let us divided live,
And our dear love lose name of single one,
That by this separation I may give
That due to thee which thou dost deserve alone.
O absence, what a torment wouldst thou prove,
Were it not thy sour leisure gave sweet leave
To entertain the time with thoughts of love,
Which time and thoughts so sweetly doth deceive,

And that thou teachest how to make one twain,

By praising him here who doth hence remain!

XL.

Take all my loves, my love, yea, take them all:
What hast thou then more than thou hadst
before?

No love, my love, that thou mayst true love
call;

All mine was thine before thou hadst this more.
Then if for my love thou my love receivest,
I cannot blame thee for my love thou meet;

But yet be blamed, if thou thyself deceivest
By wilful taste of what thyself refuseth.
I do forgive thy robbery, gentle thief,
Although thou steal thee all my poverty;
And yet, love knows, it is a greater grief
To bear love's wrong than hate's known injury.
Lascivious grace, in whom all ill well shows,
Kill me with spites; yet we must not be foes.

XLI.

Those pretty wrongs that liberty commits,
When I am sometime absent from thy heart,
Thy beauty and thy years full well befits,
For still temptation follows where thou art.
Gentle thou art and therefore to be won,
Beautiful thou art, therefore to be assailed;
And when a woman woos, what woman's son
Will sourly leave her till she have prevailed?
Ay me! but yet thou mightest my seat forbear,
And chide thy beauty and thy straying youth,
Who lead thee in their riot even there
Where thou art forced to break a twofold truth,
Here, by thy beauty tempting her to thee,
Thine, by thy beauty being false to me.

XLII.

That thou hast her, it is not all my grief,
And yet it may be said I loved her dearly;
That she hath thee, is of my wailing chief,
A loss in love that touches me more nearly.
Loving offenders, thus I will excuse ye:
Thou dost love her, because thou know'st I love
her;
And for my sake even so doth she abuse me,
Suffering my friend for my sake to approve
her.
If I lose thee, my loss is my love's gain,
And losing her, my friend hath found that loss;
Both find each other, and I lose both twain,
And both for my sake lay on me this cross:
But here's the joy; my friend and I are one;
Sweet flattery! then she loves but me alone.

XLIII.

When most I wink, then do mine eyes best see,
For all the day they view things unrespected;
But when I sleep, in dreams they look on thee,
And darkly bright are bright in dark directed.
Then thou, whose shadow shadows doth make bright,
How would thy shadow's form form happy
show
To the clear day with thy much clearer light,
When to unseeing eyes thy shade shines so!
How would, I say, mine eyes be blessed made
By looking on thee in the living day,
When in dead night thy fair imperfect shade
Through heavy sleep on sightless eyes doth
stay!
All days are nights to see till I see thee,
And nights bright days when dreams do show thee me.

XLIV.

If the dull soul
of I were thought,
not stop my way;

For then despite of space I would be brought,
From limits far remote, where thou dost stay.
No matter then although my foot did stand
Upon the farthest earth removed from thee;
For nimble thought can jump both sea and
land
As soon as think the place where he would be.
But, ah! thought kills me that I am not thought,
To leap large lengths of miles when thou art
gone,
But that so much of earth and water wrought
I must attend time's leisure with my moan,
Receiving nought by elements so slow
But heavy tears, badges of either's woe.

XLV.

The other two, slight air and purging fire,
Are both with thee, wherever I abide;
The first my thought, the other my desire,
These present-absent with swift motion slide.
For when these quicker elements are gone
In tender embassy of love to thee,
My life, being made of four, with two alone
Sinks down to death, oppress'd with melancholy;
Until life's composition be recur'd
By those swift messengers return'd from thee,
Who even but now come back again, assured
Of thy fair health, recounting it to me:
This told, I joy; but then no longer glad,
I send them back again and straight grow sad.

XLVI.

Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war
How to divide the conquest of thy sight;
Mine eye my heart thy picture's sight would bar,
My heart mine eye the freedom of that right.
My heart doth plead that thou in him dost
lie,—
A closet never pierced with crystal eyes—
But the defendant doth that plea deny
And says in him thy fair appearance lies.
To 'cide this title is impaneled
A quest of thoughts, all tenants to the heart,
And by their verdict is determined
The clear eye's moiety and the dear heart's
part:
As thus; mine eye's due is thy outward part,
And my heart's right thy inward love of
heart.

XLVII.

Between mine eye and heart a league is took,
And each doth good turns now unto the other:
When that mine eye is famish'd for a look,
Or heart in love with sighs himself doth smother,
With my love's picture then my eye doth feast
And to the painted banquet bids my heart;
Another time mine eye is my heart's guest
And in his thoughts of love doth share a part:
So, either by thy picture or my love,
Thyself away art present still with me;
For thou not farther than my thoughts canst move,
And I am still with them and they with thee;

Awakes my heart to
 In my sight
 It and eye's delight.

XLVIII.

How careful was I, when I took my way,
 Each trifle under truest bars to thrust,
 That to my use it might unused stay
 From hands of falsehood, in sure wards of trust!

But thou, to whom my jewels trifles are,
 Most worthy comfort, now my greatest grief,
 Thou, best of dearest and mine only care,
 Art left the prey of every vulgar thief.
 Thee have I not lock'd up in any chest,
 Save where thou art not, though I feel thou art,
 Within the gentle closure of my breast,
 From whence at pleasure thou mayst come and
 part;

And even thence thou wilt be stol'n, I fear,
 For truth proves thievish for a prize so dear.

XLIX.

Against that time, if ever that time come,
 When I shall see thee frown on my defects,
 When as thy love hath cast his utmost sun,
 Call'd to that audit by advised travels;
 Against that time when thou shalt strangely

And scarcely greet me with that sun, thine eye,
 When love, converted from the thing it was,
 Shall reason's find of settled gravity,—
 Against that time do I ensconce me here
 Within the knowledge of mine own desert,
 And this my hand against myself uprear,
 To guard the lawful reasons on thy part:

To leave poor me thou hast the strength of laws,

Since why to love I can allege no cause.

How heavy do I journey on the way,
 When what I seek, my weary travel's end,
 Doth teach that ease and that repose to say
 "Thus far the miles are measured from thy friend!"

The beast that bears me, tired with my woe,
 Ploes dully on, to bear that weight in me,
 As if by some instinct the wretch did know
 His rider loved not speed, being made from
 thee;

The bloody spur cannot provoke him on
 That sometimes anger thrusts into his hide;
 Which heavily he answers with a groan,
 More sharp to me than spurrying his side;
 Yet that same groan doth put this in my
 mind;

My grief has onward and my joy behind.

L.

Thus can my love excuse the slow offence
 Of my dull bearer when from thee I speed:
 From where thou art why should I haste me
 thence?

Till I am weary of my speed, as now,
 O, what excuse will my poor beast then find,
 When thus he cannot come, and thus he cannot go!

Then should I spur, though mounted on the wind;

In winged speed no motion shall I know:
 Then can no horse with my desire keep pace;
 Therefore desire, of perfect love being made,
 Shall weigh—no dull flesh—in his fiery race;
 But love, for love, thus shall excuse my haste:
 Since from thee going he went wilful-slow, Towards thee I'll run, and give him leave to go.

LII.

So am I as the rich, whose ——— key
 Can bring him to his sweet up——— treasure,
 The which he will not every hour survey,
 For blunting the fine point of seldom pleasure.
 Therefore are feasts so solemn and so rare,
 Since, seldom coming, in the long year set,
 Like stones of worth they thinly placed are,
 Or captain jewels in the carcanet.

So is the time that keeps you as my chest,
 Or as the wardrobe which the robe doth hide,
 To make some special instant special blest,
 By new unfolding his imprison'd pride.

Blessed are you, whose worthiness gives scope,

Being had, to triumph, being lack'd, to hope.

LIII.

What is your substance, whereof are you made,
 That millions of strange shadows on you tend?
 Since every one hath, every one, one shade,
 And you, but one, can every shadow lend.
 Describe Adonis, and the counterfeit
 Is poorly imitated after you;

On Helen's cheek all art of beauty set,
 And you in Grecian tires are painted new:
 Speak of the spring and foison of the year;
 The one doth shadow of your beauty show,
 The other as your bounty doth appear;
 And you in every blessed shape we know.

In all external grace you have some part,
 But you like none, none you, for constant
 heart.

LIV.

O, how much more doth beauty beauteous seem

By that sweet ornament which truth doth give!
 The rose looks fair, but fairer we it deem
 For that sweet odour which doth in it live.
 The canker-blossoms have full as deep a dye
 As the perfumed tincture of the rose,
 Hang on such thorns and play as wantonly
 When summer's breath their masked buds discloses;

But, for their virtues only is their show,
 They live unwoo'd and unexposed fade,
 Die to themselves. Sweet roses do not so;
 Of their sweet deaths are sweetest odours made:
 And so of you, beauteous and lovely youth,
 When that shall fade, my verse distills your truth.

LV.

Not marble, nor the gilded monuments
 Of princes, shall outlive this powerful rhyme;

But you shall shine more bright in these contents

Than unswept stone besmeared with sluttish time.

When wasteful war shall statues overturn,
And broils root out the work of masonry,
Nor Mars his sword nor war's quick fire shall burn

The living record of your memory.
Gainst death and all-oblivious enmity
Shall you pace forth; your praise shall still find room

Even in the eyes of all posterity
That wear this world out to the ending doom.

So, till the judgement that yourself arise,
You live in this, and dwell in lovers' eyes.

LVI.

Sweet love, renew thy force; be it not said
Thy edge should blunter be than appetite,
Which but to-day by feeding is allay'd,
To-morrow sharpen'd in his former might;
So, love, be thou; although to-day thou fill
Thy hungry eyes even till they wink with fullness,

To-morrow see again, and do not kill
The spirit of love with a perpetual dullness.
Let this sad interim like the ocean be
Which parts the shore, where two contracted new Come daily to the banks, that, when they see Return of love, more blest may be the view;
Else call it winter, which being full of care
Makes summer's welcome thrice more wish'd, more rare.

LVII.

Being your slave, what should I do but tend Upon the hours and times of your desire?
I have no precious time at all to spend,
Nor services to do, till you require.
Nor dare I chide the world-without-end hour
Whilst I, my sovereign, watch the clock for you,
Nor think the bitterness of absence sour
When you have bid your servant once adieu;
Nor dare I question with my jealous thought
Where you may be, or your affairs suppose,
But, like a sad slave, stay and think of nought
Save, where you are, how happy you make those.
So true a fool is love that in your will,
Though you do any thing, he thinks no ill.

LVIII.

That god forbid that made me first your slave,
I should in thought control your times of pleasure,

Or at your hand the account of hours to crave,
Being your vassal, bound to stay your leisure!

d patience, tame to sufferance, bids each check,

Without accusing you of injury,
Be where you list, your charter is so strong
That you yourself may privilege your time
To what you will; to you it doth belong
Yourself to pardon of self-doing crime.

I am to wait, though waiting so be hell;
Not blame your pleasure, be it ill or well.

LIX.

If there be nothing new, but that which is Hath been before, how are our brains beguiled,
Which, labouring for invention, bear amiss
The second burden of a former child!
O, that record could with a backward look,
Even of five hundred courses of the sun,
Show me your image in some antique book,
Since mind at first in character was done!
That I might see what the old world could say
To this composed wonder of your frame;
Whether we are mended, or whether better they,

Or whether revolution be the same.
O, sure I am, the wits of former days
To subjects worse have given admiring praise.

Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore,
So do our minutes hasten to their end;

Each changing place with that which goes before,
In sequent toil all forwards do contend.

Nativity, once in the main of light,
Crawls to maturity, wherewith being crown'd,
Crooked eclipses 'gainst his glory fight,
And Time that gave doth now his gift confound.

Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth
And delves the parallels in beauty's brow,
Feeds on the rarities of nature's truth,
And nothing stands but for his ay to now:
† And yet to times in hope my verse shall stand,

Praising thy worth, despite his cruel hand.

LXI.

Is it thy will thy image should keep open
My heavy eyelids to the weary night?
Dost thou desire my slumbers should be broken,
While shadows like to thee do mock my sight?
Is it thy spirit that thou send'st from thee
So far from home into my deeds to prey,
To find out shames and idle hours in me,
The scope and tenure of thy jealousy?
O, no! thy love, though much, is not so great:
It is my love that keeps mine eyes awake:
Mine own true love that doth my rest defeat,
To play the watchman ever for thy sake:

For thee watch I whilst thou dost wake elsewhere,
From me far off, with others all too near.

LXII.

Sin of self-love possesseth all mine eyes
And all my soul and all my every part;
And for this sin there is no remedy,
It is so grounded inward in my heart.
Methinks no face so gracious is as mine,
No shape so true, no truth of such account,
And for myself mine own worth do define,
As I all other in all worthes surmount.
But when my glass shows me myself indeed,
Beated and chopp'd with time's envenomed hand,
Mine own self-love quite contrary I find;
Self so self-loving was in vain.

'Tis thee, myself, that for myself I praise,
Painting my age with beauty of thy days.

LXIII.

Against my love shall be, as I am now,
Wish Time's injurious hand crush'd and o'er-worn;
When hours have drain'd his blood and fill'd his brow
With lines and wrinkles; when his youthful morn
Hath travell'd on to age's steepy night,
And all those beauties whereof now he's king
Are vanishing or vanish'd out of sight,
Stealing away the treasure of his spring;
For such a time do I now fortify
Against confounding age's cruel knife,
That he shall never cut from memory
My sweet love's beauty, though my lover's life.

His beauty shall in these black lines be seen,
And they shall live, and he in them still green.

LXIV.

When I have seen by Time's fell hand defaced
The rich proud cost of outworn buried age;
When sometime lofty towers I see down-razed
And brass eternal slave to mortal rage;
When I have seen the hungry ocean gain
Advantage on the kingdom of the shore,
And the firm soil win of the watery main,
Increasing store with loss and loss with store;
When I have seen such interchange of state,
Or state itself confounded to decay;
Ruin hath taught me thus to ruminat,
That Time will come and take my love away.

This thought is as a death, which cannot chose

But weep to have that which it fears to lose.

LXV.

Since brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless
sea,

But sad mortality o'er-ways their power,
How with this rage shall beauty hold a plea,
Whose action is no stronger than a flower?
O, how shall summer's honey breath hold out
Against the wreckful siege of battering days,
When rocks impregnable are not so stout,
Nor gates of steel so strong, but Time decays?
O fearful meditation! where, alack,
Shall Time's best jewel from Time's chest be hid?

Or what strong hand can hold his swift foot
back?

Or who his spoil of beauty can forbid?
O, none, unless this miracle have might,
That in black ink my love may still shine bright.

LXVI.

Time will all these, for rental death I cry,
As, to the latest moment, a beggar born,
And needy, nothing trimm'd in jollity,
And more than my undoing, sleepily forsworn,
And all the hopes of beauty scornfully misplaced,
I virtue rudely strumpeted,

And right perfection wrongfully disgraced,
And strength by limping away disabled,
And art made tongue-tied by authority,
And folly doctor-like controlling skill,
And simple truth miscall'd simplicity,
And captive good attending captain ill:
Tired with all these, from these would I be
gone,
Save that, to die, I leave my love alone.

LXVII.

Ah! wherefore with infection should he live,
And with his presence grace impiety,
That sin by him advantage should achieve
And lace itself with his society?
Why should false painting imitate his cheek
And steal dead seeming of his living hue?
Why should poor beauty indirectly seek Roses of shadow, since his rose is true?
Why should he live, now Nature bankrupt is, Beggard of blood-to blush through lively veins?

For she hath no exchequer now but his,
And, proud of many, lives upon his gains.
O, him she stores, to show what wealth she had
In days long since, before these last so bad.

Thus is his cheek the map of days outworn,
When beauty liv'd and died as flowers do now,
Before these bastard signs of fair were born,
Or durst inhabit on a living brow;
Before the golden tresses of the dead,
The right of sepulchres, were shorn away,
To live a second life on second head;
Ere beauty's dead fleece made another gay:
In him those holy antique hours are seen,
Without all ornament, itself and true,
Making no summer of another's green,
Robbing no old to dress his beauty new;
And him as for a map doth Nature store,
To show false Art what beauty was of yore.

LXIX.

Those parts of thee that the world's eye doth view
Want nothing that the thought of hearts can mend;
All tongues, the voice of souls, give thee that due,
Uttering bare truth, even so as foes commend.
Thy outward thus with outward praise is crown'd;
But those same tongues that give thee so thine own

In other accents do this praise confound
By seeing farther than the eye hath shown.
They look into the beauty of thy mind,
And that, in guess, they measure by thy deeds;
Then, churls, their thoughts, although their eyes were kind,

To thy fair flower add the rank smell of weeds:
But why thy odour matcheth not thy show,
The solve is this, that thou dost common grow.

LXX.

That thou art blamed shall not be thy defect,
 For slander's mark was ever yet the fair;
 The ornament of beauty is suspect,
 A crow that flies in heaven's sweetest air.
 So thou be good, slander doth but approve
 Thy worth the greater, being woo'd of time;
 For canker vice the sweetest buds doth love,
 And thou present'st a pure unstained prime.
 Thou hast pass'd by the ambush of young days,
 Either not assail'd or victor being charged;
 Yet this thy praise cannot be so thy praise,
 To tie up envy evermore enlarged:
 If some suspect of ill mask'd not thy show,
 Then thou alone kingdoms of hearts shouldst owe.

LXXI.

No longer mourn for me when I am dead
 Than you shall hear the surly sullen bell
 Give warning to the world that I am fled From this vile world, with vilest worms to dwell:
 Nay, if you read this line, remember not
 The hand that writ it; for I love you so
 That I in your sweet thoughts would be forgot
 If thinking on me then should make you woe.
 O, if, I say, you look upon this verse
 When I perhaps compounded am with clay,
 Do not so much as my poor name rehearse,
 But let your love even with my life decay,
 Lest the wise world should look into your moan
 And mock you with me after I am gone.

LXXII.

O, lest the world should task you to recite
 What merit lived in me, that you should love
 After my death, dear love, forget me quite,
 For you in me can nothing worthy prove;
 Unless you would devise some virtuous lie,
 To do more for me than mine own desert,
 And hang more praise upon deceased I
 Than niggard truth would willingly impart:
 O, lest your true love may seem false in this,
 That you for love speak well of me untrue,
 My name be buried where my body is,
 And live no more to shame nor me nor you.
 For I am shamed by that which I bring forth,
 And so should you, to love things nothing
 worth.

LXXIII.

That time of year thou may'st in me behold
 When yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang Upon those boughs which shake against the
 cold,
 Bare ruin'd choirs, where late the sweet bird sang.
 In me thou see'st the twilight of such day
 As after sunset fadeth in the west,
 Which by and by black night doth take away,
 Death's second self, that seals up all in rest.
 In me thou see'st the glowing of such fire
 That on the ashes of his youth doth lie,
 As the death-bed whereon it must expire,
 Consumed with that which it was nourish'd by.

This thou ^{more} sweet, which makes thy love
 To love that ^{more} all which thou must leave ere long.

But be contented; when that fall arrest
 Without all bail shall carry me away,
 My life hath in this line some interest,
 Which for memorial still with thee shall stay.
 When thou reviewest this, thou dost review
 The very part was consecrate to thee:
 The earth can have but earth, which is his due;
 My spirit is thine, the better part of me:
 So then thou hast but lost the dregs of life,
 The prey of worms, my body being dead,
 The coward conquest of a wretch's knife,
 Too base of thee to be remembered.
 The worth of that is that which it contains,
 And that is this, and this with thee remains.

LXXV.

So are you to my thoughts as food to life,
 Or as sweet-season'd showers are to the ground;
 And for the peace of you I hold such strife
 As 'twixt a miser and his wealth is found;
 Now proud as an enjoyer and anon
 Doubting the filching age will steal his treasure,
 Now counting best to be with you alone,
 Then better'd that the world may see my
 pleasure:
 Sometime all full with feasting on your sight
 And by and by clean starved for a look;
 Possessing or pursuing no delight,
 Save what is had or must from you be took.
 Thus do I pine and surfeit day by day,
 Or gluttoning on all, or all away.

LXXVI.

Why is my verse so barren of new pride,
 So far from variation or quick change?
 Why with the time do I not glance aside
 To new-found methods and to compounds
 strange?
 Why write I still all one, ever the same,
 And keep invention in a noted weed,
 That every word doth almost tell my name,
 Showing their birth and where they did proceed?
 O, know, sweet love, I always write of you,
 And you and love are still my argument;
 So all my best is dressing old words new,
 Spending again what is already spent:
 For as the sun is daily new and old,
 So is my love still telling what is told.

LXXVII.

Thy glass will show thee how thy beauties
 wear,
 Thy dial how thy precious minutes waste;
 The vacant leaves thy mind's imprint will bear,
 And of this book this learning may'st thou taste.
 The wrinkles which thy glass will truly show
 Of mouthed graves will give thee memory:
 Thou by thy dial's shady stealth may'st know
 Time's thievish progress to eternity.
 Look, what thy memory can not contain Commit to these waste blanks, and thou shalt find

Those children nursed, deliver'd from thy brain,
To take a new acquaintance of thy mind.
These offices, so oft as thou wilt look,
Shall profit thee and much enrich thy book.

LXXVIII.

So oft have I invoked thee for my Muse
And found such fair assistance in my verse
As every alien pen hath got my use
And under thee their poesy disperse.
Thine eyes that taught the dumb on high to sing
And heavy ignorance aloft to fly
Have added feathers to the learned's wing
And given grace a double majesty.
Yet be most proud of that which I compile,
Whose influence is thine and born of thee :
In others' works thou dost but mend the style,
And arts with thy sweet graces graced be ;
But thou art all my art and dost advance
As high as learning my rude ignorance.

LXXIX.

Whilst I alone did call upon thy aid,
My verse alone had all thy gentle grace,
But now my gracious numbers are decay'd
And my sick Muse doth give another place.
I grant, sweet love, thy lovely argument
Deserves the travail of a worthier pen,
Yet what of thee thy poet doth invent
He robs thee of and pays it thee again.
He lends thee virtue and he stole that word
From thy behaviour ; beauty doth he give
And found it in thy cheek ; he can afford
No praise to thee but what in thee doth live.
Then thank him not for that which he doth say,
Since what he owes thee thou thyself dost pay.

LXXX.

O, how I faint when I of you do write,
Knowing a better spirit doth use your name,
And in the praise thereof spends all his might,
To make me tongue-tied, speaking of your fame !
But since your worth, wide as the ocean is,
The humble as the proudest sail doth bear,
My silly bark inferior far to his
On your broad main doth wilfully appear.
Your shallowest help will hold me up afloat,
Whilst he upon your soundless deep doth ride ;
Or, being wreck'd, I am a worthless boat,
He of tall building and of goodly pride :
Then if he thrive and I be cast away,
The worst was this ; my love was my decay.

LXXXI.

Or I shall live your epitaph to make,
Or you survive when I in earth am rotten ;
From hence your memory death cannot take,
Although in me each part will be forgotten.
You once were known hence immortal life shall have,
The which can yield me but a common grave,
When you are gone, in men's eyes shall lie,
Your humble remembrance all my gentle verse,
Which even as nature created shall o'er-read,

And tongues to be your being shall rehearse
When all the breathers of this world are dead ;
You still shall live—such virtue hath my
pen—
Where breath most breathes, even in the mouths of men.

LXXXII.

I grant thou wert not married to my Muse
And therefore mayst without attaint o'erlook
The dedicated words which writers use
Of their fair subject, blessing every book.
Thou art as fair in knowledge as in hue,
Finding thy worth a limit past my praise,
And therefore art enforced to seek anew
Some fresher stamp of the time-bettering days.
And do so, love ; yet when they have devised
What strained touches rhetoric can lend,
Thou truly fair wert truly sympathized
In true plain words by thy true-telling friend ;
And their gross painting might be better used Where cheeks need blood ; in thee it is abused.

LXXXIII.

I never saw that you did painting need
And therefore to your fair no painting set ;
I found, or thought I found, you did exceed
The barren tender of a poet's debt ;
And therefore have I slept in your report,
That you yourself being extant well might show
How far a modern quill doth come too short,
Speaking of worth, what worth in you doth
grow.
This silence for my sin you did impute,
Which shall be most my glory, being dumb ;
For I impair not beauty being mute,
When others would give life and bring a tomb.
There lives more life in one of your fair eyes
Than both your poets can in praise devise.

LXXXIV.

Who is it that says most ? which can say more
Than this rich praise, that you alone are you !
In whose confine immured is the store
Which should example where your equal grew.
Lean penury within that pen doth dwell
That to his subject lends not some small glory ;
But he that writes of you, if he can tell
That you are you, so dignifies his story,
Let him but copy what in you is writ,
Not making worse what nature made so clear,
And such a counterpart shall fame his wit,
Making his style admired every where.
You to your beauties blessings add a curse,
Being fond on praise, which makes your praises worse.

LXXXV.

My tongue-tied Muse in manners holds her
still,
While comments of your praise, richly commend—
Reserve their character with golden quill
And precious phrases by all the Muses filed.
I think good thoughts whilst other write good
words,
And like unletter'd clerk still cry ' Amen '

To every hymn that able spirit affords
In polish'd form of well-refined pen.
Hearing you praised, I say 'Tis so, 'tis true,
And to the most of praises add something more;
But that is in my thought, whose love to you,
Though words come hindmost, holds his rank
before.

Then others for the breath of words respect,
Me for my dumb thoughts, speaking in effect.

LXXXVI.

Was it the proud full sail of his great verse,
Bound for the prize of all too precious you,
That did my ripe thoughts in my brain in-hearse,

Making their tomb the womb wherein they grew?

Was it his spirit, by spirits taught to write
Above a mortal pitch, that struck me dead?
No, neither he, nor his compeers by night
Giving him aid, my verse astonished.

He, nor that affable familiar ghost
Which nightly gulls him with intelligence,
As victors of my silence cannot boast;

I was not sick of any fear from thence;

But when your countenance fill'd up his line,
Then lack'd I matter; that enfeebled mine.

LXXXVII.

Farewell! thou art too dear for my possessing.
And like enough thou know'st thy estimate:
The charter of thy worth gives thee releasing;
My bonds in thee are all determinate.

For how do I hold thee but by thy granting?
And for that riches where is my deserving?

The cause of this fair gift in me is wanting,
And so my patent back again is swerving.
Thyself thou gavest, thy own worth then not knowing,

Or me, to whom thou gavest it, else mistaking
So thy great gift, upon misprision growing,
Comes home again, on better judgement making.

Thus have I had thee, as a dream doth flatter,
In sleep a king, but waking no such matter.

LXXXVIII.

When thou shalt be disposed to set me light
And place my merit in the eye of scorn,
Upon thy side against myself I'll fight
And prove thee virtuous, though thou art for-sworn.

With mine own weakness being best acquainted
Upon thy part I can set down a story

Of faults conceal'd, wherein I am attainted,
That thou in losing me shalt win much glory

And I by this will be a gainer too;
For bending all my loving thoughts on thee,

The injuries that to myself I do,
Doing thee wrong, double-vantage me.

Such is my love, to thee I so belong,
That for thy right myself will bear all wrong.

LXXXIX.

Say that thou didst forsake me for some fault,
And I will comment upon that offence;
Speak of my lameness, and I straight will halt,
Against thy reasons making no defence.

Thou canst not, love, disgrace me half so ill,
To set a form upon desired change,
As I'll myself disgrace: knowing thy will,
I will acquaintance strangle and look strange,
Be absent from thy walks, and in my tongue
Thy sweet beloved name no more shall dwell,
Lest I, too much profane, should do it wrong
And haply of our old acquaintance tell.
For thee against myself I'll vow debate,
For I must ne'er love him whom thou dost hate.

XC.

Then hate me when thou wilt; if ever, now;
Now, while the world is beat my deeds to cross,

Join with the spite of fortune, make me bow,
And do not drop in for an after-loss:
Ah, do not, when my heart hath 'scaped this
sorrow,

Come in the rearward of a conquer'd woe;
Give not a windy night a rainy morrow,

To linger out a purposed overthrow.
If thou wilt leave me, do not leave me last,
When other petty griefs have done their spite,

But in the onset come; so shall I taste
At first the very worst of fortune's might,

And other strains of woe, which now seem
woe,

Compared with loss of thee will not seem so.

Some glory in their birth, some in their skill,
Some in their wealth, some in their bodies'
force,

Some in their garments, though new-fangled
ill,

Some in their hawks and hounds, some in their
horse;

And every humour hath his adjunct pleasure,
Wherein it finds a joy above the rest:

But these particulars are not my measure;
All these I better in one general best.

Thy love is better than high birth to me,
Richer than wealth, prouder than garments'
cost,

Of more delight than hawks or horses be;
And having thee, of all men's pride I boast:

Wretched in this alone, that thou mayst take

All this away and me most wretched make.

XCII.

But do thy worst to steal thyself away,
For term of life thou art assured mine,

And life no longer than thy love will stay,
For it depends upon that love of mine.

Then need I not to fear the worst of wrongs,
When in the least of them my life hath end.

I see a better state to me belongs
Than that which on thy humour doth depend:

Thou canst not vex me with transiency's end,
Since that my life on thy revolt doth lean.

What a happy title do I find,
To have thy love, happy to die!

What's so blessed but that cannot be lost?
Mayst be false, and yet I know it not.

So shall I live, supposing thou art true,
Like a deceived husband; so love's face
May still seem love to me, though alter'd new;
Thy looks with me, thy heart in other place:
For there can live no hatred in thine eye,
Therefore in that I cannot know thy change.
In many's looks the false heart's history
Is writ in moods and frowns and wrinkles
strange.

But heaven in thy creation did decree
That in thy face sweet love should ever dwell;
Whate'er thy thoughts or thy heart's workings
be,
Thy looks should nothing thence but sweetness
tell.

How like Eve's apple doth thy beauty grow,
If thy sweet virtue answer not thy show!

XCIV.

They that have power to hurt and will do
none,

That do not do the thing they most do show,
Who, moving others, are themselves as stone,
Unmoved, cold, and to temptation slow,
They rightly do inherit heaven's graces
And husband nature's riches from expense;
They are the lords and owners of their faces,
Others but stewards of their excellence.

The summer's flower is to the summer sweet,
Though to itself it only live and die,
But if that flower with base infection meet,
The basest weed outbraves his dignity:

For sweetest things turn sourest by their decays;

Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds.

XCV.

How sweet and lovely dost thou make the
shame

Which, like a canker in the fragrant rose,
Doth spot the beauty of thy budding name!
O, in what sweets dost thou thy sins enclose!
That tongue that tells the story of thy days,
Making lascivious comments on thy sport,
Cannot dispraise but in a kind of praise;
Naming thy name blesses an ill report.
O, what a mansion have those vices got
Which for their habitation chose out thee,
Where beauty's veil doth cover every blot,
And all things turn to fair that eyes can see!

Take heed, dear heart, of this large privilege;
The hardest knife ill-used doth lose his edge.

XCVI.

Some say thy fault is youth, some wantonness;
Some say thy grace is youth and gentle sport;
Both grace and faults are loved of more and
less;

Thou simplest faults thyself to thee resort.
As on the finger of a throned queen

The basest jewel will be well esteem'd,
So are those errors that in thee are seen

To truths translated and for true things deem'd.
For many lambs might the stern wolf betray,
If some he could his looks translate!

How many gazers mightst thou lead away,
If thou wouldst use the strength of all thy
state!

But do not so; I love thee in such sort
As, thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

XCVII.

How like a winter hath my absence been
From thee, the pleasure of the fleeting year!
What freezings have I felt, what dark days
seen!

What old December's bareness every where!
And yet this time removed was summer's
time,

The teeming autumn, big with rich increase,
Bearing the wanton burthen of the prime,
Like widow'd womb after their lords' decease
Yet this abundant issue seem'd to me
But hope of orphans and unfather'd fruit;
For summer and his pleasures wait on thee,
And, thou away, the very birds are mute;
Or, if they sing, 'tis with so dull a cheer
That leaves look pale, dreading the winter's near.

XCVIII.

From you have I been absent in the spring,
When proud-pied April dress'd in all his trim
Hath put a spirit of youth in every thing,
That heavy Saturn laugh'd and leap'd with
him.

Yet nor the lays of birds nor the sweet smell
Of different flowers in odour and in hue
Could make me any summer's story tell,
Or from their proud lap pluck them where they
grew;

Nor did I wonder at the lily's white,
Nor praise the deep vermilion in the rose;
They were but sweet, but figures of delight,
Drawn after you, you pattern of all those.

Yet seem'd it winter still, and, you away,
As with your shadow I with these did play:

XCIX.

The forward violet thus did I chide:
Sweet thief, whence didst thou steal thy sweet that smells,

If not from my love's breath? The purple
pride

Which on thy soft cheek for complexion dwells
In my love's veins thou hast too grossly dyed.

The lily I condemned for thy hand,
And buds of marjoram had stol'n thy hair:

The roses fearfully on thorns did stand,
One blushing shame, another white despair;

A third, nor red nor white, had stol'n of both
And to his robbery had annex'd thy breath;

But, for his theft, in pride of all his growth
A vengeful canker eat him up to death.

More flowers I noted, yet I none could see
But sweet or colour it had stol'n from thee.

C.

Where art thou, Muse, that thou forget'st so
long

To speak of that which gives thee all thy might;

Spend'st thou thy fury on some worthless song,
Darkening thy power to lend base subjects
light!

Return, forgetful Muse, and straight redeem
In gentle numbers time so idly spent;
Sing to the ear that doth thy lays esteem
And gives thy pen both skill and argument.
Rise, resty Muse, my love's sweet face survey,
If Time have any wrinkle graven there;
If any, be a satire to decay,
And make Time's spoils despised every where.
Give my love fame faster than Time wastes
life;

So thou prevent'st his scythe and crooked
knife.

OL

O truant Muse, what shall be thy amends
For thy neglect of truth in beauty dyed?
Both truth and beauty on my love depends;
So dost thou too, and therein dignified.
Make answer, Muse: wilt thou not haply say 'Truth needs no colour, with his colour fix'd;
Beauty no pencil, beauty's truth to lay;
But best is best, if never intermix'd'?

Because he needs no praise, wilt thou be dumb?

Excuse not silence so: for 't lies in thee
To make him much outlive a gilded tomb,
And to be praised of ages yet to be.

Then do thy office, Muse: I teach thee how To make him seem long hence as he shows
now.

CL

My love is strengthen'd, though more weak in seeming;

I love not less, though less the show appear:
That love is merchandized whose rich esteem-
ing

The owner's tongue doth publish every where.
Our love was new and then but in the spring
When I was wont to greet it with my lays,
As Philomel in summer's front doth sing
And stops her pipe in growth of ripper days:
Not that the summer is less pleasant now Than when her mournful hymns did hush the
night,

But that wild music burthens every bough
And sweets grown common lose their dear
delight.

Therefore like her I sometime hold my
tongue,

Because I would not dull you with my song.

CLII

Alack, what poverty my Muse brings forth,
That having such a scope to show her pride,
The argument all bare is of more worth
Than when it hath my added praise beside!
O, blame me not, if I no more can write!
Look in your glass, and there appears a face
That over-goes my blunt invention quite,
Dulling my lines and doing me disgrace,
Were it not sinful then, striving to mend,
To mar the subject that before was well?
For to no other past my verses tend
Than of your graces and your gifts to tell;

And more, much more, than in my verse can sit
Your own glass shows you when you look in it.

CLIV

To me, fair friend, you never can be old,
For as you were when first your eye I eyed,
Such seems your beauty still. Three winters
cold

Have from the forests shook three summers'
pride,
Three beauteous springs to yellow autumn
turn'd

In process of the seasons have I seen,
Three April perfumes in three hot Junes
burn'd,

Since first I saw you fresh, which yet are green.

Ah! yet doth beauty, like a dial-hand,
Steal from his figure and no pace perceived;
So your sweet hue, which methinks still doth
stand,

Hath motion and mine eye may be deceived:
For fear of which, hear this, thou age un-
bred;

Ere you were born was beauty's summer
dead.

CLV

Let not my love be call'd idolatry,
Nor my beloved as an idol show,
Since all alike my songs and praises be
To one, of one, still such, and ever so.
Kind is my love to-day, to-morrow kind,
Still constant in a wondrous excellence;
Therefore my verse to constancy confined,
One thing expressing, leaves out difference.
'Fair, kind, and true' is all my argument,
'Fair, kind, and true' varying to other words;
And in this change is my invention spent,
Three themes in one, which wondrous scope affords.

'Fair, kind, and true,' have often lived alone,
Which three till now never kept seat in one.

CLVI

When in the chronicle of wasted time
I see descriptions of the fairest wights,
And beauty making beautiful old rhyme
In praise of ladies dead and lovely knights,
Then, in the blazon of sweet beauty's best,
Of hand, of foot, of lip, of eye, of brow,
I see their antique pen would have express'd
Even such a beauty as you master now.
So all their praises are but prophecies
Of this our time, all you prefiguring;
And, for they look'd but with divining eyes,
They had not skill enough

For we, which now

days,

Have eyes to wonder, but lack tongues to praise.

CLVII

Not mine own fears, nor the prophetic soul
Of the wide world dreaming on things to come,

Can yet the lease of my true love controul,
Supposed as forfeit to a confined doom.
The mortal moon hath her eclipse endured
And the sad augurs mock their own presage;
Uncertainties now crown themselves assured
And peace proclaims olives of endless age.
Now with the drops of this most balmy time
My love looks fresh, and Death to me subscribes.

Since, spite of him, I'll live in this poor rhyme,
While he insults o'er dull and speechless tribes;
And thou in this shalt find thy monument,
When tyrants' crests and tombs of brass are spent.

CVIII.

What's in the brain that ink may character
Which hath not figured to thee my true spirit?
What's new to speak, what new to register,
That may express my love or thy dear merit?
Nothing, sweet boy; but yet, like prayers
divine,
I must each day say o'er the very same,
Counting no old thing odd, thou mine, I thine,
Even as when first I hallow'd thy fair name.
So that eternal love in love's fresh case
Weighs not the dust and injury of age,
Nor gives to necessary wrinkles place,
But makes antiquity for aye his page,
Finding the first conceit of love there bred
Where time and outward form would show it dead.

CIX.

O, never say that I was false of heart,
Though absence seem'd my flame to qualify.
As easy might I from myself depart
As from my soul, which in thy breast doth lie:
That is my home of love: if I have ranged,
Like him that travels I return again,
Just to the time, not with the time exchanged,
So that myself bring water for my stain.
Never believe, though in my nature reign'd
Ait faculties that beseege all kinds of blood,
That is could so preposterously be stain'd,
To leave for nothing all thy sum of good;
For nothing this wide universe I call,
Save thou, my rose; in it thou art my all.

CX.

Alas, 'tis true I have gone here and there
And made myself a motley to the view, Gored mine own thoughts, sold cheap what is most dear;
Made old offences of affections new;
Most true 'tis that I have look'd on truth
Akinness and strangely: but, by all above,
These flames have burn'd my heart another youth,
And worse essays proved than my best of love.
Now all is done, have what shall have no end:
Mine appetite I never more will grind
On new-found sweets, to try an older friend,
A god in love, to whom I am confined.
Then give me welcome, next my heaven the floor,
Where thou shalt sit, and meet most loving

CXI.

O, for my sake do you with Fortune chide,
The guilty goddess of my harmful deeds,
That did not better for my life provide
Than public means which public manners breeds.
Thence comes it that my name receives brand,
And almost thence my nature is subdued
To what it works in, like the dyer's hand:
Pity me then and wish I were renew'd;
Whilst, like a willing patient, I will drink
Potions of eisel 'gainst my shape's infection;
No bitterness that I will bitter think,
Nor double penance, to correct correction.
Pity me then, dear friend, and I assure ye
Even that your pity is enough to cure me.

CXII.

Your love and pity doth the impression fill
Which vulgar scandal stamp'd upon my brow
For what care I who calls me well or ill,
So you o'er-green my bad, my good allow!
You are my all the world, and I must strive
To know my shames and praises from your
tongue;
None else to me, nor I to none alive,
That my steeld sense or changes right or
wrong.
In so profound abyss I throw all care
Of others' voices, that my adder's sense
To critic and to flatterer stopped are.
Mark how with my neglect I do dispense:
You are so strongly in my purpose bred
That all the world besides methinks are dead.

CXIII.

Since I left you, mine eye is in my mind;
And that which governs me to go about
Doth part his function and is partly blind,
Seems seeing, but effectually is out;
For it no form delivers to the heart
Of bird, of flower, or shape, which it doth hatch:
Of his quick objects hath the mind no part,
Nor his own vision holds what it doth catch;
For if it see the rudest or gentlest sight,
The most sweet favour or deformed creature
The mountain or the sea, the day or night,
The crow or dove, it shapes them to your feature:
Incapable of more, replete with you,
My most true mind thus makes mine eye untrue.

CXIV.

Or whether doth my mind, being crown'd wit
you,
Drink up the monarch's plague, this flattery!
Or whether shall I say, mine eye saith true,
And that your love taught it this alchemy,
To make of monsters and things ill-fallen
Such cherubins as your sweet self resemble,
Creating every bad a perfect best,
As fast as objects to his beams assemble!
O, 'tis the first; 'tis flattery in my seeing,
And my great mind upon small things doth set

Mine eye well knows what with his gust is greeting,
And to his palate doth prepare the cup :
If it be poison'd, 'tis the lesser sin
That mine eye loves it and doth first begin.

CXV.

Those lines that I before have writ do lie,
Even those that said I could not love you dearer :
Yet then my judgement knew no reason why
My most full flame should afterwards burn clearer.
But reckoning time, whose million'd accidents
Creep in 'twixt vows and change decrees of kings,
Tan sacred beauty, blunt the sharp'st intents,
Divert strong minds to the course of altering things ;
Alas, why, fearing of time's tyranny,
Might I not then say 'Now I love you best,'
When I was certain o'er uncertainty,
Crowning the present, doubting of the rest ?
Love is a babe ; then might I not say so,
To give full growth to that which still doth grow !

CXVI.

Let me not to the marriage of true minds
Admit impedimenta. Love is not love
Which alters when it alteration finds,
(Or bends with the remover to remove :
O, no ! it is an ever-fixed mark
That looks on tempests and is never shaken ;
It is the star to every wandering bark,
Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken.
Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks
Within his bending sickle's compass come ;
Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,
But bears it out even to the edge of doom.
If this be error and upon me proved,
I never writ, nor no man ever loved.

CXVII.

Accuse me thus : that I have scanted all
Wherein I should your great deserts repay,
Forgot upon your dearest love to call,
Where to all bounds do tie me day by day ;
That I have frequent been with unknown
minds
And given to time your own dear-purchased
right ;
That I have hoisted sail to all the winds
Which should transport me farthest from your sight,
Book both my wilfulness and errors down
And on just proof surmises accumulate ;
Lying me within the level of your frown,
But shoot not at me in your waken'd hate ;
Since my appeal says I did strive to prove
The constancy and virtue of your love.

CXVIII.

Like as, to make our appetites more keen,
With eager compounds we our palate urge,
As, to prevent our maladies unseen,
We sicken to surfeit sickness when we purge,

Even so, being full of your no-healing : weat-
ness,
To bitter sauces did I frame my feeding
And, sick of welfare, found a kind of meetness
To be diseased ere that there was true needings.

to faults assured
healthful state
Which, rank of goodness, would by ill be cured :
But thence I learn, and find the lesson true,
Drugs poison him that so fell sick of you.

What potions have I drunk of Siren tears,
Distill'd from limbeck's fowl as hell within,
Applying fears to hopes and hopes to fears,
Still losing when I saw myself to win !
What wretched errors hath my heart committed,
Whilst it hath thought itself so blessed never !
How have mine eyes out of their spheres been fitted
In the distraction of this madding fever !
O benefit of ill ! now I find true
That better is by evil still made better ;
And ruin'd love, when it is built anew,
Grows fairer than at first, more strong, far greater.
So I return rebuked to my content
And gain by ill thrice more than I have spent.

CXX.

That you were once unkind befriends me now,
And for that sorrow which I then did feel
Needs must I under my transgression bow, Unless my nerves were brass or hammer'd steel.
For if you were by my unkindness shaken
As I by yours, you've pass'd a hell of time,
And I, a tyrant, have no leisure taken
To weigh how once I suffer'd in your crime.
O, that our night of wee might have re-member'd
My deepest sense, how hard true sorrow hits,
And soon to you, as you to me, then tender'd
The humble salve which wounded bosoms fits !
But that your trespass now becomes a fee ;
Mine ransoms yours, and yours must ransom
me.

CXXI.

'Tis better to be vile than vile esteem'd,
When not to be receives reproach of being,
And the just pleasure lost which is so deem'd
Not by our feeling but by others' seeing :
For why should others' false adulterate eyes
Give salutation to my sportive blood ?
Or on my frailties why are frailer spies,
Which in their wills count bad what I think
good !
No, I am that I am, and they that level
At my abuses reckon up their own :
I may be straight, though they themselves be bevel ;
By their rank thoughts my deeds must not be shown ;

Unless this general evil they maintain,
All men are bad, and in their badness reign.

CXXII.

Thy gift, thy tables, are within my brain
Full character'd with lasting memory,
Which shall above that idle rank remain
Beyond all date, even to eternity;
Or at the least, so long as brain and heart
Have faculty by nature to subsist;
Till each to razed oblivion yield his part
Of thee, thy record never can be mis'd.
That poor retention could not so much hold,
Nor need I tallies thy dear love to score;
Therefore to give them from me was I bold,
To trust those tables that receive thee more:
To keep an adjunct to remember thee
Were to import forgetfulness in me.

CXXIII.

No, Time, thou shalt not boast that I do change:

Thy pyramids built up with newer might
To me are nothing novel, nothing strange;
They are but dressings of a former sight.
Our dates are brief, and therefore we admire
What thou dost foist upon us that is old,
And rather make them born to our desire
Than think that we before have heard them
told.

Thy registers and thee I both defy,
Not wondering at the present nor the past,
For thy records and what we see doth lie,
Made more or less by thy continual haste.

This I do vow and this shall ever be;
I will be true, despite thy scythe and thee.

If my dear love were but the child of state,
It might for Fortune's bastard be unfather'd,
As subject to Time's love or to Time's hate, Weeds among weeds, or flowers with flowers
gather'd.

No, it was builded far from accident;
It suffers not in smiling pomp, nor falls
Under the blow of thralld discontent,
Whereto the inviting time our fashion calls:
It fears not policy, that heretic,
Which works on leases of short-number'd hours,
But all alone stands hugely politic,
That it nor grows with heat nor drowns with showers.

To this I witness call the fools of time,
Which die for goodness, who have lived for crime.

CXXV.

Were't aught to me I bore the canopy,
With my extern the outward honouring,
Or laid great bases for eternity,
Which prove more short than waste or ruining?
Have I not seen dwellers on form and favour Lose all, and more, by paying too much rent,
For compound sweet forgetting simple savour,
Pitiful flowers, in their gazing spent!
No, let me be obsequious in thy heart,
And rather than my oblation, poor but free,

Which is not mix'd with seconds, knows no art,
But mutual render, only me for thee.
Hence, thou suborn'd informer! a true soul
When most impeach'd stands least in thy control.

CXXVI.

O thou, my lovely boy, who thy power
Dost hold Time's fickle glass, is sickle, hour;
Who hast by waning gro' and therein
show'st

Thy lovers withering as thy self grow'st;
If Nature, sovereign mistress o'er wrack,
As thou goest onwards, still will pluck thee
back,

She keeps thee to this purpose, that her skill
May time disgrace and wretched minutes kill.
Yet fear her, O thou minion of her pleasure!
She may detain, but not still keep, her treasure:
Her audit, though delay'd, answer'd must be,
And her quietus is to render thee.

CXXVII.

In the old age black was not counted fair,
Or if it were, it bore not beauty's name;
But now is black beauty's successive heir,
And beauty slander'd with a bastard shame:
For since each hand hath put on nature's
power,

Fairing the foul with art's false borrow'd face,
Sweet beauty hath no name, no holy bower,
But is profaned, if not lives in disgrace.
Therefore my mistress' brows are raven black,
Her eyes so suited, and they mourners seem
At such who, not born fair, no beauty lack,
Slandering creation with a false esteem:

Yet so they mourn, becoming of their woe,
That every tongue says beauty should look
so.

CXXVIII.

How oft, when thou, my music, music play'st,
Upon that blessed wood whose motion sounds
With thy sweet fingers, when thou gently sway'st

The wiry concord that mine ear confounds,
Do I envy those jacks that nimble leap
To kiss the tender inward of thy hand, Whilst my poor lips, which should that harvest reap,

At the wood's boldness by thee blushing stand!
To be so tickled, they would change their state
And situation with those dancing chips,
O'er whom thy fingers walk with gentle gait,
Making dead wood more blest than living lips.
Since saucy jacks so happy are in this,
Give them thy fingers, me thy lips to kiss.

CXXIX.

The expense of spirit in a waste of shame
Is lust in action; and till action, lust

Is perjured, murderous, bloody, full of blame,
Savage, extreme, rude, cruel, not to trust,
Enjoy'd no sooner but despoil'd straight,
Past reason hunted, and no sooner had
Past reason hated, as a swallow'd bait
On purpose laid to make the taker mad;
Mad in pursuit and in possession so;
Had, having, and in quest to have, extreme;
A bliss in proof, and proved, a very woe;
Before, a joy propos'd; behind, a dream.

All this the world well knows; yet none knows well
To shun the heaven that leads men to this hell.

OXXX.

My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun;
Coral is far more red than her lips' red;
If snow be white, why then her breasts are dun;

If hairs be wires, black wires grow on her head.
I have seen roses damask'd, red and white,
But no such roses see I in her cheeks;
And in some perfumes is there more delight
Than in the breath that from my mistress recks.

I love to hear her speak, yet well I know
That music hath a far more pleasing sound;
I grant I never saw a goddess go;
My mistress, when she walks, treads on the ground:

And yet, by heaven, I think my love as rare
As any she belied with false compare.

OXXXI.

Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art,
As these whose beauties proudly make them cruel;

For well thou know'st to my dear dotting heart
Thou art the fairest and most precious jewel.
Yet, in good faith, some say that thee behold
Thy face hath not the power to make love
groan:

To say they err I dare not be so bold,
Although I swear it to myself alone.
And, to be sure that is not false I swear,
A thousand groans, but thinking on thy face,
(One on another's neck, do witness bear
Thy black is fairest in my judgement's place.)
In nothing art thou black save in thy deeds,
And thence this slander, as I think, proceeds.

OXXXII.

Thine eyes I love, and they, as pitying me,
Knowing thy heart torments me with disdain,
Have put on black and loving mourners be,
Looking with pretty ruth upon my pain.
And truly not the morning sun of heaven
Reiter becomes the grey cheeks of the east,
Nor that full star that shines in the even Doth half that glory to the sober west.
As these two mourning eyes become thy face;
O, let it then as well become thy heart
To mourn for me, since mourning doth thee
grace,

And suit thy pity like in every part.
Then will I swear my beauty hath not
And all they fool that my complexion lack.

OXXXIII.

Bestrew that heart that makes my heart to groan

For that deep wound it gives my friend and
me!

Is't not enough to torture me alone,
But slave to slavery my sweetest friend must be!
Me from myself thy cruel eye hath taken,
And my next self thou harder hast engross'd:
Of him, myself, and thee, I am forsaken;
A torment thrice threefold thus to be cross'd.
Prison my heart in thy steel bosom's ward,
But then my friend's heart let my poor heart bail;

Whose'er keeps me, let my heart be his guard;
Thou canst not then use rigour in my gaol:
And yet thou wilt; for I, being pent in thee,
Perforce am thine, and all that is in me.

OXXXIV.

So, now I have confess'd that he is thine,
And I myself am mortgaged to thy will,
Myself I'll forfeit, so that other mine
Thou wilt restore, to be my comfort still:
But thou wilt not, nor he will not be free,
For thou art covetous and he is kind;
He learn'd but surety-like to write for me
Under that bond that him as fast doth bind.
The statute of thy beauty thou wilt take,
Thou usurper, that put'st forth all to use,
And sue a friend came debtor for my sake;
So him I lose through my unkind abuse.

Him have I lost; thou hast both him and me;
He pays the whole, and yet am I not free.

OXXXV.

Whoever hath her wish, thou hast thy 'Will';
And 'Will' to boot, and 'Will' in overplus;
More than enough am I that vex thee still,
To thy sweet will making addition thus.
Wilt thou, whose will is large and spacious,
Not once vouchsafe to hide my will in thine?
Shall will in others seem right gracious,
And in my will no fair acceptance shine?
The sea, all water, yet receives rain still
And in abundance addeth to his store;
So thou, being rich in 'Will', add to thy 'Will'
One will of mine, to make thy laws 'Will'
more.

Let no unkind, no fair beseechers kill;
Think all but one, and me in that one 'Will'.

OXXXVI.

If thy soul check thee that I come so near,
Swear to thy blind soul that I was thy 'Will',
And will, thy soul knows, is admitted there:
Thus far for love my lawless suit, 'Will',
'Will' will fulfil the measure of thy love.
Ay, all is full with will, and my will one.
In things of great receipt with ease we prove
Among a number one is reckon'd none:
Then in the number let me pass untold,
Though in thy stores' account I one must be;
For nothing hold me, so it please thee hold
That nothing me, a something sweet for thee:

Make but my name thy love, and love that still,
And then thou lovest me, for my name is
'Will.'

OXXXVII.

Thou blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine
eyes,
That they behold, and see not what they see?
They know what beauty is, see where it lies,
Yet what the best is take the worst to be.
If eyes corrupt by over-partial looks
Be anchor'd in the bay where all men ride,
Why of eyes' falsehood hast thou forged hooks,
Whereto the judgement of my heart is tied?
Why should my heart think that a several plot
Which my heart knows the wide world's common place?
Or mine eyes seeing this, say this is not,
To put fair truth upon so foul a face?
In things right true my heart and eyes have err'd,
And to this false plague are they now transferr'd.

OXXXVIII.

When my love swears that she is made of truth
I do believe her, though I know she lies,
That she might think me some untutor'd
youth,
Unlearned in the world's false subtleties,
Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me
young,
Although she knows my days are past the
best,
Simply I credit her false-speaking tongue:
On both sides thus is simple truth suppress'd.
But wherefore says she not she is unjust?
And wherefore say not I that I am old?
O, love's best habit is in seeming trust,
And age in love loves not to have years told:
Therefore I lie with her and she with me,
And in our faults by lies we flatter'd be.

OXXXIX.

O, call not me to justify the wrong
That thy unkindness lays upon my heart;
Wound me not with thine eye but with thy
tongue;
Use power with power and slay me not by art.
Tell me thou lovest elsewhere, but in my sight,
Dear heart, forbear to glance thine eye aside:
What need'st thou wound with cunning when thy sight
Is more than my o'er-press'd defence can bide?
Let me excuse thee: ah! my love well knows
Her pretty looks have been mine enemies,
And therefore from my face she turns my foes,
That they elsewhere might dart their injuries:
Yet do not so; but since I am near slain, Kill me outright with looks and rid my pain.

OXL.

Be wise as thou art cruel; do not press
My tongue-tied patience with too much discuss;

Least sorrow lend me words and words express
The manner of my pity-wanting pain.
If I might teach thee wit, better it were,
Though not to love, yet, love, to tell me so;
As testy sick men, when their deaths be near,
No news but health from their physicians
know;
For if I should despair, I should grow mad,
And in my madness might speak ill of thee:
Now this ill-wresting world is grown so bad,
Mad slanderers by mad ears believed be,
That I may not be so, nor thou believ'd,
Bear thine eyes straight, though thy proud heart go wide.

OXLII.

In faith, I do not love thee with mine eyes,
For they in thee a thousand errors note;
But 'tis my heart that loves what they despise,
Who in despite of view is pleased to dote;
Nor are mine ears with thy tongue's tune delighted,
Nor tender feeling, to base touches prone,
Nor taste, nor smell, desire to be invited
To any sensual feast with thee alone:
But my five wits nor my five senses can
Dissuade one foolish heart from serving thee,
Who leaves unwary'd the likeness of a man,
Thy proud heart's slave and vassal wretch to
be:
Only my plague thus far I count my gain,
That she that makes me sin awards me
pain.

OXLIII.

Love is my sin and thy dear virtue hate,
Hate of my sin, ground on sinful loving:
O, but with mine compare thou thine own
state,
And thou shalt find it merits not reproving;
Or, if it do, not from those lips of thine,
That have profaned their scarlet ornaments
And seal'd false bonds of love as oft as mine,
Robb'd others' beds' revenues of their rents.
Be it lawful I love thee, as thou lovest those Whom thine eyes woo as mine importune
thee:
Root pity in thy heart, that when it grows
Thy pity may deserve to pitied be.
If thou dost seek to have what thou dost hide,
By self-example mayst thou be denied!

OXLIV.

Lo! as a careful housewife runs to catch
One of her feather'd creatures broke away,
Sets down her babe and makes all swift dispatch
In pursuit of the thing she would have stay,
Whilst her neglected child holds her in chase,
Cries to catch her whose busy care is bent
To follow that which flies before her face,
Not prizing her poor infant's discontent;
So runn'st thou after that which flies from
thee,
Whilst I thy babe chase thee afar behind;

So will I pray that thou mayst have thy Will,
If thou turn back, and my loud crying still.

CXLIV

Two loves I have of comfort and despair,
Which like two spirits do suggest me still:
The better angel is a man right fair,
The worser spirit a woman colour'd ill.
To win me soon to hell, my female evil
Tempteth my better angel from my side,
And would corrupt my saint to be a devil,
Wooing his purity with her foul pride.
And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend
Suspect I may, yet not directly tell;
But being both from me, both to each friend,
I guess one angel in another's hell:
Yet this shall I ne'er know, but live in doubt,
Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

CXLV

Those lips that Love's own hand did make Breathed forth the sound that said 'I hate'
To me that languish'd for her sake;
But when she saw my woeful state,
Straight in her heart did mercy come,
'Hiding that tongue that ever sweet
Was used in giving gentle doom,
And taught it thus anew to greet;
'I hate' she alter'd with an end,
That follow'd it as gentle day
Doth follow night, who like a fiend
From heaven to hell is flown away;
'I hate' from hate away she threw,
And saved my life, saying 'not you.'

CXLVI

Poor soul, the centre of my sinful earth,
T..... these rebel powers that thee array,
Why dost thou pine within and suffer dearth,
Painting thy outward walls so costly gay?
Why so large cost, having so short a lease,
Dost thou take pains to keep it so?
Shall worms, inheritors of this excess,
Eat up thy charge? is this thy body's end?
Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant's loss,
And let that pine to aggravate thy store;
Buy terms divine in selling hours of dross;
Within be fed, without be rich no more:
So shalt thou feed on Death, that feeds on men,
And Death once dead, there's no more dying then.

CXLVII

My love is as a fever, longing still
For that which longer nureth the disease,
Feeding on that which doth preserve the ill,
The uncertain sickly appetite to please.
My reason, the physician to my love,
Angry that his prescriptions are not kept,
Hath left me, and I desperate now approve Desire in death, which physic did except.
Past cure I am, now reason is past care,
And frantic-mad with evermore unrest;

are,
I random from the truth vainly express'd;
For I have sworn thee fair and thought thee bright,
Who art as black as hell, as dark as night.

CXLVIII

I me, what eyes hath Love put in my head,
Which have no correspondence with true sight!
'Tis, if they have, where is my judgement fled,
That censures falsely what they see aright!
If that be fair whereon my false eyes dote,
What means the world to say it is not so?
If it be not, then love doth well denote
Love's eye is not so true as all men's 'No.'
How can it? O, how can Love's eye be true,
That is so vex'd with watching and with tears?
No marvel then, though I mistake my view:
The sun itself sees not till heaven clears.

O cunning Love! with tears thou keep'st me blind,
Least eyes well-seeing thy foul faults should find.

CXLIX

Anst thou, O cruel! say I love thee not,
When I against myself with thee partake!
Do I not think on thee, when I forgot
Am of myself, all tyrant, for thy sake?
Who hateth thee that I do call my friend?
On whom frown'st thou that I do fawn upon?
Nay, if thou lour'st on me, do I not spend Revenge upon myself with present moan?
What merit do I in myself respect,
That is so proud thy service to despise,
When all my best doth worship thy defect,
Commanded by the motion of thine eyes?
But, love, hate on, for now I know thy mind;

Those that can see thou lovest, and I am blind.

CL

O, from what power hast thou this powerful might
With insufficiency my heart to sway?
To make me give the lie to my true sight,
And swear that brightness doth not grace the day?
Whence hast thou this becoming of things ill,
That in the very refuse of thy deeds
There is such strength and warrant of skill,
That in my mind, thy worst all best exceeds?
Who taught thee this how to make me love thee more
The more I hear and see just cause of hate?
O, though I love what others do abhor,
With others thou shouldst not abhor my state:
If thy unworthiness raised love in me,
More worthy I to be beloved of thee.

CLI

Love is too young to know what conscience is;
Yet who knows not conscience is born of love!
Then, gentle cheater, urge not my amaze,
Lest guilty of my faults thy sweet self prove:
For, thou betraying me, it doth betray
My nobler part to my gross body's treason;

My soul doth tell my body that he may Triumph in love; flesh stays no farther reason;
 But, rising at thy name, doth point out thee
 As his triumphant prize. Proud of this pride,
 He is contented thy poor drudge to be,
 To stand in thy affairs, fall by thy side.
 No want of conscience hold it that I call
 Her 'love' for whose dear love I rise and fall.

CLII.

In loving thee thou know'st I am forsworn,
 But thou art twice forsworn, to me love
 swearing,

In act thy bed-row broke and new faith torn
 In vowing new hate after new love bearing.
 But why of two oaths' breach do I accuse thee,
 When I break twenty? I am perjured most;
 For all my vows are oaths but to misuse thee
 And all my honest faith in thee is lost,
 For I have sworn deep oaths of thy deep kind-
 ness,

Oaths of thy love, thy truth, thy constancy,
 And, to enlighten thee, gave eyes to blindness,
 Or made them swear against the thing they
 see;

For I have sworn thee fair; more perjured I,
 To swear against the truth so foul a lie!

CLIII.

Cupid laid by his brand, and fell asleep:
 A maid of Dian's this advantage found,

In a cold valley-fountain of that ground;
 Which borrow'd from this holy fire of Love
 A dateless lively heat, still to endure,
 And grew a seething bath, which yet men prove
 Against strange maladies a sovereign cure.
 But at my mistress' eye Love's brand new-fired,

The boy for trial needs would touch my breast;
 I, sick withal, the help of bath desired,
 And thither fled, a sad distemper'd guest,

But found no cure: the bath for my help
 lies
 Where Cupid got new fire—my mistress'
 eyes.

CLIV.

The little Love-god lying once ask
 Laid by his side his heart-inflaming
 Whilst many nymphs that vow'd chaste keep

Came tripping by; but in her maiden hand
 The fairest votary took up that fire
 Which many legions of true hearts had warm'd;
 And so the general of hot desire
 Was sleeping by a virgin hand disarm'd.
 This brand she quenched in a cool well by,
 Which from Love's fire took heat perpetual,
 Growing a bath and healthful remedy
 For men diseased; but I, my mistress' thrall,
 Came there for cure, and this by that I prove,
 Love's fire heats water, water cools not love.

A LOVER'S COMPLAINT

FROM off a hill whose concave womb re-worded
A plaintful story from a sistering vale,
My spirits to attend this double voice accorded,
And down I laid to list the sad-tuned tale;
Ere long espied a fleckle maid full pale,
Tearing of papers, breaking rings a-twain, Storming her world with sorrow's wind and rain.

Upon her head a platted hive of straw,
Which fortified her visage from the sun,
Whereon the thought might think sometime it saw
The carcass of a beauty spent and done:
Time had not scythed all that youth begun,
Nor youth all quit; but, spite of heaven's fell
rage,
Some beauty peep'd through lattice of sear'd
age.

(Of did she heave her napskin to her cyne,
Which on it had conceited characters,
Laundering the silken figures in the brine
That season'd woe had pelleted in tears,
And often reading what contents it bears;
As often shrieking undistinguish'd woe,
In clamorous of all size, both high and low.

Sometimes her level'd eyes their carriage ride,
As they did battery to the spheres intend;
Sometime diverted their poor balls are tied
To the orb'd earth; sometimes they do extend
Their view right on; anon their gazes lend
To every place at once, and, nowhere fix'd,
The mind and sight distractedly commix'd.

Her hair, nor loose nor tied in formal plat,
I proclaim'd in her a careless hand of pride
For some, untuck'd, descended her sheaved hat,
Hanging her pale and pined cheek beside;
Some in her threaden fillet still did bide,
And true to bondage would not break from thence,
Though slackly braided in loose negligence.

A thousand favours from a maund she drew (Of amber, crystal, and of beaded jet,
Which one by one she in a river threw,
Upon whose weeping margin she was set;
Like usury, applying wet to wet.
Or monarch's ransom that let not bounty fall
Where want cries some, but where excess begs
all.

Of folded schedules had she many a one,
Which she perused, sigh'd, tore, and gave the
food;
Crack'd many a ring of posied gold and bone,
Bidding them find their sepulchres in mud;
Found yet more letters sadly pawn'd in blood,
With sciss'd silk fast and affectedly
Enwashed, and sent'd to curious scrutiny.

These often bathed she in her fluxive eyes,
And often kiss'd, and often 'gan to tear;
Cried 'O false blood, thou register of lies,
What unapproved witness dost thou bear!
Ink would have seem'd more black and dammed
here!'

This said, in top of rage the lines she rents,
Big discontent so breaking their contents.

A reverend man that grazed his cattle night—
Sometime a blusterer, that the ruffie knew
Of court, of city, and had let go by
The swiftest hours, observed as they flew—
Towards this afflicted fancy fastly drew,
And, privileged by age, desires to know
In brief the grounds and motives of her woe.

So slides he down upon his grained bat,
And comely-distant sits he by her side;
When he again desires her, being sat,
Her grievance with his hearing to divide:
If that from him there may be sought applied
Which may her suffering ecstasy assuage,
'Tis promised in the charity of age.

'Father,' she says, 'though in me you behold
The injury of many a blasting hour,
Let it not tell your judgement I am old;
Not age, but sorrow, over me hath power:
I might as yet have been a spreading flower,
Fresh to myself, if I had self-applied
Love to myself and to no love beside.

'But, woe is me! too early I attended
A youthful suit—it was to gain my grace—
Of one by nature's outwards so commended, so
That maidens' eyes struck over all his face:
Love lack'd a dwelling, and made him her when in his fair parts she did abide,

She was new lodged and newly deified.

'His browny locks did hang in crooked curls;
And every light occasion of the wind
Upon his lips their silken parcels hurle.
What's sweet to do, to do will aptly find:
Each eye that saw him did enchant the mind,
For on his visage was in little drawn
What largeness thinks in Paradise was worn.

'Small show of man was yet upon his chin;
His phoenix down began but to appear
Like unhorn velvet on that termless skin Whose bare out-brag'd the web it seem'd to
wear;
Yet show'd his visage by that coat more dear;
And nice affections wavering stood in doubt
If best were as it was, or best without.

'His qualities were heinous as
For maiden-tinged he was, and

Yet, if men moved him, was he such a storm
As oft 'twixt May and April is to see,
When winds breathe sweet, unruly though they
be.

His rudeness so with his authorized youth
Did lively falseness in a pride of truth.

'Well could he ride, and often men would say
'That horse his mettle from his rider takes:
Proud of subjection, noble by the way,
What rounds, what bounds, what course, what stop he makes!'

And controversy hence a question takes, 120
Whether the horse by him became his deed,
Or he his manage by the well-doing steed.

'But quickly on this side the verdict went:
His real habitude gave life and grace
To appertainings and to ornament,
Accomplish'd in himself, not in his case:
All aids, themselves made fairer by their place,
Came for additions; yet their purposed trim Pleced not his grace, but were all graced by
him.

'So on the tip of his subduing tongue 120
All kind of arguments and question deep,
All replication prompt, and reason strong,
For his advantage still did wake and sleep:
To make the weeper laugh, the laughter weep,
He had the dialect and different skill,
Catching all passions in his craft of will:

'That he did in the general bosom reign
Of young, of old; and sexes both enchanted,
To dwell with him in thoughts, or to remain
In personal duty, following where he haunted:
Consents bewitch'd, ere he desire, have granted;
And dialogued for him what he would say,
Ask'd their own wills, and made their wills
obey.

'Many there were that did his picture get,
To serve their eyes, and in it put their mind;
Like fools that in th' imagination set
The goodly objects which abroad they find
Of lands and mansions, theirs in thought assign'd;
And labouring in moe pleasures to bestow them
Than the true gouty landlord which doth owe
them: 140

'So many have, that never touch'd his hand,
Sweetly supposed them mistresses of his heart.
My woeful self, that did in freedom stand,
And was my own fee-simple, not in part,
What with his art in youth, and youth in art,
Threw my affections in his charmed power,
Reserved the stalk and gave him all my flower.

'Yet did I not, as some my equals did,
Demand of him, nor being desired yielded;
Finding myself in honour so forbid, 150
With safest distance I mine honour shielded:
Experience for me many bulwarks builded
Of proofs new-bleeding, which remain'd the fall
Of this false jewel, and his amorous spoil.

But, ah, who ever shrunk'd by precedent
The destined ill she must herself assay!
Or forced examples, 'gainst her own content,
To put the by-past perils in her way!
Counsel may stop awhile what will not stay;
For when we rage, advice is often seen 160
By blunting us to make our wits more keen.

'Nor gives it satisfaction to our blood,
That we must curb it upon others' proof:
To be forbid the sweets that seem so good,
For fear of harms that preach in our behoof.
O appetite, from judgement stand aloof!
The one a palate hath that needs will taste,
Though Reason weep, and cry "It is thy last."

'For further I could say "This man's untrue,"
And knew the patterns of his foul beguiling;
Heard where his plants in others' orchards
grew,
Saw how deceits were gilded in his smiling; 171
Knew vows were ever brokers to deflating;
Thought characters and words merely but art,
And bastards of his foul adulterate heart.

'And long upon these terms I held my city,
Till thus he gan besiege me: "Gentle maid,
Have of my suffering youth some feeling pity,
And be not of my holy vows afraid:
That's to ye sworn to none was ever said; 180
For feasts of love I have been call'd unto,
Till now did ne'er invite, nor never woo.

"All my offences that abroad you see
Are errors of the blood, none of the mind;
Love made them not; with acture they may be,
Where neither party is nor true nor kind:
They sought their shame that so their shame
did find;
And so much less of shame in me remains,
By how much of me their reproach contains.

"Among the many that mine eyes have seen,
Not one whose flame my heart so much as warm'd, 191
Or my affection put to the smallest teen,
Or any of my pleasures ever charm'd:
Harm have I done to them, but ne'er was harm'd;
Kept hearts in liveries, but mine own was free,
And reign'd, commanding in my monarchy.

"Look here, what tributes wounded fancies sent me,
Of paled pearls and rubies red as blood;
Figuring that they their passions likewise lent
me
Of grief and blushes, aptly understood 200
In bloodless white and the encrimson'd mood;
Effects of terror and dear modesty,
Encamp'd in hearts, but fighting outwardly.

"And, lo, behold these talents of their hair,
With twisted metal amorously impleach'd,
I have received from many a several fair,
Their kind acceptance weepingly beseech'd,
With the annexions of fair gems enrich'd,
And deep-brain'd sonnets that did simplify
Each stone's dear nature, worth, and quality.

"The diamond,—why, 'twas beautiful and hard,

Whereto his invised properties did tend;
The deep-green emerald, in whose fresh regard
Weak sights their sickly radiance do amend;
The heaven-hued sapphire and the opal blend
With objects manifold: each several stone,
With wit well blazon'd, smiled or made some
moan.

"Lo, all these trophies of affections hot,
Of pensived and subdued desires the tender,
Nature hath charged me that I heard them not,
But yield them up where I myself must render,
That is, to you, my origin and end;
For these, of force, must your oblations be,
since I their altar, you enpatron me.

"O, then, advance of yours that phraseless
hand,
Whose white weighs down the airy scale of
praise;
Take all these smiles to your own command,
Hallow'd with sighs that burning lungs did raise;
What me your minister, for you obeys,
Works under you; and to your audit comes
Their distract parcels in combined sums.

"Lo, this device was sent me from a nun,
Or sister sanctified, of holiest note;
Which late her noble suit in court did shun,
Whose rarest havings made the blossoms dote
For she was sought by spirits of richest coat,
But kept cold distance, and did thence remove,
To spend her living in eternal love.

"But, O my sweet, what labour is't to leave
The thing we have not, mastering what noi strives,
† Playing the place which did no form receive,
Playing patient sports in unconstrained gyves;
She that her fame so to herself contrives,
The scars of battle 'scapeth by the flight,
And makes her absence valiant, not her might.

"O, pardon me, in that my boast is true:
The accident which brought me to her eye
Upon the moment did her force subdue,
And now she would the caged cloister fly:
Religious love put out Religion's eye:
Not to be tempted, would she be immured,
And now, to tempt, all liberty procured.

"How mighty then you are, O, hear me tell
The broken bosoms that to me belong
Have emptied all their fountains in my well,
And mine I pour your ocean all among:
I strong o'er them, and you o'er me being
strong,
Must for your victory us all congest,
As compound love to physic your cold breast.

"My parts had power to charm a sacred nun,
Who, disciplined, ay, dieted in grace,

All vows and consecrations giving place:
O most potential love! vow, bond, nor space,

in thee hath neither still knot, nor confine,
or thou art all, and all else are thine.

"When thou impress't, what are precepts
worth
If stale example? When thou wilt inflame,
How coldly those impediments stand forth
If wealth, of filial fear, law, kindred, fame!
Love's arms are peace, 'gainst rule, 'gainst sense, 'gainst shame,
And sweetens, in the suffering pangs it bears,
The aloes of all forces, shocks, and fears.

"Now all these hearts that do on mine depend,
Feeling it break, with bleeding groans they pine;
And supplicant their sighs to you extend,
To leave the battery that you make 'gainst
mine,
Lending soft audience to my sweet design,
And credent soul to that strong-bonded oath
That shall prefer and undertake my troth."

This said, his watery eyes he did dismount,
Whose sights till then were level'd on my face;
Each cheek a river running from a fount
With brinish current downward flow'd apace;
O, how the channel to the stream gave grace!
Who glazed with crystal gate the glowing roses
That flame through water which their hue encloses.

"O father, what a hell of witchcraft lies
In the small orb of one particular tear!
But with the inundation of the eyes
What rocky heart to water will not wear?
What breast so cold that is not warmed here!
O cleft effect! cold modesty, hot wrath,
Both fire from hence and chill extirpation hath.

"For, lo, his passion, but an art of craft,
Even there resolved my reason into tears;
There my white stole of chastity I daft'd,
Shook off my sober guards and civil fears;
Appear to him, as he to me appears,
All melting; though our drops this difference bore,
His poison'd me, and mine did him restore.

"In him a plenitude of subtle matter,
Applied to cautels, all strange forms receives,
Of burning blazes, or of weeping water,
Or swooning paleness; and he takes and leaves,
In either's aptness, as it best deceives,
To blush at speeches rank, to weep at woes,
Or to turn white and swoon at tragic shows:

"That not a heart which in his level came
Could 'scape the hail of his all-hurling aim,
Showing fair nature is both kind and tame;
And, val'd in them, did win whom he would malm:
Against the thing he sought he would exclaim;
When he most burn'd in heart-whet'd luxury,
He preach'd pure maid, and painted cold
chastity:

'Thus merely with the garment of a Grace.
The naked and concealed find its cover'd
That th' unexperient gave the tempter place,
Which, like a cherubin above them hover'd.

Who, young and simple, would not be so lower'd!

Ay me! I fell; and yet do question make
What I should do again for such a sake.

'O, that infected moisture of his eye,
O, that false fire which in his cheek so glow'd,
O, that forced thunder from his heart did fly,

O, that sad breath his sorry lungs bestow'd

O, all that borrow'd motion seeming owed,
Would yet again betray the fore-betray'd,
And new pervert a reconciled maid!

THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM

WHEN my love swears that she is made of truth,

I do believe her, though I know she lies,
That she might think me some untutor'd youth,
Unskilful in the world's false forgeries.
Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
Although I know my years be past the best,
I smiling credit her false-speaking tongue,
Outfacing faults in love with love's ill rest.
But wherefore says my love that she is young?
And wherefore say not I that I am old?
(O, love's best habit is a soothing tongue,
And age, in love, loves not to have years told.
Therefore I'll lie with love, and love with me,
Since that our faults in love thus smother'd be.

II.

Two loves I have, of comfort and despair,
That like two spirits do suggest me still;
My better angel is a man right fair,
My worser spirit a woman colour'd ill.
To win me soon to hell, my female evil
Tempteth my better angel from my side,
And would corrupt my saint to be a devil,
Wooing his purity with her fair pride,
And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend,
Suspect I may, yet not directly tell:
For being both to me, both to each friend,
I guess one angel in another's hell:
The truth I shall not know, but live in
doubt,
Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

III.

Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye,
Gainst whom the world could not hold argu-
ment,
Persuade my heart to this false perjury
Vows for thee broke deserve not punishment.
A woman I forswore; but I will prove,
Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee:
My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love;
Thy grace being gain'd cures all diagraze in me.
My vow was breath, and breath a vapour is;
Then, thou fair sun, that on this earth doth shine,
Exhale this vapour vow; in thee it is:
If broken, then it is no fault of mine.
If by me broke, what fool is not so wise
To break an oath, to win a paradise!

IV.

Sweet Cytherea, sitting by a brook
With young Adonis, lovely, fresh, and green,
Did count the lad with many a lovely look:
Such looks as none could look but heavenly queens.

He told him stories to delight his ear;
He show'd him favours to allure his eye;
To win his heart, she touch'd him here and there,—

'Touches so soft still conquer chastity.
But whether unripe years did want something, Or he refused to take her figured proof.
The tender nibbler would not touch the bait,
But smile and jest at every gentle offer.
Then fell she on her back, fair queen, and
toward;

He rose and ran away; ah, fool the froward!

V.

f love make me forsworn, how shall I swear
to love!
O never faith could hold, if not to beauty vow'd:
Though to myself forsworn, to thee I'll constant prove;
Those thoughts, to me like oaks, to thee like osiers bow'd.
Study his bias leaves, and makes his book thine
eyes,
Where all those pleasures live that art can comprehend.
If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall suffice;
Well learned is that tongue that well can thee commend;
All ignorant that soul that sees thee without wonder;
Which is to me some praise, that I thy parts admire:
Thine eye Jove's lightning seems, thy voice his dreadful thunder,
Which, not to anger bent, is music and sweet
fire.
Celestial as thou art, O do not love that
wrong,
To sing heaven's praise with such an earthly
tongue.

Scarce had the sun dried up the dewy roses,
And scarce the herd gone to the hedge, the
shade,

When Cytherea, all in love forlorn,
A longing tarrance for Adonis made.
Under an oler growing by a brook
A brook where Adon used to cool.
Hot was the day; she better than
For his approach, that often there Ancient he comes, and throws his
And stood stark naked on the brim;

The sun look'd on the world with Yet not so wisely as the queen on
He smiling her, bow'd in, who
O Jove, quench this, why was!

Fair is my love, but not so fair as fickle;
Mild as a dove, but neither true nor trusty;
Brighter than glass, and yet, as glass is, brittle;
Softer than wax, and yet, as iron, rusty:
A lily pale, with damask dye to grace her,
None fairer, nor none fairer to deface her. 90

Her lips to mine how often hath she joined,
Between each kiss her oaths of true love
swearing!

How many tales to please me hath she coined,
Dreading my love, the loss thereof still fearing!
Yet in the midst of all her pure protestings,
Her faith, her oaths, her tears, and all were jestings.

She burn'd with love, as straw with fire
sameth;
She burn'd out love, as soon as straw out-
burneth;
She framed the love, and yet she foil'd the framing;
She bade love last, and yet she fell a-turning.
Was this a lover, or a lecher whether? 101
Bad in the best, though excellent in neither.

If music and sweet poetry agree,
As they must needs, the sister and the brother,
Then must the love be great 'twixt thee and
me,

Because thou lovest the one, and I the other.
Dowland to thee is dear, whose heavenly touch
Upon the lute doth ravish human sense;
Sponsor to me, whose deep conceit is such
As, passing all conceit, needs no defence. 110
Thou lovest to hear the sweet melodious sound
That Phoebus' lute, the queen of music, makes;
And I in deep delight am chiefly drown'd
Wheneas himself to singing he betakes.

One god is god of both, as poets feign;
One knight loves both, and both in thee
remain.

Fair was the morn when the fair queen of love,

Paler for sorrow than her milk-white dove,
For Adon's sake, a youngster proud and wild;
Her stand she takes upon a steep-up hill: 121
anon Adonis comes with horn and hounds;
She, silly queen, with more than love's good
will.

Forbade the boy he should not pass those grounds:

'Once,' quoth she, 'did I see a fair sweet youth
— in these brakes deep-wounded with a

Deep in the thigh, a spectacle of ruth!
See, in my thigh,' quoth she, 'here was the
wound.'

She showed him: he saw more wounds than
one.

And blushing fled, and left her all alone. 130

Sweet rose, fair flower, untimely pluck'd, soon vaded.

Pluck'd in the bud, and 1 in the spring!
Bright orient pearl, alack, 2 timely shaded!
Fair creature, kill'd too 3 by death's sharp sting!

Like a green plum that hangs upon a tree,
And falls, through winter's store the fall
should be.

I weep for thee, and yet no cause I have;
For why thou left'st me nothing in thy will:
And yet thou left'st me more than I did crave;
For why I craved nothing of thee still: 140
O yes, dear friend, I pardon crave of thee,
Thy discontent thou didst bequeath to me.

XI.

Venus, with young Adonis sitting by her
Under a myrtle shade, began to woo him:
She told the youngling how god Mars did try
her,

And as he fell to her, so fell she to him.
'Even thus,' quoth she, 'the warlike god embraced me,
And then she clipp'd Adonis in her arms;
'Even thus,' quoth she, 'the warlike god un-laced me,' 149

As if the boy should use like loving charms;
'Even thus,' quoth she, 'he seized on my lips;
And with her lips on his did act the seizure;
And as she fetched breath, away he skips,
And would not take her meaning nor her
pleasure.

Ah, that I had my lady at this bay,
To kiss and clip me till I run away!

XII.

Crabbed age and youth cannot live together:
Youth is full of pleasance, age is full of care;
Youth like summer morn, age like winter weather;

Youth like summer brave, age like winter bare.
Youth is full of sport, age's breath is short; 161
Youth is nimble, age is lame;
Youth is hot and bold, age is weak and cold;
Youth is wild, and age is tame.

Age, I do abhor thee; youth, I do adore thee;
O, my love, my love is young!
Age, I do defy thee: O, sweet shepherd, his
thee,
For methinks thou stay'st too long.

XIII.

Beauty is but a vain and doubtful good;
A shining glass that vadeth suddenly; 170
A flower that dies when first it gets to bud;
A brittle glass that's broken presently:
A doubtful good, a glass, a glass, a flower,
Lost, vaded, broken, dead within an hour.

And as goods lost are sold or never found,
As vaded glass no rubbing will refresh,
As flowers dead lie wither'd on the ground,
As broken glass no cement can redress,
So beauty blemish'd once is for ever lost, 179
In spite of physic, painting, pain and cost.

XIV.

Good night, good rest. Ah, neither be my share :
 She bade good night that kept my rest away ;
 And daff'd me to a cabin hang'd with care,
 To descant on the doubts of my decay.
 'Farewell,' quoth she, 'and come again to-morrow.'
 Fare well I could not, for I suppd with sorrow.

Yet at my parting sweetly did she smile,
 In scorn or friendship, nill I construe whether :
 'T may be, she joy'd to jest at my exile, ¹⁸⁹
 'T may be, again to make me wander thither :
 'Wander,' a word for shadows like myself,
 As take the pain, but cannot pluck the pelf.

XV.

Lord, how mine eyes throw gazes to the east !
 My heart doth charge the watch ; the morning ^{rise}
 Doth cite each moving sense from idle rest.
 Not daring trust the office of mine eyes,

While Philomela sits and sings, I sit and mark,
 And wish her lays were tuned like the lark ;

For she doth welcome daylight with her ditty,
 And drives away dark diurnal-dreaming night :
 The night so pack'd, I post unto my pretty ; ²⁰¹
 Heart hath his hope, and eyes their wished sight ;

Sorrow changed to solace, solace mix'd with sorrow ;
 For why, she sigh'd and bade me come to-morrow.

Were I with her, the night would post too soon ;
 But now are minutes added to the hours ;
 To spite me now, each minute seems a noon ;
 Yet not for me, shine sun to succour flowers !
 Pack night, peep day ; good day, of night ^{now} borrow :
 Short, night, to-night, and length thyself to-morrow. ²¹⁰

SONNETS TO SUNDRY NOTES OF MUSIC

[XVI.]

It was a lording's daughter, the fairest one of three,
 That liked of her master as well as well might be,
 Till looking on an Englishman, the fair'st that eye could see,
 Her fancy fell a-turning.
 Long was the combat doubtful that love with love did fight,
 To leave the master loveless, or kill the gallant knight :
 To put in practice either, alas, it was a spite
 Unto the silly damsel !
 But one must be refused ; more mickle was the pain
 That nothing could be used to turn them both to gain, ²²⁰
 For of the two the trusty knight was wounded with disdain :
 Alas, she could not help it !
 Thus art with arms contending was victor of the day,
 Which by a gift of learning did bear the maid away :
 Then, lullaby, the learned man hath got the lady gay ;
 For now my song is ended.

XVII.

On a day, alack the day !
 Love, whose month was ever May,
 Spied a blossom passing fair,
 Playing in the wanton air :
 Through the velvet leaves the wind,
 All unseen, gain passage find ;

230

That the lover, sick to death,
 Wish'd himself the heaven's breath,
 'Air,' quoth he, 'thy cheeks may blow ;
 Air, would I might triumph so !
 But, alas ! my hand hath sworn Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn :
 Vow, alack ! for youth unmeet :
 Youth, so apt to pluck a sweet. ²⁴⁰
 Thou for whom Jove would swear
 Juno but an Ethiop were ;
 And deny himself for Jove,
 Turning mortal for thy love.'

[XVIII.]

My flocks feed not,
 My ewes breed not,
 My rams speed not,
 All is amiss :
 Love's denying,
 Faith's defying, ²⁵⁰
 Heart's renying,
 Causer of this.
 All my merry jigs are quite forgot,
 All my lady's love is lost, God wot ;
 Where her faith was firmly fix'd in love,
 There a nay is placed without remove.
 One silly cross
 Wrought all my loss ;
 O frowning Fortune, cursed, fickle dame !
 For now I see ²⁶⁰
 Inconstancy
 More in women than in men remain.

In black mourn I,
 All fears scorn I,
 Love hath forlorn me,
 Living in thrall :

Heart is bleeding,
 All help needing,
 O cruel speeding,
 Fraughted with gall. 270
 My shepherd's pipe can sound no deal;
 My wether's bell rings doleful knell;
 My curtail dog, that wont to have play'd,
 Plays not at all, but seems afraid;
 My sighs so deep
 Procure to weep,
 In howling wise, to see my doleful plight.
 How sighs resound
 Through heartless ground,
 Like a thousand vanquish'd men in 280 bloody fight!

Clear wells spring not,
 Sweet birds sing not,
 Green plants bring not
 Forth their dye;
 Herds stand weeping,
 Flocks all sleeping,
 Nymphs back peeping
 Fearfully:
 All our pleasure known to us poor swains,
 All our merry meetings on the plains, 290
 All our evening sport from us is fled,
 All our love is lost, for Love is dead.
 Farewell, sweet lass,
 Thy like ne'er was
 For a sweet content, the cause of all my moan:

Poor Corydon
 Must live alone;
 Other help for him I see that there is none.

XIX.

When as thine eye hath chose the dame,
 And stall'd the deer that thou shouldst strike,
 Let reason rule things worthy blame, 301
 † As well as fancy partial might:
 Take counsel of some wiser head,
 Neither too young nor yet unwed.

And when thou comest thy tale to tell,
 Smooth not thy tongue with filed talk,
 Lest she some subtle practice blame,—
 A cripple soon can find a halt;—
 But plainly say thou lovest her well,
 And set thy person forth to sell. 310

What though her frowning brows be bent,
 Her cloudy looks will calm ere night:
 And then too late she will repent
 That thus dissembled her delight;
 And twice desire, ere it be day,
 That which with scorn she put away.

What though she strive to try her strength,
 And bari and brawl, and say thee nay,
 Her feeble force will yield at length,
 When craft hath taught her thus to say, 320
 'Had women been so strong as men,
 In faith, you had not had it then.'

And to her will frame all thy ways;
 Spare not to spend, and chiefly there

Where thy desert may merit praise,
 By ringing in thy lady's ear:
 The strongest castle, tower, and town,
 The golden bullet beats it down.

Serve always with assured trust,
 And in thy suit be humble true; 330
 Unless thy lady prove unjust:
 Press never thou to choose anew:
 When time shall serve, be thou not slack
 To proffer, though she put thee back.

The wiles and guiles that women work,
 Dissembled with an outward show,
 The tricks and toys that in them lurk,
 The cock that treads them shall not know.
 Have you not heard it said fall oft,
 A woman's nay doth stand for nought! 340

† Think women still to strive with men,
 To sin and never for to saint:
 There is no heaven, by holy then,
 When time with age doth them attain.
 Were kisses all the joys in bed,
 One woman would another wed.

But, soft! enough, too much, I fear;
 Lest that my mistress hear my song,
 She will not stick to round me if the ear,
 To teach my tongue to be so long; 350
 Yet will she blush, here be it said,
 To hear her secrets so bewray'd.

[XX.]

Live with me, and be my love,
 And we will all the pleasures prove
 That hills and valleys, dales and fields,
 And all the craggy mountains yield.

There will we sit upon the rocks,
 And see the shepherds feed their flocks,
 By shallow rivers, by whose falls
 Melodious birds sing madrigals. 360

There will I make thee a bed of roses,
 With a thousand fragrant posies,
 A cap of flowers, and a kirtle
 Embroider'd all with leaves of myrtle.

A belt of straw and ivy buds,
 With coral clasps and amber studs;
 And if these pleasures may thee move,
 Then live with me and be my love.

LOVE'S ANSWER.

If that the world and love were young,
 And truth in every shepherd's tongue, 370
 These pretty pleasures might me move
 To live with thee and be thy love.

[XXI.]

As it fell upon a day
 In the merry month of May,
 Sitting in a pleasant shade
 Which a grove of myrtles made,
 Beasts did leap, and birds did sing,
 Trees did grow, and plants did spring;

Every thing did banish moan,
 Save the nightingale alone : 380
 She, poor bird, as all forlorn,
 Lean'd her breast up-hill a thorn,
 And there sung the dolefull'st ditty,
 That to hear it was great pity :
 'Fie, fie, fie,' now would she cry ;
 'Tereu, tereu !' by and by ;
 That to hear her so complain,
 Scarce I could from tears refrain ;
 For her griefs, so lively shown,
 Made me think upon mine own. 390
 Ah, thought I, thou mourn'st in vain !
 None takes pity on thy pain :
 Senseless trees they cannot hear thee ;
 Ruthless beasts they will not cheer thee :
 King Pandion he is dead ;
 All thy friends are lapp'd in lead ;
 All thy fellow birds do sing,
 Careless of thy sorrowing.
 Even so, poor bird, like thee,
 None alive will pity me. 400
 Whilst as fickle Fortune smiled,
 Thou and I were both beguiled.
 Every one that flatters thee
 Is no friend in misery.

Words are easy, like the wind ;
 Faithful friends are hard to find :
 Every man will be thy friend
 Whilst thou hast wherewith to spend ;
 But if store of crowns be scant,
 No man will supply thy want. 410
 If that one be prodigal,
 Bountiful they will him call,
 And with such-like flattering,
 'Fity but he were a king ;'
 If he be addict to vice,
 Quickly him they will entice ;
 If to women he be bent,
 They have at commandement :
 But if Fortune once do frown,
 Then farewell his great renown ;
 They that fawn'd on him before
 Use his company no more.
 He that is thy friend indeed,
 He will help thee in thy need :
 If thou sorrow, he will weep ;
 If thou wake, he cannot sleep ;
 Thus of every grief in heart
 He with thee doth bear a part.
 These are certain signs to know
 Faithful friend from flattering foe,

THE PHOENIX AND THE TURTLE

Let the bird of loudest lay,
On the sole Arabian tree,
Herald sad and trumpet be,
To whose sound chaste wings obey.

But thou shrieking harbinger,
Foul precursor of the fiend,
Augur of the fever's end,
To this troop come thou not near!

From this session interdict
Every fowl of tyrant wing,
Save the eagle, feather'd king:
Keep the obsequy so strict.

Let the priest in surplice white,
That defunctive music can,
Be the death-divining swan,
Lest the requiem lack his right.

And thou treble-dated crow,
That thy sable gender makest
With the breath thou givest and takest,
'Mongst our mourners shalt thou go.

Here the anthem doth commence:
Love and constancy is dead;
Phoenix and the turtle fled
In a mutual flame from hence.

So they loved, as love in twain
Had the essence but in one;
Two distincts, division none:
Number there in love was slain.

Hearts remote, yet not asunder;
Distance, and no space was seen
'Twixt the turtle and his queen:
But in them it were a wonder.

So between them love did shine,
That the turtle saw his right
Flaming in the phoenix' sight
Either was the other's mine.

Property was thus appall'd,
That the self was not the same;
Single nature's double name
Neither two nor one was call'd.

Reason, in itself confounded,
Saw division grow together,
To themselves yet either neither,
Simple were so well compounded,

That it cried, How true a twain
Seemeth this concordant one!
Love hath reason, reason none,
If what parts can so remain.

Whereupon it made this threne
To the phoenix and the dove,
Co-supremes and stars of love,
As chorus to their tragic scene.

Beauty, truth, and rarity,
Grace in all simplicity,
Here enclosed in cinders lie.

Death is now the phoenix' nest;
And the turtle's loyal breast
To eternity doth rest,

Leaving no posterity:
'Twas not their infirmity,
It was married chastity.

Truth may seem, but cannot be:
Beauty brag, but 'tis not she;
Truth and beauty buried be.

To this urn let those repair
That are either true or fair;
For these dead birds sigh a prayer.
